Dewey Gaining on Early Truman Lead; Late Returns Will Decide Presidency; Democrats Winning House and Senate

Democrats Make Solid Sweep of Virginia

Senate Contest, All House Races Won With Vote of Around 390,000

By Murrey Marder and Richard Morris
Post Reporters

President Truman upset the political dopesters, pollsters, and Thomas E. Dewey in Virginia, to walk off with the Old Dominion's 11 electoral votes.

Democrats made a solid sweep of Virginia, taking the Senate race and all House contests, in what was likely to prove a record vote, topping 390,000.

Despite preelection predictions that States' Rights candidate J. Strom Thurmond would cut into Truman's vote enough to throw the State Republican, President Truman won by a large margin over Dewey with most of Virginia's votes unofficially tabulated.

Returns from 1619 of the State's 1755 precincts showed: Truman, 187,668; Dewey, 160,723; Thurmond, 40,030; Wallace, 1806.

Winning All House Seats

Senator Robertson stormed over his Republican opponent in Virginia's Senate race. Democrats carried six of the seven contested House seats with ease, and won a close race in the Ninth District.

In the Ninth, Democrats led 32,736 to 29,981, with 233 of 248 precincts reported.

Regular Democratic organization leaders in Virginia were technically "neutral" in the Presidential contest, although some actually hoped for a Republican victory to "chastise" President Truman. Halifax County, home territory of Gov. William M. Tuck, gave Thurmond a substantial lead over Truman.

In Richmond, Republicans hopeful of repeating their 1928 victory when Herbert Hoover carried Virginia into the Republican column—and Republicans won House contests in the Second, Seventh and Ninth Districts—had optimistically planned a "victory" celebration. Early today they sat glumly atop the roof garden of the John Marshall Hotel tabulating disappointing votes.

Truman's winning margin was not as great as in the 1944 vote of 242,276 for Roosevelt and 145,243 for Dewey.

In the Senate race, Senator Willis Robertson, 61, elected in 1946 to fill the unexpired term of the late Senator Carter Glass, and now seeking his first full term, swamped Robert H. Woods, 53, Republican State Party chairman.

Woods unsuccessfully opposed Robertson for the same Senate seat in 1946, when Robertson won by 169,680 to 72,253.

In addition to Robertson and Woods in the current Senate race are Mrs. Virginia F. Durr of Alexandria, Progressive candidate; Clarke T. Robb, Socialist of Herndon, and Howard H. Carwile, Richmond, independent.

Returns from 1619 of 1775 precincts: Robertson, 233,633; Woods, 110,057.

Republicans had hoped to repeat their 1928 victory when Herbert Hoover carried the State and Republicans won three House seats—in the Second, Seventh and Ninth Districts.

In the First District, Representative Schuyler Otis Bland (D.), 76, of Newport News, seeking his seventeenth House term, was op-

Montgomery Votes Heavily For Charter

By Roger B. Farquhar
Post Reporter

By more than a 4000-vote majority, Montgomery County yesterday voted in a county manager-charter government.

The vote, all 51 county precincts reporting, was unofficially 17,809 for the charter, 13,752 against.

Returns showed the charter carried most of the country's urban precincts, winning sufficient majorities in these to offset a generally adverse rural vote.

Bethesda, Chevy Chase and Silver Spring cast especially heavy pro-charter votes.

The outcome, climaxing a 10-year fight, made Montgomery the first of Maryland's 23 counties to adopt "home rule" under a 1915 amendment to the Maryland State Constitution.

Col. Normal B. Ames, president of the Montgomery Charter Committee, which directed the campaign, hailed the victory as giving Montgomery "a very bright future."

The charter, barring unexpected legal blocks, will become effective December 2, the present Montgomery commissioners serving as county councilmen until the council provided for in the charter can be elected.

Under charter provisions, the council election will be held January 6, the seven elected council members taking office the following Monday, January 10.

Ames called on all county factions to join in making the charter work, and said his committee now would concentrate on selling the charter to the rural areas where it suffered the adverse vote.

Yesterday's charter vote was the

School Bond Issue Voted By Arlington

Board Election Date Revision Is Defeated By Margin of 5,194

By Donald Olesen
Post Reporter

Arlington's $4,750,000 school bond issue was approved last night by a comfortable margin of 1,498 votes while the proposed change in the date for school board elections was soundly defeated by a margin of 5,194.

Dr. Barnard Joy, chairman of the Arlington School Board, expressed gratification at the support give the bond-floating plan.

In thanking the voters he said, in part: "I promise to execise the greatest economy in the use of these funds."

Unofficial returns from all of the county's 24 precincts showed these totals on the question of the school bond issue:

For school bonds, 10,754.
Against school bonds, 9256.

On the issue of changing the date of school board elections from November to May in odd-numbered years, with all precincts reporting:

For May elections, 7365.
Against the change, 12,559.

The $4,750,000 bond issue question grew out of an Arlington School Board plea for more classrooms to lick a present-and-future "Critical" schoolroom shortage.

Dewey Takes 6455 Lead In Maryland

Victory Appears Assured With Only 93 Precincts of 1347 to Report

BULLETIN

At 3:15 a. m., 1280 out of 1347 precincts had reported, giving Dewey 278,523 votes, and Truman, 270,751.

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 3 (Wednesday). — Thomas E. Dewey appeared to have nosed out Harry S. Truman early this morning in one of the tightest presidential races in Maryland's history.

Dewey's lead was 6455 votes at 3 a. m.

Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party candidate, may have provided just about the margin of victory for the GOP standard bearer.

The vote with 1254 of 1347 precincts reporting was as follows:

Truman—265,674.
Wallace—9062.

Votes to the two other minor party candidates were: Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, States Rights—2357; Norman Thomas, Socialist—2309.

New York's Governor pushed into the lead half an hour after midnight for the first time. At that time the Republican candidate was more than 6000 out front.

But despite the fact that Dewey was an overwhelming favorite in the rural areas, Truman made a brief comeback, cutting down the lead to 700 votes by 1 a. m.

Republicans Claim State

Shortly after midnight, with 999 of the Free State's 1347 precincts reporting, Dewey had reduced Truman's early margin of over 20,000 down to less than 4000. The tally at this time was Truman 249,157, Dewey, 215,331.

There were also 8542 votes for Henry Wallace, Progressive party candidate, and 2166 for Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, State's Right Democrat.

At midnight, State GOP leaders were already claiming Maryland's eight electoral votes on the strength of the still-to-be-counted rural vote, expected by most observers to go Republican.

Jacob France, GOP national committeeman for the State, claimed Maryland for Dewey by some 12,000 votes.

Five of Maryland's six members of the House of Representatives were reelected. The sixth incumbent had been beaten in the primaries.

The winners and the voting are as follows:

First District — Representative Edward T. Miller, Republican. With 199 out of 200 polling places reporting, S. Scott Beck, Democrat, conceded. The count at the time was Miller, 27,503; Beck, 25,346.

Second District—State Senator William P. Bolton, Democrat. His rival, A. Earl Shipley, Republican, conceded. At this time, 371 out of 458 precincts had reported as follows: Bolton, 77,434; Shipley, 61,772. A third candidate, Michael J. Clifford, Progressive, had 3253.

Third District — Representative

Ewing Bans Popular Method Of Processing Bread Flour

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing yesterday served notice on the Nation's breadmakers to stop bleaching and aging flour with nitrogen trichloride, their most common method.

The order followed recent hearings conducted by the Food and Drug Administration on widespread evidence that bread baked from the processed flour caused a form of epilepsy in dogs and might be harmful to humans. It was testified then that more than half the flour used in breadmaking was being aged by the animal-toxic gas.

In a tentative order published in yesterday's Federal Register, the administrator set next August 1 as the deadline for breadmills to convert their processing machinery to other bleaching agents. The same order permits such conversion to another gas, chlorine dioxide, found harmless to animals in exhaustive testings.

Most vitally affected by yesterday's order is the Wallace & Tiernan Co. of Newark, N. J., which invented and commercialized the flour-gassing process under the name "Agene," in 1921. Company representatives had sought 18 months grace for the huge change-over task.

Freshly milled, or "green," flour does not bake up into those big,

Truman Carries Buffalo; Beats Roosevelt Edge

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP).—President Truman carried Buffalo today by a greater margin than the late President Roosevelt ever had in this second largest city in the State.

Complete unofficial returns from the city's 441 election districts gave Truman 142,877, Dewey 102,671 and Wallace 6286. The President's total was seven more than Roosevelt's 1936 margin.

Illinois All Democratic, Chairman Says

Chicago, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—At 10 p. m. (CST) Jacob M. Arvey, Cook County Democratic chairman, claimed that the "entire Democratic ticket from top to bottom, including President Truman, is elected in Illinois."

A little later, however, he said that he was "not taking congratulations until the last figures are in, but you can wish me luck." He said the vote figures were "unbelievable."

Sen. Brooks, Gov. Green Lose in Illinois

Chicago, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—The Chicago Tribune said early today that Senator C. Wayland Brooks and Gov. Dwight H. Green, Republican incumbents supported by the newspaper, would be defeated.

Colorado Democrat Wins For Senate

Denver, Nov. 2 (AP).—Will F. Nicholson, Republican nominee for United States Senator from Colorado, tonight conceded the reelection of Ed C. Johnson, Democrat.

Gov. Green Concedes Defeat by Stevenson

Chicago, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Gov. Dwight H. Green, Republican, early today conceded victory to Democrat Adlai Stevenson in the Illinois gubernatorial election.

Chester Bowles' Election Is Conceded

Divorce Law Advocates Winning in S. Carolina

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 3 (U.P.).—South Carolina apparently will join the other 47 States in permitting divorces.

In a referendum on a constitutional amendment to abrogate the old antidivorce law, 981 out of 1296 precincts showed 33,508 votes for the amendment to 23,231 against.

McGrath Says Huge Vote Means Truman Victory

New York, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath tonight predicted that a total national vote of more than 54 million would carry President Truman to victory. He included Illinois, Michigan and New York in the Democratic column.

In a statement issued just before midnight, McGrath said the enormous turnout of voters was responsible for Mr. Truman's remarkable showing.

Governor Herbert Concedes Defeat in Ohio

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Gov. Thomas J. Herbert, Republican incumbent, conceded his defeat to Frank J. Lausche, shortly after 1:15 a. m. today on the basis of returns from yesterday's election.

Bradford Concedes Governorship to Dever

Boston, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Republican Gov. Robert F. Bradford of Massachusetts tonight conceded the election of his Democratic gubernatorial opponent, Paul A. Dever.

Texas Paper Reports Democratic Victory

Dallas, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Dallas Morning News said tonight President Truman and Democratic Senatorial Candidate Lyndon Johnson "rode to victory in Texas today on a wave of Democratic votes."

The News, which supported Republican Presidential Candidate Tom Dewey, and Texas Republican Senatorial Candidate Jack Porter, said it was probable Truman would win Texas by a majority—more votes than the opposition combined.

It said there was "no hope" for Porter's candidacy.

Dewey Moves Into Lead in California

San Francisco, Nov. 2 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey moved into a lead of 7163 votes over President Truman in California in returns tabulated at 9:15 p. m. (PDT). Incomplete returns from 1755 precincts of 16,802 gave Dewey 118,462, Truman 111,299 and Wallace 12,625.

Truman Far in Front in North Carolina

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Returns from 243 of North Carolina's 1959 precincts give for President:

Truman, 61,709; Dewey, 17,213; Wallace, 380; Thurmond, 7047.

Governor (42 precincts)—Scott, D., 8200; Pritchard, R., 1328; Price, 12.

Frisbie, Potter Neck-and Neck in Arlington

Alfred E. Frisbie (D), incumbent member of the Arlington County Board and I. Lee Potter (Ind.), Arlington builder were running a tight race for Frisbie's board seat at 3 a. m. today. Frisbie went into the last precinct, Park Lane, with a scant 60-vote margin but unofficial returns in that 1100-vote precinct gave Potter "a slight margin" there. See earlier story on Page 8.

Democratic Ticket Sweeps Rhode Island

Providence, R. I., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Republican State Chairman Thomas Greene conceded tonight that the entire Democratic ticket had swept Rhode Island.

Dewey Takes Maine's Five Electoral Votes

Portland, Me., Nov. 2 (AP).—Maine's five electoral votes went to Thomas E. Dewey in an unofficial tabulation of today's presidential balloting.

The Republican Governor of New York polled 123,456 votes against 94,658 for Truman in 492 of the State's 622 precincts. Democratic State Chairman James A. Morang conceded the State to Dewey.

Henry Wallace got 1577 votes.

Republicans May Lose 12 Seats in Upper House

BULLETIN

Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R.) swung narrowly back into the lead in his zig zag race with Bert H. Miller (D.) in Idaho at 3:15 a. m. In New Jersey another Republican, Robert C. Hendrickson (R.) recovered a slight lead over Archibald S. Alexander (D.).

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

It looks like a Democratic Senate by a comfortable majority.

At an early hour today, Democratic Senate candidates were leading in all 13 of the so-called "doubtful" States and in two GOP States never listed as uncertain—Delaware and New Jersey.

In 12 of these, if early returns are borne out, Democrats will pick up Republican seats.

In none of the six States outside the Deep South where a Democratic seat was at issue could Republicans show an offset at 2 a. m. this morning.

If this meant anything, it meant the Democrats have wiped out the present 51-to-45 GOP margin of control, and are in a fair way to establish a much more convincing Senate majority themselves.

It meant that Gov. Thomas E. Dewey if elected himself would have a Democratic Senate on his hands, wielding veto power over policy making and even patronage appointments and with full treaty-ratifying power. It would even have the last say on appropriations.

The present Senate party division is 51 to 45, with Republicans in the saddle. Democrats need only a four-seat gain to take over control. Any pick-up over six would put them more firmly in the Senate saddle than Republicans have been for two years.

Apparently completely upset was all the "dope" on a close or tied Senate.

And in Delaware and New Jersey, where Republican Senate candidates were never believed in serious jeopardy, Democrats grabbed a narrow lead.

Thus, early today J. Allen Frear (D) was leading Senator C. Douglas Buck (R) in Delaware and Archibald S. Alexander (D) nosed ahead of Robert C. Hendrickson (R) in New Jersey.

Democratic Senate candidates were elected in Oklahoma and Colorado and Tennessee and were leading in these other key States—Iowa, Kentucky, Minnesota, Montana, New Mexico, Illinois, West Virginia, Wyoming and Texas.

Here's how these States looked at 3 a. m., with returns inconclusive in many cases:

Oklahoma—Former Gov. Robert S. Kerr (D) elected over Representative Ross Rizley (R). This seat was formerly held by Republican Senator Ed Moore.

West Virginia—Former Senator Matthew M. Neely (D) had apparently safe lead over Senator Chapman Revercomb (R), author of the allegedly anti-democratic displaced persons bill. Governor Dewey refused to go to Revercomb's aid.

Iowa—Former Senator Guy M. Gillette (D) claimed election over Senator George A. Wilson (R).

Colorado—Senator Edward C. Johnson (D) elected over Will F. Nicholson (R).

Illinois—Paul Douglas (D), a long

38 Majority Assured in Lower Body

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A smashing Democratic victory for control of the House of Representatives in the Eightieth Congress was assured last night as the Democrats seized at least a 38-vote gain in an upset that staggered top politicians of their own party.

There was every indication at 2:45 this morning that the size of the Democratic lead over the GOP was steadily increasing.

The congressional victory for the Democrats in the face of the probable election of GOP Presidential Candidate Thomas E. Dewey was regarded in Washington as a stinging rebuke to House and Senate Republican leadership of the Eightieth Congress.

Democratic politicians were quick to point out that apparently the voters had slapped down House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., and Senate Leader Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) and other GOP stalwarts for the failure of the Eightieth Congress to solve inflation, housing, education and similar problems closely affecting the lives of citizens.

Late returns from California appeared to be adding still more to the astounding gains of the party of Jefferson and Jackson.

In California's Ninth District (Fresno), Democratic Candidate Cecil F. White was leading veteran GOP Representative Bertrand W. Gearhart.

In California's Twenty-third District, Democrat Clinton D. McKinnon was forging steadily ahead of Charles K. Fletcher, Republican incumbent.

Incumbent Republican Willis W. Bradley was trailing behind Demo-

Election Held Great Feat For Truman

Never-Say-Die Fight Confounded Pollsters, Routed Foes on Hill

By J. R. Wiggins
Post Reporter

Harry S. Truman emerged from Tuesday's election with one of the greatest personal victories in American political history, on the basis of returns that left the final outcome of the election still in doubt.

The fighting finish of the commander of Battery "B" turned a predicted rout into a close fight. The incoming returns swung from "win" to "lose" to "draw" and back like a shuttlecock traversing a marimba.

Not since Grover Cleveland rebounded from defeat to pound a high-tariff Congress and luckless President Harrison over the head with the McKinley tariff has an American President waged such a fight. With all the odds against him, the spunky Missourian took to the hustings and hurled his imprecations at the Eightieth Congress and his dignified opponent like a noisy street urchin crying a scandal sheet on a Bowery corner. It wasn't exactly a dignified campaign, but Mr. Truman was up against something that called for more than ordinary fervor. From his acceptance speech on, he fell upon his foes.

Bid for Dixiecrat Votes Seen

Truman's Strength Revives Speculation on Electoral Tie

The strong showing made by President Truman in early returns last night revived the question of what would happen if Mr. Truman and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey were tied for electoral votes or neither received a majority.

Speculation in political circles here was that the Democrats would make a strong bid for the electoral votes pledged to Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, the States Rights (Dixiecrat) candidate.

Early returns indicated that the Dixiecrats would gain the 11 votes of Alabama, the 8 of South Carolina and the 9 of Mississippi, with a possibility of carrying the 10 votes of Louisiana.

There appeared to be a number of avenues available to the Democrats:

1. The possibility of getting Thurmond to release his electors to Truman. (Electors, under the United States Constitution, are free agents and can cast their votes any way they please. Actually they are more or less bound by State law, pledges or custom to vote for the candidate they supported.)

2. Popular pressure on the electors themselves in the three or four traditionally Democratic States to cast votes for Mr. Truman.

3. A Supreme Court test of the Alabama law binding electors. Gov. James Folsom of Alabama planned to file such a test today, he announced last night.

All the above possibilities were discounted last night by Walter

Four Dixie States For Thurmond May Be Vital

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The Presidential contest of 1948 was what the politicians call a "hoss race" this morning.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, the Republican nominee, was gaining steadily on President Truman, but the outcome still was in doubt.

Governor Dewey apparently carried his home State of New York by about 50,000 votes. Had it not been for the vote of Henry Wallace, the Empire State would have been captured by President Truman.

Wallace, a bitter foe of Mr. Truman since the Chief Executive fired him from the Cabinet, also was expected to throw California to Governor Dewey.

Truman Upsets Forecasts

Without the 72 electoral votes of New York and California, Governor Dewey would have no chance of victory.

President Truman, counted out in advance by the polltakers and prognosticators, upset forecasts in all parts of the country.

He was leading in such States as Iowa, Indiana, Wisconsin and Colorado—all States which voted for Dewey in 1944.

So close was the race this morning that it was possible that neither Truman nor Dewey would get the 266 electoral votes needed to win. In such a case, the election would be thrown into a House of Representatives which will have a safe Democratic majority in the next Congress.

This was the hope of the States Rights (Dixiecrat) Party, whose candidate, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, was ahead in four States with 38 electoral votes—Mississippi, Alabama, South Carolina and Louisiana.

Truman Leading at 2 A. M.

At 2 a. m., the Associated Press count showed President Truman leading in 27 States with 267 electoral votes.

The same tally showed Dewey leading in 17 States with 226 electoral votes.

The Truman States were Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming.

The States in which Dewey was leading were California, Connecticut, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Vermont.

The voting in several States was close. Illinois, where Mr. Truman was leading, was so close that Chicago political analysts said it could "go 10,000 either way."

Senator J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, issued a statement just before midnight in which he said that the enormous turnout of voters was responsible for Mr. Truman's showing.

"We pitched the campaign on getting out a big vote," he said, "and it is paying off. I think that the vote will be in excess of 54 million and I think that that will be enough to put President Truman over."

Democrats Excited

A surge of excitement swept over the Democratic headquarters in the Biltmore Hotel as President Truman continued to maintain his lead in both the popular and electoral vote.

Some 500 persons at the headquarters broke into applause, song and cheers as a loudspeaker announced that Mr. Truman was getting 50 per cent of the national vote.

Herbert Brownell, Jr., Dewey campaign manager, continued to claim victory for the GOP ticket.

Vote for Wallace Surprisingly Low

Early returns, mostly from the South and rural areas of the North, produced a negligible vote for Henry A. Wallace and Senator Glen H. Taylor of Idaho, Progressive Party candidates for President and Vice President.

Late poll-closing hours delayed reports from the population centers of New York, California, Pennsylvania and other States where the third party expected its heaviest vote harvest.

The first 4442 of the country's 135,868 precincts gave Wallace 4239 of a total vote of 1,239,842.

Wallace, revising downward his original expectation of six million or more votes, was understood to feel that a vote of three to four million, and the election of a few local candidates running under his banner would vindicate his secession from the Democratic party after his split with President Truman.

The Wallace forces some weeks ago said they had a chance to win the electoral votes of several States. In apparent recognition of their slipping support, they made no claims at the end, nor did Wallace forecast his popular vote.

He said that getting on the ballot in 45 States was a victory in itself and maintained that the Progressives' real test would come in 1952. By then he said, the Republicans would lose popular favor in a depression and the people would refuse to transfer power to a Democratic Party ruled by reactionaries of the South.

Bulletins

Truman Takes Slight Edge in Florida

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 2 (AP).—First returns in traditionally Democratic Florida tonight gave President Truman a slight lead over Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for the Presidency.

With 17 of 1523 precincts in, Dewey had 2391; Truman, 3562; Thurmond, 673, and Wallace, 311, for the State's nine electoral votes.

Democrats Increase West Virginia Lead

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—President Truman and his Democratic colleagues continued to increase their slight margins at 10:20 p. m. tonight as returns from some of West Virginia's 2785 precincts were tabulated.

The picture in 258 precincts showed Truman 41,013, Dewey 31,619 and Wallace 247.

In other top races: Senate (260 precincts): Neely, D., 39,953; Revercomb, R., 32,554. Governor (260 precincts): Patterson, D., Boreman, R., 32,418.

Truman Holds Margin in Montana Vote

President—Dewey, 2845; Truman, 3215; Wallace, 245. Senator (18 precincts)—Davis, R., 643; Murray, D., 921; Hanna Prohi., 8.

Truman, Kerr Sweep Ahead in Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, Nov. 2 (AP).—President Truman and former Gov. Robert S. Kerr, Democratic candidate for Senator, swept ahead in early scattered returns in Oklahoma.

Twenty-two rural precincts from various parts of the State gave Truman 2625, Dewey 993. Oklahoma has 10 electoral votes.

For the Senate, 22 precincts gave Kerr 2723, Ross Rizley R., 1095. They seek the seat now held by Republican Ed H. Moore.

Truman Leads in 123 Iowa Precincts

Des Moines, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Returns from 123 of Iowa's 2474 precincts give: President—Dewey 14,157; Truman 15,648; Wallace (106 precincts) 236. Senator—Wilson, R., 11,451; Gillette, D., 16,861; Pitcher, P. (72 precincts) 90.

Truman Well Ahead in Minnesota Count

Minneapolis, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Returns from 37 of Minnesota's 3378 precincts give: President—Dewey, 6329; Truman, 9562; Wallace, 325. Senator (27 precincts)—Ball, R., 4500; Humphrey, DFL, 7474.

President Leading in Connecticut

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Connecticut standings at 9 p. m. with 57 out of 169 precincts: Dewey 233,052; Truman 256,285; Wallace 5088.

Democrats Wresting 7 Governorships

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

On the basis of returns at 11:30 a. m. the Democrats had changed the present 24-24 split of Governorships in the country to 30-18 in their favor.

Returns at that time indicated the Democrats would capture the following Governorships now held by Republicans: Connecticut, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Massachusetts, Michigan and Ohio.

In only one State, Utah, were the Republicans apparently taking over from the Democratic incumbent. There Governor Maw was trailing his opponent, J. Bracken Lee 16,954 to 12,285.

Claimed for Stevenson

In Illinois the Democratic Adlai Stevenson took an early lead over the Republican incumbent Dwight H. Green. At mignight the Chicago Sun-Times claimed the election for Stevenson by a lead of 400,000.

In Connecticut former OPA Administrator Chester Bowles had a small lead of 4000 votes over the Republican incumbent, James C. Shannon, in a total vote of more than 800,000.

In Indiana Democrat Henry S. Schricker was leading the Republican Hobart Creighton.

In Massachusetts Republican Gov. Robert A. Bradford conceded the election of his opponent, Paul A. Dever, in the face of a constantly increasing majority.

Startling Upset Seen

A startling upset was apparently underway in Michigan where Gov. Kem Sigler was trailing his Democratic Opponent G. Mennen Williams.

In President Truman's home State, Missouri, the Democratic candidate Forrest Smith had a lead of almost 100,000 votes over his opponent Murray E. Thompson.

In Ohio Gov. Thomas J. Herbert conceded the election of former Gov. Frank J. Lausche (Dem.) at 1:30 a.m.

In Tennessee the Hillbilly singer, Roy Acuff, who Republicans hoped would win and also carry his ticket-mate Carroll B. Reece into the Senate, was badly beaten.

Electoral Tie Talk Revived

Brown, Dixiecrat leader. Brown told The Washington Post by telephone from Columbia, S. C., that he saw no possibility of Dixiecrat electors switching to Mr. Truman.

"The electors are bound by moral commitments and I am certain they would cast their electoral votes for Thurmond and Wright (Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, Dixiecrat vice presidential nominee)," Brown declared.

"I have heard no mention of a switch to Truman," he said. "If there is a tie and the election is thrown into the House of Representatives the smaller States would have a better chance."

Would Go Into House

Brown was referring to the procedure set up by the United States Constitution, which provides that if no candidate gets a majority, the House of Representatives shall chooose from the three candidates having the highest number. Each State would have one vote in a House election and how it would be cast would be up to the majority of the state's delegation. The candidate must get 25 votes out of the 48 to win.

W. J. Primm, jr., assistant director of the Democratic National Committee, said here last night that Democratic Party leaders in the States affected by the Dixiecrat movement planned to press the fight for the state's electoral votes in whatever way possible.

Primm cited particularly the State of Alabama, the only state which did not have a slate of electors for Mr. Truman on the ballot.

Forsees Popular Revolt

He pointed out that the Louisiana Legislature passed a law at a special session providing that Mr. Truman's electors could appear on the ballot as "Independents." He foresaw a popular revolt among Democrats in the South against leaders who supported the Dixiecrat ticket, declaring these leaders had converted the existing party machinery to their own purposes.

"In Alabama they were directly responsible for depriving the people of a chance to cast their ballots, if they saw fit, for President Truman," he declared.

The Alabama law requires electors to "cast their ballots for the nominee of the national convention of the party by which they were elected." The Alabama Supreme Court, in advisory opinion, said the statute was meaningless. It is this decision which Governor Folsom plans to test.

Should all these efforts fail in the event of a nonmajority or tie electoral vote, selection of a President would be thrown into the newly elected House of Representatives.

Up to New Congressmen

As a result of the Twentieth or "Lame-Duck" Amendment, sponsored by the late Senator George Norris, the choice would be up to the newly elected Congressmen and not in the hands of the House of Representatives of the Eighteenth Congress.

Until the approval of the Lame Duck Amendment, January 23, 1933, the retiring House was empowered to pick the President in the event of a tie or in case of the failure of any candidate to gain an electoral advantage.

The House first exercised this constitutional function in 1800 when Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr tied for the Presidency. After protracted balloting that threatened to extend beyond Inauguration Day, the House picked Jefferson.

In 1824, no candidate obtained a majority so the House again was called upon to choose a President. It picked John Quincy Adams in spite of the fact that Andrew Jackson had the greater electoral vote.

Failure of the electoral college to make the choice would alter the general election of the splinter parties. In the House, the Representatives from Thurmond States, (all members of the Democratic Party since the States Rights Party entered no congressional candidates) would be freed of electoral commitments and might vote at their own pleasure. They might decide the contest.

Philadelphian Is Held In Bail on Bribe Charge

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—A warrant charging an unidentified man with bribery was issued today by Presiding Judge L. Stauffer Oliver in a Philadelphia election court.

Later, Harold Morgan was arrested by county detectives on the warrant and arraigned immediately before Judge Oliver sitting as a committing magistrate. Morgan denied the charges, but the jurist held him in $500 bail for grand jury action.

Triumphant Candidates for Governors

McDowell, Isacson Lose for Congress

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.), a leading member of the Committee on Un-American Activities, was voted out of public office yesterday.

He lost his Pittsburgh district by a decisive margin to Harry J. Davenport, Democrat, a local newspaper publisher, who had the vigorous and united support of organized labor.

At the opposite pole from McDowell, Representative Leo Isacson of New York, one of Henry Wallace's two supporters in the Eightieth Congress, was thrown back to private life together with many other controversial figures of the old House and Senate.

Isacson lost to Isidore Dollinger, a Bronx businessman who had Democratic, Republican and American Liberal Party support.

At least two Republican members of the all-powerful Rules Committee in the old House were pushed out by the Democratic upsurge.

One was Ross Rizley of Oklahoma, who lost to former Governor Robert P. Kerr in the race for the Senate.

The other was Forest A. Harness, a veteran of five Congresses, who went down to unexpected defeat in the Indiana Fifth District at the hands of John R. Walsh, Democrat. Both Rizley and Harness were also members of the Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Departments.

Gordon Canfield (R., N. J.), a member of the House appropriations Committee, was a four-term Congressman defeated in the Eighth New Jersey District by Charles S. Joelson, Democrat.

Another four-term veteran who lost his seat was John C. Butler (R., N. Y.), losing his Buffalo district to Anthony F. Tauriello, a labor-backed Democrat.

Other Republicans who won't be in the New Congress were William J. Miller and Ellsworth B. Foote of Connecticut, and George Sarbacher and Robert N. McGarvey of Pennsylvania.

A total of 10 Senators and 42 Representatives lost in the primaries or withdrew of their own accord before the election.

Two Representatives — Thomas L. Owens (R., Ill.) and Orville Zimmerman (R., Mo.)—died during the past year, and their places were filled at the polls yesterday.

Some of those who will watch the new Congress from the sidelines had been fixtures on Capitol Hill for many years. One of them, Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) was elected six days before the Armistice that ended World War I in 1918, and had served continuously ever since.

Others, notably Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.), had been favorites with gallery crowds and with their fellow-Congressmen as well. Dirksen, who had to retire because of failing eyesight, was regarded as one of the most influential and courageous Republicans in the House.

Another who won't be back in the Eighty-first Congress is Representative Fred Hartley (R., N. J.), coauthor of the Taft-Hartley Labor Act. If Hartley had run for reelection he would have faced bitter opposition from labor groups in his district.

Two Democratic Senators, William B. Umstead (N. C.) and Tom Stewart (Tenn.), fell by the wayside in the primaries. Senator Albert Hawkes (R., N. J.) former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Senator W. Lee (Pappy) O'Daniel (D., Tex.) were dropped by their parties. Senator Carl A. Hatch (D., N. Mex.), an Administration stalwart, retired to take a Federal judgeship.

Other Senators Gone

Other Senators who won't be back are Wallace H. White (R., Me.), Majority Leader in the last Senate; Oilman E. H. Moore (R., Okla.), who switched parties after his election as a Democrat; Harlan Bushfield (R., S. Dak.), and William C. Feazel (D., La.), appointed last May to fill the unexpired term of the late John H. Overton.

On the other side of the Capitol, seven Republican and eight Democrats lost in primary battles. The Republican were John W. Gwynne (Iowa), Bartle Jonkman (Mich.), Charles R. Robertson (N. Dak.), James Gallagher (Pa.), F. Wallace Chadwick (Pa.), James P. Scoblick (Pa.) and William R. Stevenson (Wis.).

Democratic Representatives who lost in the primaries were Pete Jarman and Carter Manasco (Ala.), Emory H. Price Fla.), Hugh A. Meade (Md.), Georgia L. Lusk (N. M.), Preston E. Peden (Okla.), John J. Riley (S. C.), and Wirt Courtney (Tenn.).

The forced retirement of Jarman and Jonkman will produce vacancies in the House Foreign Affairs Committee, where Jarman had been an ardent advocate of the Marshall Plan and Jonkman a belated convert to it.

Three other Representatives, Glen D. Johnson (D., Okla.), W. J. Dorn (D., S. C.) and James Domengeaux (D., La.), won't be back in the next Congress because they tried and failed to win Senatorial nominations.

From the Republican party's standpoint, one of the heaviest preelection losses was that of Walter G. Andrew (R., N. Y.), who had been chairman of the Armed Services Committee.

Other members of the Eightieth Congress who won't be in the Eighty-first are:

Republicans—Alfred J. Elliot (Calif.), William G. Stratton (Ill.), Anton J. Johnson (Ill.), Roy Clippinger (Ill.), Evan Howell (Ill.), Noble J. Johnson (Ind.), William Lewis (Ky.), Frank Mathews (N. J.), Ellsworth B. Buck (N. Y.), Mitchell Jenkins (Pa.).

Democrats—Richard F. Harless (Ariz.), Fedjo Cravens (Ark.), Clarence F. Lea (Calif.), Joe Hendricks (Fla.), Louis Ludlow (Ind.), C. Jasper Bell (Mo.), John H. Folger (N. C.), J. Bayard Clark (N. C.), Milton H. West (Tex.), J. Lindsay Almond (Va.), and John W. Flannagan (Va.). Ludlow had served 10 terms and Flannagan nine.

Two New Senators Unworried by Vote

Two new Senators didn't have to worry about the election returns last night.

One was Russell B. Long (D., La.), the late Huey Long's elder son, who won't reach the statutory youth limit of 30 until tomorrow. Young Long was elected unopposed to fill the late Senator John H. Overton's unexpired term.

The second sure newcomer was Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.), a capable and popular member of the House for the past eight years, elected on September 13 as the only Republican woman ever chosen for a full Senate term.

Both Are Colorful

Both will provide color in a Senate that will have many new faces among its members.

Russell Long will come to the Senate even younger than another "boy wonder" of recent years, Rush D. Holt of West Virginia, who was 30 years and four months old when he was elected in 1935.

But it is a safe guess that Long will not be talked about for many months as a Senatorial infant prodigy. He looks like his father, talks like his father, and won his Senate seat with the same razzle-dazzle campaigning methods that brought Huey to the governorship and the Senate in an earlier decade.

In his student days at Louisiana State University Russell Long was the hottest student campaigner the campus had ever known. When he was 21 he married his college sweetheart, 19-year-old Katherine May Hattis, and about the same time he decided to go into State and national politics.

Good War Record

He had a good war record, entering the Navy as an apprentice seaman and serving as a landing craft officer in the North African, Sicily, Anzio and southern French campaigns. His Senate career will be full of fireworks, for he has promised the Louisiana voters to fight any President who "tries to ride roughshod" over Louisiana's interests.

Mrs. Smith of Maine will give the new Senate a personality of another sort. Attractive, prematurely gray, youthful-looking although she is going on 50, Mrs. Smith was popular from the moment she succeeded her late husband, Clyde Smith, in the House in 1940.

She entered the House with the background of a schoolteacher and a business executive on the staff of the Independent Reporter, a weekly in her home town of Skowhegan. She served as president of the State Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs in Maine, and was the first woman to be made permanent chairman of the State Republican Convention in Maine.

As a member of the House Naval Affairs Committee she became known as "mother of the Waves" for her part in setting up the women's auxiliary service in the Navy. She broke all naval tradition in wartime by becoming the only woman passenger on a destroyer, and once she spent ten hours alongside Admiral Chester W. Nimitz aboard a carrier during battle practice.

In the House she has been a consistent internationalist. Until her election in September, only one other woman, Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway (D., Ark.) had ever been elected to a full Senate term.

Two newcomers who had easy Senate victories were Andrew F. Schoeppel, Republican Governor of Kansas from 1943 to 1947, and J. Melville Broughton, Democratic Governor of North Carolina in the war years. Schoeppel, who is 54, made his way in politics as a small-town lawyer; Broughton, who is 60, forsook newspaper reporting for the Harvard Law School and a legal career.

Former Governor Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma (D.), elected to the Senate yesterday, is a wealthy oil producer, a World War I veteran, and keynoter at the 1944 Democratic convention that nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt for his fourth term.

Tennessee's new Democratic Senator, 45-year-old Representative Estes Kefauver of Chattanooga, won nation-wide prominence by defying and defeating the Crump machine in the primaries. He is a veteran of the last five Congresses, and in addition to being a New Dealer has shown special interest in reforming and speeding up Congressional processes.

Election upsets brought many new faces into the House as well.

In Connecticut 42-year-old John A. McGuire, political adviser to the State CIO, captured the Third District from a first-term Republican, Ellsworth B. Foote. As town clerk of Wallingford, McGuire was so popular in the State that he served for eight years as president of the Connecticut Town Clerks' Association, although 80 per cent of the State's town clerks are Republicans.

Judge Abraham Ribicoff, who captured the First District from the veteran Republican Representative William J. Miller, is a former member of the Connecticut Legislature and a popular figure in the Hartford area.

Headquarters Quiet Reigns As Wallace Hears Returns

New York, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party presidential candidate, had a leisurely dinner at a mid-Manhattan hotel with his wife and friends tonight and then went to his campaign headquarters to await election results.

His headquarters, a huge four-story brownstone mansion at 39 Park ave., usually bustling with preelection activity, was contrastingly quiet tonight. Party workers and friends of Wallace wandered desultorily through the bunting-draped corridors.

Wallace voted early today at the Colonial Library Building at South Salem, N. Y. He was accompanied by his wife, his son-in-law, Leslie Douglas, his press secretary, Stephan Fischer, and Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Rosen, personal friends.

After voting, Wallace returned to his farm and spent the day working, feeding the chickens and tending to his chrysanthemum garden.

Ballot Stuffing Reported in 6 Ky. Precincts

Paris, Ky., Nov. 2 (AP).—Sheriff J. M. Leer today said he was investigating reports of ballot box stuffing in six Bourbon County precincts.

Earlier today Deputy Sheriff John Neal said a ballot box stuffed with 17 Democratic ballots was found when the polls opened at one precinct.

The reports of ballot box stuffing in the five precincts have not been verified. Other members of the election commission are aiding the sheriff in the investigation.

Precincts being investigated are North Middletown 1, 2 and 3 and Paris 1 and 2. Precinct 2 at Paris is the home precinct of Representative Virgil Chapman, Democrat, running against Senator John Sherman Cooper for the United States Senate.

The stuffed ballot box in the Clintonville Precinct 3 was reported first by Russell Day, Republican county campaign chairman, and later confirmed by Neal.

Day said B. Bates, a Republican challenger, inspected the box before voting began and heard something rattling like paper inside. Upon being opened, the box was found to contain 17 ballots. Neal said Sheriff Leer told him 16 were straight Democratic votes and one was Democratic except for the Senatorship, the vote going to Republican John Sherman Cooper.

E. F. Prichard, jr., an attorney for the Democratic National Committee, is a clerk at the precinct, Neal said. Other poll officials are Democrat William Collier, judge; S. H. Mattox, Republican, judge, and Neville Doyle, Republican, sheriff.

Election commissioners, in addition to Sheriff Lear, are Harry C. Horton, Republican county chairman, and Latsley Haskins, Democrat, brother of County Court Clerk Grace Haskins.

Democratic headquarters here said the ballot box was sent yesterday to the home of Doyle. Prichard and Mattox, whose names were marked on the ballots as certifying officers, said the names were not their signatures. Officials also stated the key to the ballot box was still in the lock when it was received at the polls, instead of being left in the county clerk's office as required.

Clintonville number 3 normally votes about 90 per cent Democratic.

Killed Gandhi for Benefit Of Humanity, Godse Declares

New Delhi (Wednesday), Nov. 3 (AP).—Narayan Vinayak Godse, 35-year-old Brahmin, declared today he had killed Mohandas K. Gandhi "purely for the benefit of humanity."

His confession, a 68-page statement, invited the court to pass the maximum sentence of death by hanging, saying, "I do not desire any mercy be shown me nor anyone beg for mercy on my behalf."

The statement was released after four months of the trial of Godse and 11 others accused of aiding and abetting him in the January 30 assassination of Gandhi.

Godse expressed "confidence about the moral justification" of his act in firing the fatal shots, and appealed to posterity to "weigh my act and find the true value thereof."

He said he personally respected Gandhi's saintliness and "before I fired the shots I actually wished him luck and bowed to him in reverence."

But Gandhi's policy and action, he said, "brought ruin to millions of Hindus."

Detailing Gandhi's concessions to Moslems, Godse declared the climax was reached when the Hindu leader began a fast in January on behalf of better treatment of Moslems by Hindus. The fast compelled the Indian government to make concessions to the Moslem government of Pakistan, he said.

Elected to Senate

Senators were elected yesterday in 32 States (2 in La.) including Maine, which elected a Republican September 13. Seats in the next, Eighty-first, Congress to be filled total 33 as follows:

By constitutional provision, for full term beginning January 3, 1949, and ending January 3, 1955 (32), seats now held by: Republicans 18; Democrats 14.

To fill unexpired term in the Eightieth and next Congress (1) now held by a Democrat, as follows:

LOUISIANA: Term of late John H. Overton (D.), ending January 3, 1951, now held by appointment by William C. Feazel (D.).

Political classification of seats not affected by this year's elections: Republicans, 33; Democrats, 30. Total 63.

Fighting Flares At Korean Post

Seoul, Korea (Wednesday), Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Fighting has broken out between south Korean army units and south Korean military police units stationed at Taegu, 160 miles southeast of Seoul, both Korean and American sources reported today.

Better Evidence Needed

New York, (U.P.).—Six tenn-age boys were cleared in court of a series of bubble gum thefts. Just because they were standing on the corner chewing gum was no reason for police to assume they had stolen it, the magistrate ruled.

Splinter Race Of 1912 Still Holds Record

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

If South Carolina's J. Strom Thurmond polls the 28 electoral votes predicted for him as States Rights candidate, he will rank second only to Theodore Roosevelt as a top third party vote-getter in modern times.

The Rough Rider, with Hiram Johnson as his running mate on a "trust busting" program of the Progressive (Bull Moose) Party in 1912, received 4,126,020 popular votes and 88 electoral ballots.

Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin, running as a Progressive, aided by farm and labor sentiment in 1924, polled a higher popular vote (4,822,856) than Roosevelt but gathered only 13 electoral votes.

Thurmond is seemingly sure of Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina. Some forecasters have predicted that Louisiana's 10 electoral votes would also go to the Dixiecrat, swelling his total to 38.

Once before, in 1860, South Carolina played a leading role in splitting the Democratic Party.

Party Discord

The Southern and Northern wings of the party could not agree on a slavery plank growing out of the Dred Scott decision—in effect, much the same kind of division caused by President Truman's civil rights program.

The Deep South in 1860 insisted on a plank that Congress should guarantee slave property in free States and Territories.

The convention in South Carolina failed to agree on a candidate. Delegates of eight Deep Southern States met in Baltimore and nominated James C. Breckenridge of Kentucky, who reaffirmed the extreme Southern viewpoint.

The remainder of the Democratic delegates, also meeting at Baltimore, nominated Stephen Douglas.

Split Assured Victory

Another "splinter party" which caught the eye of a large segment of the voting population was the Populist Party whose candidate, John B. Weaver, polled 1,055,424 popular and 22 electoral votes in 1892.

The Populist platform, though having no "Communist" connotation, was not unlike that of Henry A. Wallace. It used the same vague references to "monopoly, Wall Street" and "rule by the bankers."

The Socialist Party, most often thought of in connection with third parties, never really achieved a respectable showing in a national election. The party's best year was 1912 when Eugene V. Debs polled 897,011 votes or 6 per cent of the total cast.

200 Call for Truman; 'Not Here,' Says Margaret

Independence, Mo., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—A crowd of about 200 townspeople staged a 10-minute demonstration outside the Summer White House here shortly before 11 p. m. CST., calling for President Truman, and his daughter told the crowd, "Daddy isn't here."

A few minutes earlier, Charles G. Ross, presidential press aide, told newsmen at the Hotel Muehlebach that "this is the President's night. He is doing what he pleases. He is President of the United States."

The crowd sang such songs as "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," We're Just Wild About Harry," and "The Missouri Waltz" and called repeatedly for the President.

Election Held Truman Feat

er fight. These were his obstacles:

1. An administration with a 16-year accumulation of the usual grievances of long tenure.

2. A party whose leaders had tried unsubtly to withhold nomination.

3. A Cabinet that had no appetite for the rough-and-tumble fighting of the campaign.

4. A party organization that had ridden coat-tails so long that no fight was left in the precinct setups.

5. A left-wing split that sheared off the radical fringe that had helped Roosevelt through four elections.

6. A right-wing split that threatened the loss of at least four Southern States.

All Dismayed But Truman

Every Democrat in the country was dismayed at the prospect—every one but Truman. If he was secretly dismayed, he let no one know. He had as much right as old John Adams to feel that his friends had knifed him, his colleagues had deserted him and his Cabinet denied him. If he resented it, he didn't show it. He saved everything he had for the fight.

He won a victory over his congressional foes by running some of them out of public life.

He carried Congressmen and Senators who looked upon the Truman candidacy as a liability into the Senate and the House.

Gave Pollsters Rude Shock

He surprised everybody a lot but he surprised the polltakers and forecasters most. Roper said there was no contest and quit taking polls. Gallup had Dewey ahead from the beginning. The newspaper experts found no comfort for Harry and felt sorry for his naive faith in the outcome of the election.

Somehow they overlooked some things, such as:

1. The biggest pay rolls in American history.

2. The anxiety of American farmers who felt the impact of some falling prices, the fears for price supports and the consequence of congressional failure to provide appropriations for adequate grain storage.

3. The general fears (justified or unjustified) aroused by inroads upon the labor gains made during the New Deal.

4. The American people's admiration for a spunky fighter.

Historic Success in Failure

The ballot box value of the Roosevelt political estate which Truman inherited.

6. The absence of any vigorous, affirmative or specific campaign appeals by the Republican candidate.

That the Truman drive was beginning to tell was vaguely sensed by some political observers in the closing days of the campaign. The extent of its effect was not foreseen accurately anywhere. That the attack on the Eightieth Congress was going to hurt was detected much earlier. There were not many surprises in the Senate results.

President Harry Truman's campaign, even if it fails, would stand as one of the most successful failures in American political history.

Dewey Gains On Truman

but not with the same gusto that he had issued his earlier claims.

Shortly after 11 p. m., Brownell said:

"As in all elections, the big cities in which the Democrats normally have majorities are reported during the early hours after the polls close. That has been happening tonight but the Democratic majorities in practically every instance have been substantially smaller than would be necessary for the Democratic candidates to win."

Candidates Elected To Lower House

By The Associated Press

Listed below are the candidates elected to the United States House of Representatives where returns are complete or the result has been conceded.

A majority of 218 is necessary for control by either party. All 435 seats in the House are up for election, including three Republicans elected to the House September 13.

Present political classification of the expiring Eightieth Congress is: Republicans, 243; Democrats, 185; American Labor, 2; vacancies, 5.

The political division of each State delegation as at present constituted in the Eightieth Congress is shown after each State name, and the party affiliation of the incumbent (marked X) in each district is indicated by the initial at the end of each line.

Those elected Tuesday, with (x) denoting incumbent follow:

Killed Gandhi for Benefit Of Humanity, Godse Declares

New Delhi (Wednesday), Nov. 3 (AP).—Narayan Vinayak Godse, 35-year-old Brahmin, declared today he had killed Mohandas K. Gandhi "purely for the benefit of humanity."

His confession, a 68-page statement, invited the court to pass the maximum sentence of death by hanging, saying, "I do not desire any mercy be shown me nor anyone beg for mercy on my behalf."

The statement was released after four months of the trial of Godse and 11 others accused of aiding and abetting him in the January 30 assassination of Gandhi.

Godse expressed "confidence about the moral justification" of his act in firing the fatal shots, and appealed to posterity to "weigh my act and find the true value thereof."

He said he personally respected Gandhi's saintliness and "before I fired the shots I actually wished him luck and bowed to him in reverence."

But Gandhi's policy and action, he said, "brought ruin to millions of Hindus."

Detailing Gandhi's concessions to Moslems, Godse declared the climax was reached when the Hindu leader began a fast in January on behalf of better treatment of Moslems by Hindus. The fast compelled the Indian government to make concessions to the Moslem government of Pakistan, he said.

Elected to Senate

Senators were elected yesterday in 32 States (2 in La.) including Maine, which elected a Republican September 13. Seats in the next, Eighty-first, Congress to be filled total 33 as follows:

By constitutional provision, for full term beginning January 3, 1949, and ending January 3, 1955 (32), seats now held by: Republicans 18; Democrats 14.

To fill unexpired term in the Eightieth and next Congress (1) now held by a Democrat, as follows:

LOUISIANA: Term of late John H. Overton (D.), ending January 3, 1951, now held by appointment by William C. Feazel (D.).

Political classification of seats not affected by this year's elections: Republicans, 33; Democrats, 30. Total 63.

Fighting Flares At Korean Post

Seoul, Korea (Wednesday), Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Fighting has broken out between south Korean army units and south Korean military police units stationed at Taegu, 160 miles southeast of Seoul, both Korean and American sources reported today.

Better Evidence Needed

New York, (U.P.).—Six tenn-age boys were cleared in court of a series of bubble gum thefts. Just because they were standing on the corner chewing gum was no reason for police to assume they had stolen it, the magistrate ruled.

Splinter Race Of 1912 Still Holds Record

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

If South Carolina's J. Strom Thurmond polls the 28 electoral votes predicted for him as States Rights candidate, he will rank second only to Theodore Roosevelt as a top third party vote-getter in modern times.

The Rough Rider, with Hiram Johnson as his running mate on a "trust busting" program of the Progressive (Bull Moose) Party in 1912, received 4,126,020 popular votes and 88 electoral ballots.

Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin, running as a Progressive, aided by farm and labor sentiment in 1924, polled a higher popular vote (4,822,856) than Roosevelt but gathered only 13 electoral votes.

Thurmond is seemingly sure of Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina. Some forecasters have predicted that Louisiana's 10 electoral votes would also go to the Dixiecrat, swelling his total to 38.

Once before, in 1860, South Carolina played a leading role in splitting the Democratic Party.

Party Discord

The Southern and Northern wings of the party could not agree on a slavery plank growing out of the Dred Scott decision—in effect, much the same kind of division caused by President Truman's civil rights program.

The Deep South in 1860 insisted on a plank that Congress should guarantee slave property in free States and Territories.

The convention in South Carolina failed to agree on a candidate. Delegates of eight Deep Southern States met in Baltimore and nominated James C. Breckenridge of Kentucky, who reaffirmed the extreme Southern viewpoint.

The remainder of the Democratic delegates, also meeting at Baltimore, nominated Stephen Douglas.

Split Assured Victory

Another "splinter party" which caught the eye of a large segment of the voting population was the Populist Party whose candidate, John B. Weaver, polled 1,055,424 popular and 22 electoral votes in 1892.

The Populist platform, though having no "Communist" connotation, was not unlike that of Henry A. Wallace. It used the same vague references to "monopoly, Wall Street" and "rule by the bankers."

The Socialist Party, most often thought of in connection with third parties, never really achieved a respectable showing in a national election. The party's best year was 1912 when Eugene V. Debs polled 897,011 votes or 6 per cent of the total cast.

200 Call for Truman; 'Not Here,' Says Margaret

Independence, Mo., Nov. 2 (U.P.).

A crowd of about 200 townspeople staged a 10-minute demonstration outside the Summer White House here shortly before 11 p. m. CST., calling for President Truman, and his daughter told the crowd, "Daddy isn't here."

A few minutes earlier, Charles G. Ross, presidential press aide, told newsmen at the Hotel Muehlebach that "this is the President's night. He is doing what he pleases. He is President of the United States."

The crowd sang such songs as "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," We're Just Wild About Harry," and "The Missouri Waltz" and called repeatedly for the President.

Election Held Truman Feat

er fight. These were his obstacles:

1. An administration with a 16-year accumulation of the usual grievances of long tenure.

2. A party whose leaders had tried unsubtly to withhold nomination.

3. A Cabinet that had no appetite for the rough-and-tumble fighting of the campaign.

4. A party organization that had ridden coat-tails so long that no fight was left in the precinct setups.

5. A left-wing split that sheared off the radical fringe that had helped Roosevelt through four elections.

6. A right-wing split that threatened the loss of at least four Southern States.

All Dismayed But Truman

Every Democrat in the country was dismayed at the prospect—every one but Truman. If he was secretly dismayed, he let no one know. He had as much right as old John Adams to feel that his friends had knifed him, his colleagues had deserted him and his Cabinet denied him. If he resented it, he didn't show it. He saved everything he had for the fight.

He won a victory over his congressional foes by running some of them out of public life.

He carried Congressmen and Senators who looked upon the Truman candidacy as a liability into the Senate and the House.

Gave Pollsters Rude Shock

He surprised everybody a lot but he surprised the polltakers and forecasters most. Roper said there was no contest and quit taking polls. Gallup had Dewey ahead from the beginning. The newspaper experts found no comfort for Harry and felt sorry for his naive faith in the outcome of the election.

Somehow they overlooked some things, such as:

1. The biggest pay rolls in American history.

2. The anxiety of American farmers who felt the impact of some falling prices, the fears for price supports and the consequence of congressional failure to provide appropriations for adequate grain storage.

3. The general fears (justified or unjustified) aroused by inroads upon the labor gains made during the New Deal.

4. The American people's admiration for a spunky fighter.

Historic Success in Failure

The ballot box value of the Roosevelt political estate which Truman inherited.

6. The absence of any vigorous, affirmative or specific campaign appeals by the Republican candidate.

That the Truman drive was beginning to tell was vaguely sensed by some political observers in the closing days of the campaign. The extent of its effect was not foreseen accurately anywhere. That the attack on the Eightieth Congress was going to hurt was detected much earlier. There were not many surprises in the Senate results.

President Harry Truman's campaign, even if it fails, would stand as one of the most successful failures in American political history.

Dewey Gains On Truman

but not with the same gusto that he had issued his earlier claims.

Shortly after 11 p. m., Brownell said:

"As in all elections, the big cities in which the Democrats normally have majorities are reported during the early hours after the polls close. That has been happening tonight but the Democratic majorities in practically every instance have been substantially smaller than would be necessary for the Democratic candidates to win."

shot, had a hard-to-beat Cook County and Chicago lead over isolationist Senator C. Wayland Brooks (R).

Kentucky—Representative Virgil Chapman (D) overtook and passed early lead by the favorite, Senator John Sherman Cooper (R).

Minnesota—Mayor Hubert Humphrey (D), the man who forced a strong civil right plank into the Democratic platform, way out in front of Senator Joseph H. Ball (R).

Tennessee—Representative Estes Kefauver (D), the Democratic liberal who gave Memphis Boss Ed Crump his worst licking, commandingly ahead of former Republican National Chairman Carrol B. Reece.

New Mexico—Former Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson (D) overtook Patrick J. Hurley (R) and edged way ahead of him.

Wyoming—Returns still fragmentary but vote-getting Governor Lester C. Hunt (D) ahead of isolationist Senator E. V. Robertson (R) at the start.

Montana—New Deal Senator James E. Murray (D) moving slightly ahead of early leader, Tom Davis (R), for the one Democratic seat Republicans felt sure they would take.

Idaho — Republican Senator Henry C. Dworshak trailing Bert H. Miller (D) in far from conclusive returns.

Texas — Representative Lyndon B. Johnson (D), despite a threatening party split, apparently safely out ahead of Jack Porter (R).

With the Texas Senate seat out of danger, and Representative A. Willis Robertson (D) of Virginia clinching Dixie's other doubtful Senate seat, Democrats appeared sure of all ten of their deep South seats.

In Rhode Island, where the only Northeastern Senate Democratic seat was on the bloc, Senator Theodore F. Green of New Deal leanings was well out in front of Thomas P. Hazard (R.).

Thus Democrats were ahead, by margins in some instances that could be reversed, in 25 of the 33 Senate races.

Ferguson Pressed

Even in some strong GOP territory, Democratic nominees were making a strong showing. Former Representative Frank Hook (D) was pressing close on the heels of Senator Homer Ferguson (R) in Michigan.

Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith (R) was elected September 13 in Maine and Republicans seemed out of trouble in these other States:

Kansas—Andrew F. Schoeppel (R) running way ahead of Former Senator George McGill (D).

Massachusetts — Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R) walking away from John I. Fitzgerald (D).

Nebraska—Senate Republican Whip Kenneth Wherry (R) with a long lead over Terry Carpenter (D).

New Hampshire—Senator Styles Bridges (R) safely ahead of Alfred E. Fortin (D).

Democrats Win Lower House

cratic contender Clyde Doyle, a former Congressman.

Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas of California's 14th District (Los Angeles) and Representative Chet Hollifield of California's 19th District were reported to be safely re-elected with a two-to-one majority.

Early morning returns from Missouri and from Connecticut cinched the necessary 31-vote gain to assure a Democratic victory.

The Democratic sweep overwhelmed even the most optimistic Democratic forecasters, and it appeared to be increasing in momentum rather than losing its speed as fuller returns began to pour in around 2 a. m.

Latest report at Democratic Congressional Campaign Headquarters early this morning was that Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse, former member of Congress, had definitely won over incumbent Republican Horace Seeley-Brown.

Unofficially, leading Republicans politicians conceded the House as well as the Senate would be firmly in Democratic control.

Privately the GOP observers acknowledged that in crucial Pennsylvania, for example, the Democrats had wrested 10 Republican-held seats from their grasp.

Democrats made substantial gains in Pennsylvania, Illinois, New York, New Jersey, Indiana, Connecticut and Idaho.

The House at present is divided 245 Republicans and 187 Democrats. There are five seats unfilled and two American Labor Party members. One of these two, Representative Leo Isacson of New York City went down to defeat at the hands of a Democrat last night.

In order to insure control—217 votes—Democrats needed at least least 30 additional seats.

The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, whose executive secretary is Capt. Victor Harding claimed victory early this morning.

Republican Congressional Campaign headquarters, on the other hand, gloomily acknowledged the picture was far from bright.

In Illinois Democrats were reported to have picked up six seats.

In New Jersey, where no changes were anticipated, at least two upsets were claimed by the Democrats.

Democrats picked up Republican seats in the 1st, 2nd, 4th and 5th Districts (all Philadelphia), the 10th (Scranton—expected by both parties), the 11th (Luzerne County-Wilkes-Barre) and the 29th. This last district is the one formerly held by Representative John McDowell, a member of the House Committee on Un-American Activities. He was defeated by Harry J. Davenport, local newspaper publisher, who had united labor backing.

Democrats also won in the First Idaho District, now held by Republican Abe McGregor Goff. Winner was Compton L. White, former Congressman.

In Connecticut the Democrats took not only the First Congressional District seat in the Hartford area formerly held by Representative William J. Miller (R.), but the Third Congressional seat formerly held by Republican Ellsworth B. Foote.

Incoming Democratic Congressman here is 42-year-old John A. McGuire, town clerk of Wallingford, and longtime president of the Connecticut Town Clerk's Association.

Democratic headquarters on the basis of returns from candidates were claiming the Second and Third Districts of West Virginia, both formerly held by Republicans. District 1 in West Virginia was set down as a nip-and-tuck race.

In Indiana, Democrats claimed a surprise victory in the Fifth District, where telephone reports indicted that incumbent Representative Forest A. Harness, longtime member of the House Military Affairs Committee, had been decisively beaten by John R. Walsh of Anderson, Ind. Previous to the election neither Democrats nor Republicans had considered the Harness seat in danger.

In another surprise upset, the Democrats claimed the Tenth New Jersey District, a seat held formerly by Representative Fred A. Hartley, jr., coauthor of the Taft-Hartley law, who retired.

In this district, Democrat Peter W. Rodino, jr., of Newark nosed out newcomer Anthony Giuliano, a Republican. The Democrats had predicted no change in New Jersey seats. The Newark victory was ascribed to intensive campaigning by the CIO.

In the Fourteenth Ohio District Representative Walter B. Huber, a Democart, retained a hotly contested seat over his Republican opponent, Ed Rowe, a former Congressman. GOP forces had hopes of recapturing the seat.

In Pennsylvania's Twentieth District, Representative Francis E. Walter beat out his Republican opponent, Roy E. James, by 2-to-1 vote. This was another seat for which the GOP forces had put a stiff and hopeful battle.

Early returns showed 60 Democrats and 17 Republicans elected, but of the 60 Democrats all but 6 were from the solid South. Despite the Dixiecrat revolt, there were no Dixiecrat candidates for House or Senate running.

Among those returned to the House were Democratic Floor Leader Sam Rayburn of Texas; Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio), a member of the GOP House Policy Committee; Democratic Whip John W. McCormack of Massachusetts; and Representative Richard L. Nixon (R., Calif.), coauthor of the Mundt-Nixon Communist control bill.

Two hotly disputed seats were settled in early returns from Kentucky and Connecticut.

In Kentucky's Third District incumbent Republican Thurston Ballard Morton, 41-year-old Navy veteran, beat out a strong Democratic opponent, Ralph H. Logan, an attorney, son of former U. S. Senator M. M. Logan. Democrats had hopes of recapturing the seat because of the native-son vote expected to be polled by Senator Alben Barkley (D., Ky.) as President Truman's running mate.

In Connecticut, however, GOP forces suffered a reverse, which may indicate a surprise upset in the Nutmeg State when incumbent Republican Congressman William J. Miller lost out to Abraham A. Ribicoff, his Democratic opponent.

Both sides had set down Connecticut's First District as a hot fighting ground, where anything could happen. More significantly, however, both Republican and Democratic politicians have long acknowledged that because of the way ballots are set up in Connecticut it is difficult for the voter to split his ballot.

Before the election, GOP experts had candidly admitted they would start worrying about Connecticut, considered sure territory for Presidential Candidate Thomas E. Dewey if early returns showed a loss of District One.

Ribicoff, a former member of the Connecticut State Legislature is now a judge, and considered popular in his district.

Russians Release Food-Laden Barges

Hamburg, Germany, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Russian authorities today released 40 food-laden barges seized more than three months ago while on the way down the Elbe River to Berlin. The barges will be returned to Hamburg with their cargos of provisions intact, it was announced.

No German-owned barges have been allowed to pass through the Soviet zone since the blockade was clamped on Berlin.

Truman Casts Vote, Predicts Victory

By Marshall Andrews,
Post Reporter

Independence, Mo., Nov. 2.—President Truman cast the 101st ballot in his home precinct at 10 a. m. today and once more confidently predicted a Democratic victory.

With him were Mrs. Truman, who was today's 102d voter in the precinct, and Miss Margaret Truman, the 103d. Total registration in the precinct, the seventh in Blue Township, Jackson County, was 389. The Trumans headed the registration books, having registered together last September 18 by special action of the election board.

The President entered the town's Memorial Hall this morning behind Mrs. Truman and Margaret, then passed them and strode toward the official table, calling their attention to it with a wave of his hand. He wore a blue suit; Mrs. Truman wore a blue coat with a small brown fur and a blue hat, and Margaret, a black suit with a grey fur and no hat.

Votes Straight Democratic

Mr. Truman gave his name and was handed his ballot, a huge affair big as a one-sheet poster, by Mrs. Emma Flowers who has been a Republican ballot judge in the precinct for twenty-five years. The ballot contained five party tickets, each bearing the party symbol and each containing the names of seventeen national and local candidates. There were the Democratic party symbolized by the Statue of Liberty; the Republican, with the elephant; Socialist with the party seal; Socialist-Labor with an arm and hammer, and Progressive with a liberty bell traditionally cracked.

While flashbulbs flared and photographers jockeyed noisily for position, Mr. Truman walked down the table to the voting booth, followed by his family. It took him only a few seconds to vote the straight Democratic ticket and mark two separate ballots containing five local referendum questions. Then he turned with the big ballot in his hand and folded it for the photographers, after which he unfolded it again and turned back to the booth to go through the motions of marking it for more pictures.

Lines Up Family for Picture

Mrs. Truman and Margaret were still in the voting booths when the President walked up to the ballot box and, under the watchful eye of his brother-in-law, Democratic Receiving Judge George Wallace, placed it in the box. Margaret walked up just as her father finished voting in a flurry of flashlights and the photographers clamored for a family picture. The President turned to his daughter.

"They want you to come up here and line up with me," he said. "Where's your mother?"

He looked toward the voting booths and saw Mrs. Truman talking with some of her friends and called to her:

"Come on. They want you, Missy. You're holding up the procession."

Mr. Truman repeated "you're holding up the procession" four times before Mrs. Truman joined him and he told her: "These are the White House boys; you have to accommodate them" and urged the "White House boys" to "shoot and shoot now."

Has Big "Victory" Smile

Still photographers swarmed over every point of vantage firing flashbulbs until the President said: "Now you're through." When he got in reply, the inevitable "one more," he laughed heartily and posed until the newsreel men, whose battery of sound cameras was blocked by the still photographers, began shouting for pictures. Mr. Truman told the still photographers:

"Got out of the way and let those grinders go to work."

After the movie cameras had stopped grinding, the President was swamped by reporters. The first question was: "Mr. President, how do you think it's going."

"Why, it can't be anything but a victory," he replied with a big smile.

Voting Thrills Margaret

Asked how he voted by a reporter he has known for a long time, Mr. Truman said: "What do you think, Joe?"

He was asked if he had taken his own advice about voting the Democratic ticket straight.

"I'm the sort," he said, "that says 'do as I do and say as I say.'"

Meanwhile a radio man had got hold of Margaret and asked her if this was her first vote in a national election and how she felt about voting for her father. She said she had voted in the 1946 national election but this was her first vote for a presidential candidate.

"I got a thrill," she said, "out of voting for father, but they rushed me through so fast. It was thrilling to see his name up there on the ballot."

Won't Stay Up for Returns

On his way out Mr. Truman was stopped repeatedly as he crossed the hall's basketball court by friends and fellow townsmen who wished him well and shook his hand, and by mothers with awed small fry to be presented. He shook hands with a half-dozen wriggling children and chucked a couple of babies under the chin as he made his way finally to the door and emerged into a drizzling rain.

He had to wait outside for Mrs. Truman and Margaret and was cornered again by reporters. He told them he doubted if he would sit up and listen to election returns tonight.

"I think I'll go to bed," he said. "I don't expect final results until tomorrow."

Lunches at Country Club

This was taken by reporters to mean the President would not accept as final any major trend in the vote but would accept defeat or claim victory only when the official tabulation had reached a point where no last-minute change could affect the result.

Mr. Truman and his family went directly from Memorial Hall to their home, from which the President motored at 1 p. m. to Rockwood Country Club on the outskirts of Independence for luncheon given by Mayor Roger T. Sermon, an old friend. About 30 guests, all men and all old friends of the President, heard him recall his political life among them during which he won a county judgeship twice and lost it once and was twice elected to the United States Senate and finally to the vice presidency. He reminded them that he was practically alone in believing he could win renomination to the Senate in 1940 but had done it—an obvious reference to his present uphill presidential fight.

After the luncheon Mr. Truman returned home; intending later to visit the farm of his brother, J. Vivian Truman near here, if the weather permitted.

Dewey Calmly Awaits Verdict With Family

New York, Nov. 2 (AP). — Gov. Thomas E. Dewey calmly awaited the people's verdict in the presidential election today after he and Mrs. Dewey voted and he chuckled:

"That's two votes we've got, anyhow."

The Republican nominee made the remark as his attractive wife came out of the balloting booth at Public School 18, a few blocks from their legal residence at the Hotel Roosevelt.

A few minutes earlier, at 12:20 p. m., the New York Governor had stepped behind the curtain, pulled the voting machine lever and cast his own ballot.

Takes About 5 Seconds

He was in and out in about five seconds.

During the afternoon the Governor was cheered by a statement issued by his campaign manager, Herbert Brownell, jr.

Brownell said early election reports from Republican State organizations indicated "the Dewey-Warren ticket will be overwhelmingly elected."

Brownell said also there were indications of a record popular vote and that the GOP was counting on that to "insure retention of Republican control of the Senate by at least our present margin" of six seats.

Dewey built his presidential campaign around a drive to preserve the party's Senate majority.

In Obvious Good Spirits

He planned to do that in the company of Mrs. Dewey, their sons, Thomas, 16 and John, 13; his 70-year-old mother, Mrs. George M. Dewey, and a few friends.

In obvious good spirits after sleeping until 10:30 a. m. Dewey left his hotel a few minutes after noon for the polling place. A crowd of several hundred persons was gathered on the sidewalk when he came out to get into his limousine.

The Governor was wearing a grey worsted suit, a figured tie, white shirt and pocket handkerchief and a pearl grey homburg hat.

Mrs. Dewey wore a black woolen suit, a black felt feathered hat, black suede shoes with accessories to match, and a double strand of pearls.

At the polling place there was another big crowd.

The Governor walked briskly to the election desk, set up in a white-brick, first-floor corridor just inside the door. He was greeted by Mrs. R. V. Hough, the election inspector.

Then, while flash bulbs popped and movie cameras whirred, he and Mrs. Dewey signed the registry.

Dewey was voter No. 260, Mrs. Dewey 261.

The Republican nominee was not required to give his occupation. He stood outside the voting booth for more than 10 minutes as photographers called "just one more, please."

Instead of going directly back to the hotel, the Deweys had their chauffeur drive them to East 55th st. and Madison ave.

There they got out and walked 10 blocks down Madison to the hotel at 45th st.

The noontime crowds quickly recognized them. By the time they had walked a couple of blocks there were scores of people tagging along behind.

One man shouted: "Lots of luck there, Dewey." The Governor nodded to him and grinned.

Back at the hotel, the Deweys were joined at lunch by the Governor's mother. Dewey then spent the afternoon resting in his suite and conferring briefly with Brownell.

Prohibitionist Candidate For President Makes Dry Run

Los Angeles, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—The Prohibition Party lost a vote today as election officials refused to allow the party's candidate for President, Dr. Claude Watson, to cast his ballot.

Dr. Watson had made arrangements to cast an absentee ballot sent to him at Winona Lake, Ind. After receiving the ballot, he and his wife decided to fly back to their home here. But Mrs. Watson inadvertently placed their ballots in a suitcase to be brought here by car.

Voting officials ruled the Watsons could not cast their ballots unless they turned in the absentee slips.

VITO IN ROW AT POLLS

New York, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Representative Vito Marcantonio, leftist American Labor Party candidate for reelection, was threatened with arrest today when he got in an argument with an election official at the polls.

A worker checking off a list of voters pledged to support the ALP ticket was ordered away from the polls and Marcantonio protested. Harold Glasser, a special deputy, threatened to arrest him.

A call was made to the State Attorney General's office for a ruling. Officials there said the checkoff was electioneering and, therefore illegal. That closed the incident.

GETS VOTE FROM PARIS

Paris, Nov. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said today she had cast an absentee vote for President Truman.

Asked her plans in the event of a Republican administration after January 20, she smiled and said, "I've got to finish my work here." She is an American delegate to the United Nations.

MAXWELL SURE OF 1 VOTE

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Vegetarian Party's presidential candidate, Dr. John Maxwell of Chicago, made sure of one vote in today's election—his own.

The 85-year-old bearded operator of a vegetarian restaurant had to write in his name because his party is not on the ballot.

Maxwell said that if he could be elected, his first official act would be to sponsor legislation outlawing raising of food for cattle. "This," he said, would solve the world's hunger problem."

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Police today required some reporters covering Gov. Thomas E. Dewey at the polls to remove their press badges on the ground they constituted "electioneering."

The badges were those worn by newsmen who traveled on the Republican presidential nominee's campaign train. They bear the words "Dewey Victory Special" and in larger letters "Press."

At a Brooklyn polling place a Democratic watcher was observed wearing a hand-painted tie bearing the likeness of President Truman.

A patrolman held that the tie was legitimate wearing apparel, but the watchers got together and agreed that the Democrat would wear his coat lapels folded over to hide the President's picture.

Barkley Votes Near Home

Paducah, Ky., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—The Democratic candidate for Vice President of the United States, Senator Alben W. Barkley, went over to his neighbor's house here today and cast his ballot at 12:15 p. m. (CST).

The veteran Kentucky Senator drove through rain to the home of R. L. Lang, where the Lang's Precinct polling place had been set up.

Barkley then returned to his rambling red brick home on the edge of Paducah, where he will await election returns.

Thomas Gay at Polls

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—In high good humor, Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, cast his ballot at 9:05 a. m. (EST) today.

The silver-haired Socialist leader, six times a candidate for the Nation's highest office, exchanged pleasantries with newsmen and cameramen but declined to estimate what vote he would receive.

"But I won't be surprised at a considerable vote," he added.

Water Famine Threatening in San Joaquin Area

Hanford, Calif. (U.P.).—The underground water supply upon which is built one of the richest agricultural empires in the world—California's great San Joaquin Valley—is being pumped out faster than nature can replace it.

Consulting Engineer Harry H. Holley, who has made a career of water supply in the valley, said here recently that—assuming water consumption continues unchecked—there are two possible long-range solutions to the problem: either bring water hundreds of miles south from the Columbia River, or—a remote possibility—distill sea water.

The present Central Valley project's growing irrigation network cannot possibly satisfy the total demand for water, Holley said.

Wartime high prices were largely responsible for the sudden intensification of the danger, he said, since they made it economically possible to sink more deep wells and to cultivate much marginal, previously deserted land throughout the San Joaquin Valley.

Southern States Continue to Spur Construction Pace

Baltimore, Nov. 2 (AP).—Construction south of the Mason-Dixon Line continues to soar upward, the Manufacturers Record reports in its monthly issue out yesterday.

The Record says the total construction awards made in the 16 Southern States during the past 10 months amounts to $2,250,712,000, a gain of 47 per cent over the same period last year.

October contracts alone amounted to $225,308,000, highest of any month this year.

Public and private construction are about equal, the Record reports. Residential building constitutes the largest factor in the private building field, totaling 63 per cent of the $599,849,000 in the field.

Farm accidents increase during harvest time. The first step in safe operation of harvesting machinery is to put it in good condition before harvest time.

Fire's Aftermath Nets Rug Makers

Waterboro, Me. (U.P.). — Last year's forest fire which destroyed this town produced a strange by-product of 40 expert rug hookers and braiders.

The women, who were living in temporary Red Cross metal houses until their new homes were built, met in the town chapel to learn the techniques. A leading expert sent instructions, woolen mills gave materials and a lumber company furnished wood which a volunteer carpenter made into rug racks.

In less than a year the "burned-out ladies" each had at least one rug and many had several to go into their new homes.

Run on Broken Hips

Shun 'Red Dean' Is Counsel Bishop Gives to Clergy

Los Angeles, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Right Rev. F. Eric Bloy, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Los Angeles, today disassociated himself from the political and economic views of the Very Rev. Hewlett Johnson, "Red Dean" of Canterbury Cathedral, who is due here December 9 for a visit.

Bishop Bloy said he had counseled the Episcopal clergy of his diocese against appearing with Dean Johnson, long a storm center because of his Socialist and pro-Soviet opinions.

"As a priest of the church in good standing," said Bishop Bloy, "he will not be denied the use of St. Paul's Cathedral altar for any sacerdotal functions, but I believe it would be unwise for us to appear with Dean Johnson at any mass meeting, for it would surely be misinterpreted as tacit approval of his views."

Mexico Labor Pact Would Blacklist Individual States

Mexico City, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Mexico will reserve the right to exclude States suspected of discrimination against Mexicans from participation in any new migrant labor treaty between this country and the United States, a government spokesman said today.

A treaty under which some 35,000 Mexicans are working as farm workers in the United States was canceled by Mexico October 12. Its cancellation followed the action of United States immigration authorities in permitting a mass illegal crossing of the frontier by thousands of unauthorized Mexican workers.

Mexico later accepted a United States apology as "satisfactory," but firmly insisted the treaty was broken by failure of American immigration authorities to enforce legal entry requirements.

Smith Is Reelected By 12,000 Margin

Record Turnout

Alexandria Is Truman's By 14 Votes

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

Complete but unofficial returns from Alexandria gave Harry S. Truman a scant margin of 14 votes over Thomas E. Dewey in a record vote estimated at 8824.

Senator A. Willis Robertson led the Democratic ticket by rolling up 4807 votes in his contest for the Senate against 2650 for Robert H. Woods, Republican.

Representative Howard W. Smith, receiving the narrowest lead of his career in Alexandria, won over Republican Tyrrell Krum by 358 votes. He has carried his home city of Alexandria in eight of his previous nine elections to Congress.

Smith lost one ward, the Third, unexpectedly, as Krum also won the No. 2 Firehouse precinct of the Sixth Ward, heavily populated by railroad workers and traditionally against Smith.

The Third Ward went to Krum, who is veterans' affairs editor of the Washington Times Herald and a resident of Vienna, Va., by 503 to 448 votes. The largest Negro ward in Alexandria, it gave Truman his largest majority yesterday.

Complete unofficial returns from the city's nine voting places gave:

Dewey-Warren—3903.
Truman-Barkley—3917.
Thurmond-Wright—777.
Wallace-Taylor—67.

In the Senate race, returns showed:

Robertson—4807.
Woods—2650.
Howard T. Carwile—95.
Clarke T. Robb—88.
Mrs. Virginia F. Durr—257.

In the House contest, Alexandria voters gave:

Smith—4133.
Krum—3975.
Frank M. Hurst—190.
Mrs. Sarah D'Avila—172.

Alexandria city only once in recent years has given a majority to a Republican presidential candidate. That was in 1928, when Hoover took the State from Alfred E. Smith. Hoover's margin was 1617 to 1307.

Franklin D. Roosevelt carried the city in each of his four elections, but his majority decreased each time. In 1944 he beat Dewey by 986 votes out of a record 7823 votes cast.

Democratic Representative Howard W. Smith carried Alexandria in each of his nine previous elections to Congress. But Smith's majority, too, was cut down in each election where he faced opposition.

A sharp rise in organized Smith opposition began in 1944, when Independent Candidate Elizabeth C. Murray polled 2326 votes to Smith's 3753. Smith won his closest race two years ago when he defeated Republican Lawrence Michael in the city, 2284 to 1859.

Traditionally, Smith's stronghold in Alexandria has been the Fifth Ward, a residential area on the west side of town where Smith himself lives.

The record unofficial vote of 8824 for the city compared with a total of 7823 votes cast in the presidential election of 1944.

The breakdown of Alexandria's presidential voting follows:

	Truman	Dewey
Ward 1, Armory	435	345
Ward 1, City Hall	326	213
Ward 2	447	790
Ward 3	584	361
Ward 4	576	456
Ward 5, Maury School	430	595
Ward 5, G. W. High School	468	536
Ward 6, Mount Vernon School	393	376
Ward 6, No. 2 Firehouse	258	231
Totals	3917	3903

All-but-complete returns from Virginia's Eighth District early today had assured Democratic Representative Howard W. Smith of reelection to Congress for the ninth time since he first took office in 1930.

With only two of the District's 235 precincts unreported, the unofficial figures gave Smith an overwhelming total of 32,000 votes to 24,446 for Tyrrell Krum of Vienna, former naval officer and Washington newspaper columnist, running on the Republican ticket.

The early returns gave no figures for the other two contestants in the congressional race, Independent Frank Hurst of Alexandria and Mrs. Sarah d'Avila, Progressive, of Arlington, but at no time was either in the running.

Krum Refuses to Concede

At 12:30 a. m., when the total vote unaccounted for was actually less than the margin by which Smith led, Krum still had refused to concede. With some precincts still unreported, he said as far as he was concerned the outcome of the election was "still up in the air."

Both candidates appeared to have won out in their respective home communities. Complete returns from Alexandria, Smith's home city, gave him 3750 votes to 3572 for Krum, while in Fairfax County, home of the Republican aspirant, he led Smith 4908 to 3986.

Krum also won out in Madison County, a Republican stronghold, where he shaded Smith, 577 to 562, and in Greene County, where he polled 394 votes to 255 for Smith.

Eighth District voters cast a record 52,581 votes in the 1946 general election, returning Representative Smith to Congress by a thumping three-to-two margin over three opponents.

Then Smith polled 21,252 votes to 12,950 for his Republican opponent, Lawrence Michael. The Virginia Congressman got his biggest majority to date in 1942, when he achieved a 11,623 margin over H. B. Conlin. Returned regularly to office since 1930, Smith has usually had an easy time getting reelected.

The Eighth District, covering northern Virginia, includes the counties of Albemarle, Arlington, Culpeper, Fairfax, Fauquier, Fluvanna, Goochland, Greene, King George, Loudoun, Louisa, Madison, Orange and Prince William and the cities of Alexandria and Charlottesville.

As a representative of the historic Eighth District—home of four Presidents, Washington, Jefferson, Madison and Monroe—Smith first came into prominence when he was elected in 1930 to succeed R. Walton Moore, Eighth District Representative from 1919 to 1930, who later became Assistant Secretary of State.

Smith has stuck close to a campaign promise made at that time: "I will not pledge my support blindfolded to any unknown measures, any person or any subject, but will use my best judgment and discretion. . . ."

This "best judgment" got him into hot water with New Deal leaders frequently. Outstanding examples were his opposition to Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization plan, and his chairmanship of a committee which investigated activities of the National Labor Relations Board.

In his campaign this fall, Smith advocates an international police force to support United Nations efforts for peace, adequate military preparedness and, on the domestic front, a balanced Federal budget providing for gradual reduction of the national debt.

Born February 2, 1883, at Broad Run, Virginia, Smith graduated from the University of Virginia in 1903, was admitted to the bar the following year, and was appointed judge of the Corporation Court of Alexandria in 1922. In 1928 he resigned this post to accept appointment as judge of the Sixteenth judicial circuit of Virginia. He was first elected to Congress after resigning from this position two years later. He lives at 203 W. Walnut st., in Alexandria.

Tyrrell Krum, retired Naval lieutenant commander and veterans editor for The Washington Times-Herald, is a political newcomer in the Eighth Congressional District. Now chairman of the Fairfax County Republican Committee, he entered politics this year to nose out Charles O. Pratt, Arlington Republican, attorney and former Government employe, for the party nomination in the Congressional primary.

A native of Pontiac, Ill., Krum enlisted in the Marine Corps when he was 18 and served until his discharge the following year, 1919. Later he went to Chicago, where he started as an office boy on the Tribune, and later became a police reporter, covering the famous Loeb-Leopold kidnaping-murder case. In 1927, he received an LL.B. from Northwestern University.

Continuing with his newspaper career, Krum came to Washington in 1936 with International News Service and covered the Supreme Court and the House of Representatives. He applied for a commission in the Navy in 1940 and was assigned to duty with naval intelligence. During 1942 and 1943, he was assigned in a public relations capacity during submarine warfare in the Gulf of Mexico. He then was placed on the Navy retired list with the rank of lieutenant commander.

In 1944, he began his veterans' column for the Times-Herald. Krum led the movement in Fairfax County last winter for a Republican primary system, and was instrumental in gaining approval of the two-party primary held last August. Married, Krum now lives in Vienna, Va.

'New Look' at the Polls . . .

VIRGINIAN VOTES—The sight of Representative Howard W. Smith at the polls in Alexandria is not new. The Virginia Democrat has served nine terms in the House and returns last night virtually assured him of his tenth. It is new, however, to see the judge sans his high, stiff, batwing collar posed by Republican Stanley G. Adams, 42, of Colonial Beach, and Socialist J. Luther Kibler, 81, of Newport News, secretary of the Socialist Party of Virginia.

Truman Holds Strong Lead

Returns from 149 of the district's 164 precincts showed: Bland, 18,544; Adams, 4152; Kibler, 213.

In the Second (Norfolk-Portsmouth) District, what had been predicted as a close fight between Representative Porter Hardy, jr., 45, Democrat, seeking his second term, and Republican Walter E. Hoffman, 41, Norfolk lawyer, appeared to be a lopsided Democratic victory.

Also entered in that race is Jerry Gilliam, Progressive of Norfolk, and Sidney Moore, Portsmouth Socialist.

Returns there, from 109 of 137 precincts, were: Hardy, 17,654; Hoffman, 8817; Gilliam, 350; Moore, 50. At 9:45 o'clock last night Hoffman conceded the election to Hardy.

In the Third District, Rep. J. Vaughan Gary, 56, Richmond lawyer, was opposed by Republican Richard C. Poage, 37, Richmond insurance man, Mary D. Fleet, Richmond Socialist, and David P. Bennett, Communist.

Returns from 123 of 126 precincts in the Third showed: Gary, 31,915; Poage, 10,777; Fleet, 496; Bennett, 810.

There were no contests in the Fourth and Fifth Districts.

In the Sixth District, Democrat Clarence G. Burton, 61, Lynchburg manufacturer; Republican John Strickler, 45, Roanoke lawyer, and J. B. Brayman, Lynchburg Socialist, competed for the House seat vacated by Representative James Lindsay Almond, jr.

Returns there from 120 of 192 precincts: Burton, 14,605; Strickler, 6572; Brayman, 110.

In the Seventh District, Representative Burr Powell Harrison, 44, of Winchester, seeking his second full term in the House, was opposed in a vigorous campaign by Republican Stephen D. Timberlake, 39, Staunton lawyer. Harrison's father, the late Representative Thomas W. Harrison, twice lost his seat to Republicans.

Returns from 223 of the 259 precincts in the Seventh showed: Harrison, 20,794; Timberlake, 13,900.

In the Eighth District, Representative Howard W. Smith, 65, seeking his tenth House term, led Tyrrell Krum, Fairfax Republican; Frank M. Hurst, 42, Alexandria Independent, and Mrs. Sarah H. d'Avila, Arlington Progressive.

Returns from 209 of the 235 precincts there showed: Smith, 23,564; Krum, 15,630; Hurst, 498; d'Avila, 425.

In the Ninth District, running in a tight race for the House seat vacated by John W. Flannagan were Democrat Thomas B. Fugate, Ewing banker and farmer and former campaign manager for Flannagan, and T. Eugene Worrell, 29, Bristol lawyer and Republican. Returns from 233 of the Ninth's 248 precincts showed: Fugate, 32,736; Worrell, 29,981.

Representative Watkins M. Abbitt (D.), 40, of Appomattox, was the unopposed candidate in the Fourth District. Former Commonwealth's attorney of Appomattox, he was first elected to the House last February, to serve the unexpired term of the late Representative Patrick H. Drewry.

In the Fifth District, Representative Thomas B. Stanley (D.), 58, of Staneytown, was unopposed. He was Speaker of the Virginia House of Delegates before he was first elected to Congress in November, 1946.

Virginians at the polls were also handed a separate ballot on a proposed State constitutional amendment, which met negligible opposition. It read, "Shall section 51 of the constitution of Virginia be amended so as to abolish the Joint Committee of the General Assembly on Special, Private and Local Legislation."

This committee, created to examine such bills to determine whether they involve general law or court proceedings was held unnecessary by the 1946 and 1948 sessions of the General Assembly.

Republicans carried Virginia only twice in earlier presidential election years, and each time there were issues other than normal politics involved.

In 1872, when Grant—running for reelection—carried the State by 93,468 votes to 91,654 votes over Horace Greeley, the South was staggering under the weight of reconstruction legislation. In addition, most qualified Southern leaders were banned from national or State office under the fourteenth amendment, which barred from office those who rebelled against the Government to which they previously swore support.

In 1928, when Hoover carried Virginia by 164,609 to 140,146 for Al Smith, repeal of prohibition was an open issue while Smith's Catholicism was a whispered but even larger issue.

Loudoun Vote Gives County To Democrats

The contest for the Presidency was closest, with Truman leading Dewey by only 116 votes.

In the race for House and Senate, Democratic incumbents, Representative Howard W. Smith and Senator A. Willis Robertson, both had leads of more than 1400 over their nearest opponents.

The county went for Roosevelt in 1944 by 1802 votes to Dewey's 1485. Smith carried the county in 1946 when he defeated his Republican opponent, 1458 to 364.

Robertson, running for a two-year term in 1946, received 1404 votes to his opponent's 364.

Dewey-Warren, 1428.
Truman-Barkley, 1544.
Thurmond-Wright, 260.
Wallace-Taylor, 13.
Thomas-Smith, 6.

For United States Senator, with all precincts reporting:

Robertson, 2223.
Woods, 750.
Carwile, 11.
Robb, 2.
Mrs. Durr, 19.

In the House race, with all 28 precincts reporting:

Smith, 2243.
Krum, 840.
Hurst, 23.
Mrs. d'Avila, 14.

Truman Takes Prince William

Prince William County registered a substantial majority for the entire Democratic ticket in balloting which brought out more than 2000 voters, one of the highest turnouts in the county's history.

The county voters gave Senator A. Willis Robertson an 856 margin over Republican Robert H. Woods, and Representative Howard W. Smith a 678-vote lead over Tyrrell Krum, Republican. The Democratic margin on the presidential race, however, was only 402 votes.

County politicos said voting followed the trend of past balloting except for a slight improvement in the GOP columns. Several votes for presidential candidates were disqualified because more than one slate was selected, but the remainder of the ballot was counted.

Many voters failed to vote on the amendment question, declaring they were unfamiliar with the subject.

Tally Completed Early

The polls closed at 6 p. m. after a gray day which brought cloudiness and brief moments of rain. The counting in 16 of the 17 precincts was completed by 9 p. m. and the tally in Manassas, largest in the county, was finished by 10:30 p. m.

With all of the county's 17 precincts reporting, these unofficial totals were recorded:

Dewey-Warren 760.
Truman-Barkley 1162.
Thurmond-Wright 151.
Wallace-Taylor 6.

In the Senate contest, with 17 precincts reporting:

Robertson 1348.
Woods 492.
Carwile 11.
Robb 17.
Mrs. Durr 14.

For House of Representatives, with 17 precincts reporting:

Smith 1352.
Krum 674.
Hurst 56.
Mrs. d'Avila 15.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN
Of Tired Kidneys
If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Arlington Gives Dewey Big Lead

Arlington County landed solidly in the Republican presidential column—as it was expected to—on the basis of unofficial returns from all but one of the county's 24 precincts.

The vote was 10,197 for Dewey-Warren to 7341 for Truman-Barkley. The Wallace Progressives had 247 votes, while the Thurmond States Rights platform received 1026 votes. The Thomas Socialist ticket got 120 votes.

Arlington gave incumbent Senator A. Willis Robertson an easy ride back to the Senate over Republican candidate Robert H. Woods, with a count of 9947 to 6630. Howard H. Carwile (Ind.) polled 239 votes and Mrs. Virginia F. Durr (Prog.) got 828.

In the House race, the count was 9007 for Representative Howard W. Smith (D) to 8488 for Republican Tyrrell Krum; 455 for Frank M. Hurst (Ind.), 582 for Mrs. Sarah d'Avila (Prog.).

County residents cast approximately 20,200 votes in yesterday's election, setting an all-time record.

Arlington County, heaviest voting area in the Eighth Congressional District, is as traditionally Democratic as Virginia—but its electorate has voted the area into the Republican presidential column twice in recent history.

Back in 1928, Arlington, along with the rest of Virginia, voted Herbert Hoover in over Democrat Alfred E. Smith by a 4274-to-1444 count. In the last general election, in 1944, Arlington County went for Thomas Dewey over President Roosevelt by an 8317-to-7122 count, while the Eighth District gave Roosevelt a 5000-vote margin.

Despite the Republican trend in 1944, Democrat Howard W. Smith was top man in the congressional race, polling 7387 county votes to 3807 for his nearest contender, independent Mrs. Elizabeth Chilton Murray; with 3613 for Republican Lawrence Michael, and 266 for Socialist Clarke T. Robb.

In 1946, an off-year, Judge Smith received 21,252 votes in the Eighth Congressional District to 12,950 for Lawrence Michael. In Arlington County, Smith got 5336 votes, while Michael tallied 5212, only 124 fewer.

In the light voting in last August's primary, Smith got 2710 votes to 1768 for Arthur F. Souther, his Democratic rival. The vote for the two Republicans entered in the primary, Tyrrell Krum and Charles O. Pratt, totaled 1063.

As Arlington's population has zoomed upward, its voting strength has increased proportionately. Back in 1940, with an official population of 57,040 residents, Arlington cast about 10,000 votes in the presidential election, while in 1944, with an estimated population of 85,000, the county presidential vote was more than 15,000.

Yesterday's election was the first real test of the new system of districting for the county's 24 precincts. Up until 1947, Arlington voted under an 11-precinct system. But last year, the outmoded election machinery ground to a dead halt and for 36 hours the outcome of the voting was in doubt. When the precinct judges finally came up with the tally, the hue and cry already had begun to improve voting methods.

New Electoral System

Arlington's new 24-precinct electoral system got its first real workout yesterday, and the next time there is a county election, political observers will have a slightly better idea of how the county will vote.

But there were still no well-defined political lines set in the 24-precinct pattern with Representative Howard W. Smith taking both "old" resident and "new" resident precincts, and presidential aspirant Thomas E. Dewey running well away with the county on a precinct-by-precinct basis.

An analysis of the returns showed that only one precinct—Lee, in the heart of Clarendon—stayed traditionally Democratic on a presidential basis.

Tyrrell Krum, who had hoped to beat out incumbent Representative Howard W. Smith, Virginia Democratic stalwart, carried 11 of the first 23 precincts to report. Four of these were precincts made up predominantly of residents who moved into Arlington since or just prior to the World War II expansion—Arlington, Barcroft, Fairlington and Westover. The rest were predominantly "old-time" resident precincts.

'Old Resident' Districts

The 12 precincts which voted against the school bond issue of the first 23 to report were all "old resident districts. Votes for the expenditure of $4,750,000 for new county classrooms came from all "new" resident precincts, as well as from seven "old" resident precincts.

The election machinery under the new system speeded up immeasurably from the fiasco registered in 1947, when the outcome of the election was in doubt for 36 hours. The majority of the county's precincts had finished their vote tally by midnight or a little after.

The preeinct-by-precinct breakdown of Presidential voting for Arlington County:

Glowing Metal Cane Designed for Blind

Durham, N. H. (U.P.).—A blind man's cane that glows in the dark and is tailored to fit the owner's height has been designed by two staff members at the University of New Hampshire.

Built of aluminum with a bronze tip, it "telegraphs" the sound of surfaces against which it is tapped far better than wooden canes.

The handle of the cane is looped so it can be carried by slipping it over the wrist. The loop is covered with neopprene to prevent electric shock should the cane accidentally contact a live wire.

The cane is painted red and fluorescent white.

Apple Grows Big

Record Vote of 114,000 Estimated in Nearby Areas

Under threatening skies, residents of Greater Washington yesterday went to the polls in nearby Maryland and Virginia and cast a record vote estimated at 114,000.

Claims of a vote of from 60 to 75 per cent of the total registration was made by election officials in the nearby areas, in an election notably free of incidents.

In nearby Arlington, the heavy surge of persons to the polls in early morning caused workers at four precincts to issue emergency calls for extra voting booths. Two precincts had to send out for more ballot boxes. Arlington County's record vote of, 1944, of slightly more than 15,000, was already broken by 4:15 p. m., when county officials estimated nearly 17,000 county residents had cast their ballots.

Four Ballots Confusing

Approximately 20,200 persons voted by poll close time at 6 p. m. Although the voting generally went smoothly, many of those at the polls were confused over the four ballots—one main ballot of 28 inches, two others for referenda and one on a State constitution amendment. One woman gave up in disgust and threw her amendment ballot to the floor.

Arlington County police, in scout cars, moved early in the day to remove sandwich board posters urging a vote for County Board Candidate I. Lee Potter. The posters were placed on telephone poles, which police said violated a county zoning ordinance.

Alexandria Vote Heavy

In Alexandria, where a 1944 record vote of 7823 was threatening to topple at 4:30 p. m., estimates on the total vote were running at on the vote ran at 8800.

One Democrat complained that the city Democratic machine had been so apathetic in the presidential race that no Truman-Barkley buttons had been available at party headquarters. "I had to go to the dime store for mine," he said. Truman carried Alexandria by a scant margin of 16 votes.

Some "anti-Truman" activity was noticed in Alexandria, where ballots similar to the Democratic Party sample ballots were being distributed, minus Truman's name. Wallace workers came early to the polling places, but were not active, according to precinct watchers.

In nearby Montgomery County, an 80 per cent vote turnout—about 40,000, was estimated when polls closed. Previous county record, set in 1946, was about 36,000. In several precincts, more than half of the registered voters had cast their ballots by noon.

Precinct workers reported most voters had made up their minds, and refused to accept sample ballots being passed out by party workers. Proponents of the home rule "charter" plan, which was voted in by a 4057 margin counted heavily on the vote of 11,000 new registrants, added to the county's rolls since 1946.

Wallace Workers Active

Wallace workers were active in the Silver Spring and Four Corners areas. The Progressive Party had endorsed the charter form of government for the county.

The heavy Montgomery County vote turnout failed to upset predictions that Representative J. Glenn Beall would be reelected to the House of Representatives. His Democratic opponent, F. Byrne Austin, conceded at midnight.

In Prince Georges County, Wallace workers were active in Greenbelt, where they were campaigning on the idea that the Democrats had raised area rents. Both Republicans and Democrats were claiming responsibility for what appeared to be a 35,000 record county turnout.

C. Maurice Weidemeyer, Anne Arundel County Republican who who opposed Lansdale G. Sasscer, Democratic incumbent, in a race for a House of Representatives seat, was reputedly in trouble in his home precincts. Because of defections within the Anne Arundel County Republican organization, of which Weidemeyer was chairman, some party workers reportedly were asking only for a Dewey vote.

Activity Noticeable

Political activity was so noticeable that in some sections of nearby Maryland, party workers offered to "baby sit" for mothers who wished to go to the polls.

TO MAKE SURE that no last-minute indecision delays them in the voting booth, J. T. Morris, an Upper Marlboro farmer, and his wife go over a sample ballot outside a Prince Georges County poll. Morris was born in Texas 77 years ago, but left the State as a youth to follow the cattle trails and finally settled in Upper Marlboro in 1910, where he met and married Mrs. Morris. Appreciation of the heavy responsibilities borne by every voter was reflected in Morris' comment as he left the polling place. "I just hope we voted right," he said

Frisbie Leads Over Potter In 17 Arlington Precincts

Alfred E. Frisbie (D), incumbent member of the Arlington County Board was leading I. Lee Potter (Ind.), Arlington builder, by a 60-vote margin in a nip-and-tuck race for Frisbie's seat with 23 of the 24 precincts reported in.

Frisbie

The only remaining precinct unreported was Park Lane with a total of 1100 votes.

Jacob C. Bechtel (Ind.), retired carpenter, and Francis J. Clair (Ind.), free lance writer, were trailing badly.

The returns gave Frisbie 8641; Potter, 8581; Clair, 918, and Bechtel, 375.

Battle Over Seat

The contest revolved around the seat held by Frisbie who was appointed last November.

Independents had hoped for a Potter victory to give them the balance of power on the board.

On many issues the current board had split 3-2 with Frisbie, F. Freeland Chew and Basil De-Lashmutt, Democrats, opposing Mrs. Florence Cannon and Daniel A. Dugan, Independents.

Potter's trailing of Frisbie presented a curious contradiction in that Potter was the only county board candidate to come out in favor of the $4,750,000 school bond issue, which itself had been virtually assured of passage.

The 38-year-old Potter is a local builder and has been a resident of Arlington for 28 years. Although he filed for the board as Independent, he is vice-chairman of the Arlington Republican Committee.

Potter's Backing

Potter had the backing of the Citizens Committee for School Improvement and the Better Government League.

Frisbie was a newcomer to the Arlington Political scene until his appointment to a board seat last November to fill a vacancy.

Frisbie, a 37-year-old stockbroker who lives at 636 S. 25th st., Arlington, had declared the school bond issue had no place in the county board race.

During the campaign he called for a high standard of health facilities, police and fire protection, as well as good schools.

2 Disabled Ships With 90 Aboard Tossed by Gale

Ketchikan, Alaska, Nov. 2 (AP).—Two disabled ships, with crews of 90 or more men aboard, were tossed about today as gale winds lashed Gulf of Alaska waters. Coast Guard craft rushed to their aid.

The storm ranged several hundred miles south, to Victoria, British Columbia. Winds raged at 69 miles an hour, with gusts up to 74 miles.

The crews of about 34 men on the Navy tanker Mission Santa Cruz, drifting helplessly off Cape Ommaney, and 56 men on the LST-694, disabled southwest of Dixon Entrance, were apparently in no immediate danger, the Coast Guard said.

The Mission Santa Cruz was en route from Gulf ports to anchorage at Skagway.

Cross Is Burned On School Lawn In Richmond

Richmond, Va., Nov. 2 (Spl.).—A 7-foot wooden cross was burned tonight about 8:30 p. m. on the front lawn of the Fulton Grammar School here. The school, located in a partially Negro section, has been under discussion for a possible shift from white to Negro student body.

The cross was wrapped in newspapers and gasoline. A similar burning took place several months ago.

The incident was apparently not intended to influence the voting since the nearest polling place was eight blocks away and the polls closed at 6 p. m.

Ballots Are Burned

Anderson, S. C., Nov. 2 (AP).—The Anderson Daily Mail said ballots of all parties were burned today at one Anderson precinct after election managers decided to move the polling place across the street.

The newspaper quotd R. L. Lee, an election manager, as saying he burned the ballots after Election Commissioner Frank Hamlin told him they could not be moved to the new location.

Camera Shot Irks Warren

Oakland, Calif., Nov. 2 (AP).—Gov. Earl Warren, the Republican vice presidential nominee, was photographed when casting an early ballot today and it made him thoroughly angry.

While Warren was behind the curtain in the booth in a residential garage polling place, a photographer raised his camera over the curtain top, and snapped a picture. Interrupting his voting, Warren emerged, his face flushed.

"Don't you know it is illegal to photograph a person while he is voting?" the Governor demanded.

"I want you to destroy that film."

The photographer apologized, and the Governor returned to his voting. Friends said they had never seen the usually calm Warren so aroused.

The San Francisco office of Life magazine said the film was destroyed at the Governor's request, and that the Governor, after voting, received an explanation.

Life representatives said the Governor had been posing just before entering the booth. He had been instructed by movie cameramen about emerging, and the Life photographer assumed Warren also was posing in the booth, not actually voting.

Dewey Gets Fairfax Vote; 1210 Ahead

Republican Governor Dewey carried Fairfax County, Va., with complete returns in. Dewey carried the county with a 1210 lead over President Harry Truman.

Democratic Senator A. Willis Robertson kept his early lead over Republican Robert H. Woods to win his battle for reelection.

Progressive Candidate Virginia F. Durr, Socialist Clarke T. Robb, and Independent Howard T. Carwile were running far behind in the Senate contest.

In the race for the House seat from the Eighth Congressional District, Republican Tyrrell Krum pulled 922 votes ahead of Democratic incumbent Howard W. Smith to carry the county.

Mrs. Sarah d'Avila, Progressive Party candidate, and Frank M. Hurst, Independent, were far behind the major party candidates.

Dewey-Warren—4929; Truman-Barkley—3719; Thurmond-Wright—699; Wallace-Taylor—69.

For the Senate, with 28 precincts reporting:

Robertson—4440; Woods—3771; Carwile—162; Robb—159; Mrs. Durr—361.

Smith—3986; Krum—4908; Hurst—224; Mrs. d'Avila—162.

Fairfax went for Dewey in 1944 by a majority of nearly 500 out of 7819 votes cast. Hoover beat Alfred E. Smith there in 1928, but Roosevelt carried the county easily in the three intervening elections.

Democratic Representative Howard W. Smith carried Fairfax in his nine previous elections to the House and consistently ran ahead of Roosevelt. Smith's strength in the past has been almost evenly divided over the county, with slightly more support coming from farmers in western districts.

The precinct-by-precinct breakdown of Presidential voting for Fairfax County:

Capital Parties

Statler 'Hq' Of GOP Tops Lively Spots

Liveliest spot in town last night was Republican headquarters at the Statler Hotel.

As election parties that began at cocktail time and ended with early morning breakfasts broke up, guests stopped in at headquarters for the latest news.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet, and the Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong were among the guests at the dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse.

Also in the company were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, Sir Gordon and Lady Munro, Gen. Sir William Morgan and Mrs. Arthur Woods.

Gen. and Mrs. Lauris Norstad were among guests of Col. and Mrs. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton at a buffet supper, and Gen. and Mrs. A. C. Wedemeyer were entertained at the dinner party given by Miss Doris Fielding Reid.

Arthur Gardner, assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Gardner had a late party—a buffet supper for some 30 guests—to "celebrate the election."

Today they will leave for their home in Detroit for a visit. Gardner returning next Monday, Mrs. Gardner to remain for a long stay.

Mrs. Wade Ellis invited half a dozen close friends in at 10 p. m. to watch the television proceedings, and Republicans Bernard Gallagher and Mrs. Gallagher and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of the late Vice President Charles Curtis, and Mrs. Parker West among their guests for election night dinner at the Metropolitan Club.

Col. and Mrs. Horace Smith gave a dinner for 14 at their house in Georgetown, and the Assistant Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Gordon Gray were also hosts at a dinner party. Guests of the Gerhard Gessells, numbering about 100, were invited to drop by "after 9."

Festivities began early yesterday at the cocktail party given by Mrs. Nina Lunn, daughter of Mrs. Wallace White, wife of the Senator from Maine. Mrs. Lunn and her guests went on to Republican headquarters and stopped in at one or two of the clubs. A breakfast given by Mrs. Burks Summers at Holly Oaks, her home near Rockville, Md., began at midnight.

Slot Machines Loaded

Chicago (U.P.).—Cook County Sheriff Elmer M. Walsh complains that owners of illegal slot machines are making weight lifters out of his deputies. The operators, to prevent their machines from being lugged away to destruction dumps, have taken to filling the slots bases with cement or lead. The sheriffs had to call a tow truck to uproot one machine from a concrete floor.

Results Elate Democrats in Ring Building

A confident but restrained reserve was the temper of several thousand Republicans watching the returns at the Statler Hotel last night compared with an atmosphere of gaiety among hundreds of Democrats at their Ring Building second floor headquarters.

When the big scoreboards in the Statler's Presidential and Congressional rooms indicated good news for the Dewey-Warren ticket, the applause was dignified and subdued.

But when the returns on the radio and television sets in the Ring Building showed the Truman-Barkley slate forging ahead, the younger-looking crowds in the offices there showed uninhibited jubilation. Free-flowing bourbon did not tend to dampen spirits either.

At one point, when early returns showed Truman about 600,000 ahead, Victor H. Harding, executive secretary of the Democratic Congressional Committee, shouted, "The American people are justifying the faith we had in them, and the President has done a marvelous job of pulling senatorial and congressional candidates along with him toward victory."

Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan attributed early trend lations favoring Truman to:

"Mr. Truman's and the Democratic Party's forthright and complete statement on their views about farmers, as opposed to Dewey's silence and sinister innuendos by Harold Stassen."

Mrs. Brannan attributed promising early returns "to Truman's fight against high prices."

Miss Perkins in High Spirits

Miss Frances Perkins, Civil Service Commissioner and former Secretary of Labor, dropped in at the Ring Building headquarters briefly, wearing a black, flowing satin cape and a new upswept hair-do without her famous hat. She appeared in high spirits as reports of Truman leads came in.

Truman's sweep in many sections in the early returns were ascribed by one pretty blonde Democratic worker to "his personal appeal to the Nation's woman."

Washington cab drivers, ever fair barometers of public opinion on some subjects, remarked at the absence of enthusiasm of election night on the streets. Most agreed that could only happen in voteless Washington.

A Woman Spurned

St. Louis (U.P.).—Miss Eula Rose Percival was determined to have it out with her boy friend even though he was deliberately avoiding her. To police who caught her tampering with her friend's automobile, Miss Percival explained that she was letting the air out of the tires so he couldn't get away without talking to her.

Double DANDERINE GUARANTEES DANDRUFF RELIEF
Kills dandruff-causing germ*—on contact!

Works so effectively it's been used in some of the most stubborn cases—with remarkable results!

Have you just about given up trying to get real dandruff relief? Have you used just about everything in a fruitless effort to fight this barrier to popularity and success? If you have, take heart. For as thousands know from experience, dandruff can be relieved—effectively—with Double Danderine.

It has been revealed by authorities that a germ causes the most common kind of dandruff. And only by destroying this germ can real relief be obtained. Ordinary preparations that merely remove loose dandruff (which you can do with plain water and brushing) don't destroy it. But Double Danderine is different. Double Danderine actually kills this germ—on contact!

That's why we say Double Danderine guarantees dandruff relief. Try it. If you're not completely satisfied, return the empty bottle and your money will be refunded.

Ask for Double Danderine. It's not a shampoo, not a general antiseptic, but a special dandruff preparation that really works!

*Pityrosporum Ovale, the germ which leading authorities say is the cause of the most common kind of dandruff.

Dewey, Beall Win In Montgomery

Montgomery County, Md., voters yesterday gave Governor Dewey a 12-to-7 margin over President Truman, and virtually assured Republican J. Glenn Beall's return to Congress.

Unofficial returns from all of the county's 51 voting precincts gave Dewey and his running mate, Governor Warren, 23,076 votes to 14,456 recorded for Truman and Barkley.

F. Byrne Austin, Takoma Park Democrat whose followers sought

REP. J. GLENN BEALL
Republican

a 2000-vote lead in Montgomery County to overcome Beall's expected heavier vote in the four other counties of the Sixth Congressional District, trailed his opponent in Montgomery County by almost 5000 votes.

The Montgomery County unofficial total in the Congressional race was: Beall, 20,571; Austin, 15,426.

Conceding defeat, Austin issued a statement last night thanking his Montgomery County supporters for "the splendid vote given me." He pointed out that in the county he trailed Beall by far less than Truman's loss to Dewey by some 8800 votes.

In voting Governor Dewey their favorite as next President of the United States, Montgomery County voters gave him an over-all lead of 8620 votes.

In 1944, Dewey received 5076 more votes than were cast for President Roosevelt despite the fact that there were many more registered Democrats than Republicans.

County books yesterday showed 34,119 Democrats eligible to vote and 14,873 Republicans. Those who declined to state their political affiliation numbered 2874.

Roosevelt carried the county in 1932, 1936 and 1940. In 1928, Montgomery Countians voted with the rest of the Nation against Al Smith in favor of Republican Herbert Hoover.

Montgomery Votes Charter

second time the "home rule" issue had gone before people.

In 1946, a proposed charter was defeated by a vote of 15,683 to 14,049.

Originally started in 1938 by a Montgomery County Civic Federation study, the charter campaign was taken over six years ago by the County Charter Committee which carried through a persistent, intensive drive.

The committee was organized in 1942 as an outgrowth of a Brookings Institution recommendation that a charter form of government be adopted. The charter committee that year succeeded in electing a charter board.

Defeated by 1635 Votes

The subsequent charter drawn up and voted on in 1944 was defeated by 1634 votes in the face of all-out opposition from the then entrenched Democratic administration.

In the 1946 election, another charter board was approved by the electorate. Political observers credited charterites with unseating the Democratic administration in that election, a move which led to a Republican sweep in the county.

In contrast to the 1944 charter election, yesterday's referendum was marked by a less vigorous opposition. Both major parties took a position of neutrality in the issue.

Upheld in Court

A court fight last summer to keep charter off the ballot was unsuccessful. Opponents claimed a budgetary provision conflicted with the State Constitution, but the Maryland Court of Appeals upheld the charter drafters.

Basically, the charter voted on yesterday would set up a seven-member county council to pass all local laws now enacted by the Maryland General Assembly. Such legislation must be enacted during the month of May each year. A $12,000-a-year county manager with broad powers would be hired.

Some county offices, including that of the treasurer, would be abolished. Replacing them would be departments of finance, public works and a county attorney's office.

Under charter, the council has authority to issue bonds, a power not held by the five county commissioners.

Va. College Registrars Name Prufer President

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Julius Prufer, assistant registrar of Roanoke College, today is the new president of the Virginia Association of Collegiate Registrars.

He was named yesterday at the associatioon's annual meeting here, and succeeds Miss Mary Fugate, dean and registrar of Averett College.

Transit Pay Hike Asked

Richmond, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Union transit workers in Richmond, Norfolk and Portsmouth are asking wage increases approximating 25 cents an hour. They filed a notice of contract negotiations yesterday with Governor Tuck's office.

Auto Output Up 10% In First Nine Months

Detroit, Nov. 2 (AP).—The auto industry is moving steadily toward the second five million vehicle production year in its history, the Automobile Manufacturers Association reports. It built 5,358,420 units in 1929.

The association reported September output in the United States totaled 413,618 vehicles and that for the year's first nine months factory sales numbered 3,837,860 cars, trucks and buses. This is an increase of nearly 10 per cent over the same period of 1947.

Hard Cider Sold To School Pupils, Warrant Charges

Salisbury, Md., Nov. 2 (AP).—Mrs. William W. Shores of nearby Fruitland was held in $500 bail for grand jury action today on a charge she sold hard cider to students at Suitland Grammar School.

Mrs. Shores operated a small store near the school. She was arrested on a warrant after complaints were made by the parents of two schoolboys.

School authorities said the two boys returned to classes yesterday after being expelled for going to the store.

Fifth Md. District Reelects Sasscer

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, Prince Georges County Democrat, yesterday was reelected to Congress from Maryland's Fifth District for his sixth consecutive term.

He defeated Republican C. Maurice Weidemeyer, an attorney, 45,896 to 30,944 for a plurality of 14,952.

Weidemeyer campaigned against Sasscer in 1944, and that year the veteran Democrat beat him by 23,497 votes, or 51,318 to 27,821.

TP	County	Sasscer	Weidemeyer
19	Anne Arundel	9,103	9,044
10	Calvert	2,068	1,435
14	Charles	2,294	2,137
7	Howard	2,906	2,370
46	Prince Georges	19,029	10,629
14	St. Mary's	2,689	1,284
110	Co. Total	38,179	26,899
38	Balto. City	7,807	4,045
148	Gr. Total	45,896	30,944

Sasscer confidently announced his victory when his lead mounted to 10,000 with only 31 of the 148 precincts in the Fifth District missing.

"The general support throughout my district was gratifying," said Sasscer in his victory announcement. "It was particularly so to receive the large support after five terms in the House."

In conceding defeat, Wiedemeyer said the returns convinced him that "the Republican Party is making gains over the strongly entrenched Democratic machine."

"Sasscer is on his way out," said Weidemeyer. "He is losing ground and the Republican Party is on the upsurge in the Fifth District."

The Fifth District includes 38 polling places in the city of Baltimore. All of these had been reported, giving Sasscer 7868 and Weidemeyer 4045—a plurality in Baltimore for the incumbent Democrat of 3823.

Although Governor Dewey was only slightly behind President Truman in Prince Georges County—a Sasscer stronghold in the Fifth District—Sasscer had nearly a 2-to-1 lead over Weidemeyer in the county.

Maryland's Fifth District has been returning Congressman Sasscer to the House with clock-like regularity since he won the seat made vacant by the death of Stephen W. Gambrill in a special election February 3, 1939.

The white-haired veteran has been elected by majorities of never less than 10,000 since that time. He rolled up his biggest plurality—11,523 votes—in 1944. That year his Republican foe was the same one he faced this year, Weidemeyer.

Sasscer was born in Upper Marlboro and attended Central High School here. The veteran Congressman also is a tobacco farmer, lawyer, banker and newspaper publisher and has been successful in all of these endeavors.

His one set-back in political life was when he lost the nomination for Governor of Maryland in the year prior to his election as Representative. He threw Prince Georges County's votes to Herbert R. O'Conor, who then was elected Governor. Shortly after the election, Congressman Gambrill died. Sasscer, who had served in the Maryland Senate since 1922, announced his candidacy for the seat of his close friend and was elected in a special election February 3, 1939.

He was married to Agnes Coffren in 1919. A son and two daughters blessed the union. Sasscer found time from his political life to serve 13 months in France with the AEF, like President Truman, an officer in the Field Artillery. He accepted the New Deal and campaigned for Roosevelt throughout his four terms as President.

Sasscer defeated his primary opponent, George Sachse, in Prince Georges County by a vote of 7024 to 1359 and carried every precinct in the district to win by a landslide. Loss of Anne Arundel, Sachse's home county, by Sachse was declared an indication that Sasscer would defeat Weidemeyer, whose greatest strength also is in that county.

Congressman Sasscer, it is said, has served his district well and his door has always been open to his constituents in the six counties making up the district, Anne Arundel, Calvert, Charles, Howard, St. Marys and Prince Georges, together with the Baltimore City Twenty-first, Twenty-second and Twenty-fourth Wards; the Third, Fourth, Fifth and Ninth Precincts of Ward 18, and Precincts 9, 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14 of Ward 25.

He has waged continuous warfare for betterment of the lot of the tobacco farmer of southern Maryland, and has been successful in obtaining many favors for the voters who are employed in the military installations in his district, including the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

No candidate opposing him has ever come within 10,000 of his majority, and it is said that he could count on the solid vote of Prince Georges County for any office in the land, including the White House residency.

Weidmeyer, like Sasscer, is a lawyer and maintains offices in Washington. He entered the field of politics in 1943 when he filed for Republican candidate for Representative from the Fifth Maryland District.

He was born and reared in the rural section of Baltimore County, attended public schools and was graduated from Catonsville High School. He also attended Johns Hopkins University, Peabody Conservatory of Music in Baltimore and was graduated from Columbus University in Washington. At law school he was president of his freshman class and of his postgraduate clas.

Nearly 20 years ago, his father, Monterey F. W. Weidemeyer, acquired considerable property in Anne Arundel County and built a home at Forest Glen. His father also is owner of a building development in Howard County.

Election Day Just Tuesday In Voteless Capital City

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Washington, the city toward which presidential candidates have been shaping their every word and move for the past four months, took Election Day yesterday just like any other Tuesday.

At lunch time, while auto caravans toured the streets and alleys of other cities rounding up every loose vote, motorists in Washington wound around downtown streets in the perpetual search for an open parking meter.

At home, housewives planned the family dinner, undisturbed by the last-minute phone calls which eager politicos were making in other cities. Some spent the day in District Court listening to the unraveling of the latest "juicy" divorce case. Courts and other municipal units were shut tight in the rest of the country.

Their husbands downtown plugging away at the endless stream of paper work which makes the Government tick heard no blaring loudspeakers urging them to go to the polls for Joe Schmaltz—or any other would-be officeholder, for that matter.

One sound could be heard on the District's main corner, 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.—the steady pounding of pneumatic hammers continuing the cycle of tearing up and filling in the street—the Commissioners' antinoise order notwithstanding.

There were some indications here that the rest of the Nation was busy electing a Chief Executive and a new Congress, however. On a bus, one woman was seen shaking her head. "Gee, I wonder what chance Margaret will have to be an opera singer when Harry loses the White House."

Thirsty exiles from Maryland and Virginia converged on District bars for a spot or two as they watched the election returns come in. Bars across the District lines were closed during polling hours. However, District tipplers continued hoisting another at their favorite bistro, election or no.

The official circles in the District carried on business as usual. The War Department held a press conference. The Commissioners, Washington's city fathers, held two closed conferences and reserved decision on both matters. District employes walked about in the fresh air at lunch time, some carrying the wife's list of errands to be accomplished.

About 7 p. m., as most polls were closing about the country and the suspense of "sweating out" the final count started, one male reassured another as they sauntered along Pennsylvania ave. nw., "Sure, I voted today. My wife asked do you want oatmeal or cornflakes and I voted for cornflakes. I like to hear them crackle."

And so another election day passed in the District, the Nation's voteless island.

Beall Wins Reelection To Congress

Political success of Republican Representative J. Glenn Beall, of Frostburg, Md., was continued yesterday, with nearly complete returns assuring his reelection.

He garnered 52,188 votes in 253 of the 280 polling precincts in Maryland's Sixth Congressional District to win handily over his Democratic opponent, F. Byrne Austin, Takoma Park wholesaler and Democratic Party wheelhorse of Montgomery County, who received 40,560 votes.

Austin had conceded Beall the victory at midnight when he was trailing the incumbent Congressman by some 9000 votes, with slightly over half the district's total number of precincts tallied.

Austin's statement declared:

"It now appears that Congressman Beall has been reelected. I am sending him my congratulations upon his victory. I wish to thank all of the people throughout this district who worked so hard in my behalf.

"I believe that the great public interest shown in the vital issues brought forward in this campaign will result in benefit to our district and to our country."

The Sixth District includes the counties of Montgomery, Frederick, Washington, Allegany and Garrett.

Republican Beall was first elected to the House in 1942 and coasted to easy victories in the 1944 and 1946 congressional elections.

So strong had become his position by the May 3 primary this year that he was unopposed for the Republican nomination. Democrat Austin was conceded by some party leaders and rank and file members of the party to be only a "second choice candidate."

A vigorous pre-election campaign was staged by Austin, a lifelong resident of Takoma Park and a party worker of long standing.

While few roadside campaign pictures of Beall were noted, motorists all over the Sixth District were confronted with pictures, signs and banners urging them to vote for Austin.

Pre-election dopsters predicted that Beall's support of the Taft-Hartley law would cost him some votes in the industrial upper part of the district, where labor leaders were said to be working against him.

A veteran of World War I, Beall is married and has three sons. Born in Frostburg, Md., he is 54 years old. Much of his past support has come from the numerous fraternal organizations to which he belongs.

Truman Wins Prince Georges With Margin of 155 Votes

President Truman squeezed by Governor Dewey by only 155 votes in Prince Georges County yesterday as the county cast a record 29,593 votes.

The vote for the two other Presidential candidates, Wallace and Thurmond, was negligible.

Dewey-Warren, 14,719.
Truman-Barkley, 14,874.
Wallace-Taylor, 170.
Thurmond-Wright, 67.

Despite the closeness of the presidential vote, the Democrats won by almost 2 to 1 in the county's only other contest.

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, Democratic incumbent, seeking his sixth term in Maryland's Fifth Congressional District, outpolled Republican C. Maurice Weidemeyer in the county, 19,029-to-10,629.

The vote cast yesterday reflected a turnout of better than 65 per cent of the county's 45,000 registered voters.

Typical were the votes cast in Chillum No. 1 and Chillum No. 3 polling places, both in Mt. Rainier. In Chillum No. 1, of a possible 1500 votes, 1115 were cast. In Chillum No. 3 there were 623 of a possible 823 votes.

Yesterday's vote kept Prince Georges County in the Democratic column safely where it has remained since 1930. The county has not gone Republican since 1928, the Hoover-Smith year, although Democratic margins have not always been substantial.

Pick Up Marker

The county went for Roosevelt in 1944, but only by virtue of its soldier vote. The vote was 14,006 for Roosevelt and Truman and 13,750 for Dewey and Bricker. Until the soldier vote was counted, it appeared that Dewey and Bricker had carried the county.

Sasscer, who has been the county's Congressman since 1939, when he succeeded the late Stephen W. Gambrill, triumphed in 1944 by a wide margin, even though the presidential race was close.

That year he defeated Weidemeyer—his opponent again this year—by 18,477 to 8098 in the county. Sasscer carried the Fifth District in 1944, 51,318 to 27,821.

Political observers had prognosticated that Sasscer again would have little difficulty in returning to Capitol Hill.

Britain Lowers Export Goal

London, Nov. 2 (AP).—Britain's export goal for next year was announced today as 155 per cent of 1938 exports—an increase over this year only half as big as the government had hoped to achieve.

Harold Wilson, president of the Board of Trade, said some export targets have even been cut below this year's levels "largely because of severe import restrictions abroad and growing competition for overseas markets."

Six weeks ago Wilson told the House of Commons the government hoped to export next year 160 per cent as much as it did in 1938.

New Fever Thermometer

A new kind of fever thermometer, virtually unbreakable and as easy to read as a watch, has been invented, according to the American Magazine. It's made almost entirely of metal, uses no mercury, and requires no shaking down after use. The unit has a bimetallic control which expands with heat and activates the pointer on a watch-like dial.

Dewey Pulling into Lead Over Truman in Maryland

Edward A. Garmatz, Democrat. Complete but unofficial reports gave Garmatz, 31,981; John A. Janetzke, Republican, 13,009, and Philip C. Kulinski, Progressive, 1405.

Fourth District—Representative George H. Fallon, Democrat. Unofficial but complete tallying gave him 38,775 votes; James W. Miller, Republican, 21,303; Dr. J. E. T. Camper, Progressive, 6555.

Fifth District—Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer, Democrat. Unofficial but complete, gave Sasscer 45,981 votes as against 30,944 for G. Maurice Weidemeyer, Republican.

Sixth District—Representative J. Glenn Beall, Republican. With 253 out of 280 precincts reporting, F. Byrne Austin, Democrat, conceded. The tally at the time: Beall, 52,188; Austin, 40,560.

President Truman piled up a lead of 23,427 votes in traditionally Democratic Baltimore City, but it fell far short of the 50,000 margin rolled up by President Roosevelt running for his fourth term against Governor Dewey in 1944.

That was the first straw in the ill wind that blew in the Free State for Truman. Back in 1944, F.D.R. had to overcome the 28,000 margin accumulated by Dewey in the 23 Maryland counties. Political observers had felt that Truman would have to do as well.

Baltimore Gives Wallace 7192

The Baltimore City vote went as follows: Truman, 134,293; Dewey, 110,866. The great bulk of Wallace's ballots came from Maryland's major city, 7192, and Thurmond similarly received his largest vote in the city, 1547.

Anne Arundel County, which includes Annapolis, provided a second indication that the GOP candidate would be ultimate victor in State. Complete returns of the county gave Dewey 10,893 votes, substantially the same ballot he got four years ago in his first race for the White House. But Truhan's 8713 fell short of F. D. R.'s vote by some 1500.

Similarly, in Howard County, the Democratic candidate again lost ground over the party nominee of '44, getting but 2725 votes against Dewey's 3113.

Montgomery Big Dewey Help

It was Montgomery County, with a large suburban Washington population, which gave the Governor of New York his biggest county boost, some 8500 more votes than it gave the White House incumbent. The Montgomery count: Dewey, 23,076; Truman, 14,456.

Votes from other completed counties were as follows: Talbot—Truman, 2445; Dewey, 3585. Queen Anne—Truman, 2660; Dewey, 2038.

Six of the seven proposed amendments to the Maryland Constitution were favored early today on the basis of returns from more than half of the State's 1347 polling places. One of those gaining strength was an amendment to limit the tenure of the Governor to two consecutive terms.

With 773 polling places reporting, the two-term amendment vote was 93,748 for, 80,451 against.

In a referendum to determine whether Commissioner of Motor Vehicles W. Lee Elgin will remain in office, 821 polling places returned a vote of 90,005 against his removal, and 78,384 in favor.

The only suggested amendment which trailed was one which would prevent a community from annexing new territory unless its residents approved the move in a referendum. With 587 polling places still to be heard from, the amendment trailed 9060.

Religious gifts 107,071 to 40,798—768 polling places.

Expert Answers 11 Questions Most Often Asked on Polls

Many questions are asked about public opinion polls, especially during the heat of a presidential campaign. As a service to readers, we present excerpts from "A Guide to Public Opinion Polls" by George Gallup, director of the Gallup Poll, which is a regular news feature of this newspaper. The questions answered here are the ones most frequently asked by the public about scientific polling.—The Editor.

1. "Why haven't I been interviewed? Why have I never heard of anyone who has been interviewed?"

These questions come up more frequently than any others that people ask about modern public opinion surveys. The reason for this is that most persons do not understand how it is possible to get an accurate measurement of public opinion when only a small part of the total population is interviewed.

Old-fashioned "straw polls" relied almost entirely for their accuracy on numbers. Modern polls rely for their accuracy on an entirely different principle—the careful selection of a small but representative cross-section.

In this respect, modern surveys merely apply to public opinion research certain well-established procedures which have been used for years in the fields of engineering, medicine, education and all the social sciences. For example, when an engineer wishes to judge the quality of ore in a mine, he examines a few "samples." From these samples he makes a highly accurate estimate of the amount and quality of ore in the mine.

Similarly, samples chosen to represent public opinion provide a faithful picture of the total electorate. It is of little consequence whether this image is life-size or whether it is reduced to a fraction of the original, just as a photograph can be reduced in size and still remain a truthful and accurate portrait.

No case has yet been recorded of a Nation-wide poll which has gone wrong because too few persons were interviewed. The Literary Digest poll of 1936 sent ballots to more than 10 million persons and yet was less accurate than modern polls embracing less than 1 per cent of this number.

The odds against any one person being interviewed in a modern sampling poll are gigantic. Suppose a poll in any given week covers a total of 3000 persons. The chance of being interviewed that week are, then, 3000 out of about 94 million, the number of adults in the country, or 1 chance in 31,000.

With a sample of 3000 taken weekly, a total of 156,000 persons would be reached in a year, or less than 1 per cent of the total adult population. Since the average life expectancy of a person reaching the age of 21 is about 50 years, this means that the average person would have less than 1 chance in 10 of ever being interviewed in his lifetime, with samples based upon an average of 3000 per week.

2. "What is the accuracy record of polls in their election surveys?"

The institute has made 197 pre-election surveys since it was organized in 1935. It also has records of 141 election forecasts made in this country by other polling organizations and 66 elections made by foreign affiliates of the Gallup Poll. The mean average error of these 404 predictions is 3.9 per cent and the same for the Gallup Poll's own predictions. Gallup Poll foreign affiliates have a record of 3.5 per cent.

In the 1944 presidential election the Institute's error for its national forecast was 1.8 per cent; its average State-by-State error for the 48 States was 2.5 per cent.

An analysis of the error registered in several chronological periods in the history of polling gives an indication of the progress being made in achieving greater accuracy. Of 392 predictions, 136 were made between 1936 and October 1940. The mean average error for that period was 5.6 per cent. In the next four years, up to October 1944, the average error dropped to 3.4 per cent for 109 predictions. And from November 1944 to December 1947 a total of 147 predictions were made with an average error of only 2.9 per cent.

3. "What chance is there that polls will make wrong election forecasts?"

When poll forecasts go wrong, they still should be reasonably close to the mark, if the best practices are followed. A poll might be "wrong" in naming the winner, yet be within one half of 1 per cent of the true division of the vote. Accuracy of polls in a scientific sense should be judged solely on how closely they predict the actual division of votes on candidates, or the division of opinion on issues.

The outcome of a national election might be determined by an extremely small number of votes, as in the case of the 1916 election. Polling machinery has not reached, and probably never will reach, the degree of accuracy necessary to forecast an election decided by fewer votes than the margin of error under which a poll operates. Since this margin of error averages about 2 to 3 per cent, under the best conditions, it is evident that unless a candidate gets 53 per cent or more of the two-party vote, his victory in terms of popular votes cannot be forecast with complete certainty.

One of the things which experience has taught is that accurate predictions of the division of votes in the electoral college is an almost impossible feat. The reason for this is plain. A mere 10 votes out of a total of 30 million cast in the 10 largest States could change a total of 249 of the 531 electoral votes of the country. To measure political sentiment with this degree of accuracy would require methods with the precision of the finest tools used in the physical sciences.

4. "Don't polls start 'Band-Wagon' movements? Aren't polls harmful in that they not only report but influence election results?"

No objective evidence has been found to support the contention that poll predictions influence voters. And there is a mountain of evidence to the contrary.

Those who conduct polls are in an excellent position to determine band-wagon influence because they measure public opinion at several points in time. If the band-wagon factor were actually important, then certainly in the case of a great many elections there must be evidence of this general upward trend in the case of the leading candidate's following. That this is not the case has been demonstrated in many elections and on many issues.

Election results covered by the Institute show there is no general tendency for the winning candidates to increase their lead after poll results have been announced.

5. "How do you select the people to be interviewed?"

In the first place the sample, or national cross section, must include the right proportion of citizens from every walk of life. This means that a careful study must be made of the population structure. By an large, the most important factors which have to be considered are occupational groups, income levels, political preferences, age, education, racial and relgious groups. And these major groups must be represented correctly by cities of various sizes, and by rural areas. On occasion, other factors may be found to be important. For one example, on some issues which involve labor unions it may be important to test the sample to see that it contains the right number of union members.

Typically, however, when a cross-section correctly represents the major occupational and income groups, and is distributed strictly according to population, the other factors, such as labor union members, as a rule, are found to be included in proper porportions.

By examining Government data and election figures information on these major "controls" can readily be obtained. On other points it may be necessary for the polling organization to collect its own information. When all the facts regarding the basic population structure of a city or of a nation are known, the job of laying out a sample is not difficult. For example, if 20 per cent of the adults of the nation are engaged in farming, then obviously 20 per cent of the total sample for the nation must consist of farmers. If 20 per cent of all the adults of the country are between the ages of 21 and 29 years of age, then 20 per cent of the total sample must come from this group. By following this procedure, every group and every area of the country can be properly represented in the sample.

6. "Are cross-sections always the same?"

No. Which kind of a sample is used depends on the issue being tested. On social issues a cross-section embracing the whole adult population is preferable. However, such a cross-section would not be representative of the voting population of the United States since many adults do not and cannot vote. For example, in Southern States the proportion of nonvoting is higher than it is in Northern States. There are several reasons for this, one of which is the poll tax, and another the barriers placed in the way of Negro voting. Or, again, in Northern States, persons in the very poorest level are less likely as a rule to vote than persons of higher incomes. Therefore, on questions involving strictly political matters, the voting population must constitute the basis of the cross-section.

7. "How does an interviewer go about his work?"

An interviewer is sent an assignment asking him to interview a number of people, usually between 10 and 25. He is told to interview a certain number in each of four socio-economic groups in his community, how many men to interview, how many women, how many persons in each income level, how many farmers, if any, and so forth.

Toward the close of each interview, the interviewer obtains and records many facts about the person interviewed, including his oc-

Weak, Watery Blood Blamed for Making Men and Women Look and Feel Older THAN THEIR YEARS

How do you feel at the end of a day? Is that old time pep and drive lacking? Have you checked-up on your blood strength lately? Thousands now regaining glowing good looks and vitality through the release of vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a general run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that S88 Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the S88 Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, S88 Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on S88 Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. S88 Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Expert Answers 11 Questions Often Asked Concerning Polls

cupation, general income level, age, educational attainment, whether he has a telephone, an automobile, and how he voted in the last national election. Information such as this is important in making sure that the sample from each area meets all the requirements of the cross-section.

Interviewers are not required to get names of persons they interview on regular Gallup Poll assignments, because it is known that people express their true opinions more freely if they remain anonymous.

8. "Who are the interviewers? How are they chosen?"

Chief requirements for an ideal interviewers are these: he must be conscientious, alert, open-minded. He should be well acquainted with the community in which he interviews. He must carry out his assignment exactly as planned by the polling organization and preserve the attitude of complete objectivity.

Most interviewers for the institute have attended college. Since interviewing requires only part of their time, nearly all have some full-time occupation. Interviewers are selected on the recommendation of educators, lawyers and others in responsible positions who know them personally and believe they meet the necessary requirements.

* * * *

9. "How do politakers decide what questions to ask?"

Gallup Poll questions are generally the function of the editorial staff of the American Institute of Public Opinion. Most of the questions involve issues of current interest and importance. Some questions are suggested by editors of newspapers which publish the results, others by Congressmen or Government officials, and others come from persons interested in certain issues.

The questions are all pretested before appearing on a ballot—that is, they are actually tried out on a limited number of people to eliminate faulty wordings and to simplify the language.

The "quintimensional question design," perfected by the Gallup Poll, probes five aspects of public opinion. This method makes it possible to eliminate opinions of all people who know nothing about the issue involved. By using this method of multiple questions, the polling organization is able to arrive at a more accurate and complete interpretation of voters' answers. It can study also the reasons why persons hold the views they do, and lastly, it can measure more closely the intensity with which majority and minority opinions are held.

10. "Who pays for the polls?"

The entire cost of the Gallup Poll, conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, is paid for by approximately 125 leading American daily newspapers, whose cooperative support makes the Institute's continuous polling possible. The newspapers have exclusive publication rights in their communities to the poll findings. These newspapers represent all shades of political belief—Republican, Democratic and Independent.

11. "How useful are the polls?"

Most people, of course, know about public opinion polls because of the election predictions. But scientific polling has made many valuable contributions to our democratic process over and above their election forecasts. Some of them are:

1. They have provided leaders with a more accurate gauge of public opinion. 2. They have clearly demonstrated that the common people arrive at sound judgment on scores of problems. 3. Polls have helped focus attention on major issues of the day. 4. They have uncovered many "areas" of ignorance, bringing out weaknesses in our educational system, and have pointed up shortcomings in the process of keeping the public well-informed on vital issues of the day. 6. Polls help Government administrators make wiser decisions. 7. They make it more difficult for political bosses to pick presidential candidates in "smoke-filled rooms." 8. They constitute almost the only present check on the growing power of pressure groups. 9. By surveying voters on issues as well as candidates, modern polling methods help define more accurately the "mandate" of the people in national elections.

Nationalization Extension Hinted

London, Nov. 2 (NYHT).—Hugh Dalton, member of the Labor Cabinet, told Commons today that the Labor Government may extend its program for the nationalization of industry when the next Parliament meets.

Nationalization of the iron and steel industry "finishes the task we undertook" in the general election of 1945, Dalton said.

Boy Buried Under Tons Of Coal for 30 Minutes

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 2 (AP).—A 15-year-old boy was buried to his chin by several tons of fine slack coal in a partly-filled coal car on a railroad siding here today.

Neal Harris was dug from the coal 30 minutes later by more than a dozen police, firement and employes of a nearby factory.

Two factory workers said the youth had been playing around the car while they unloaded coal from a bottom chute through a conveyor belt. He apparently slipped into the loose slack and was sucked downward by the automatic unloading process.

"I'm not hurt," the youth whispered to rescuers. He was taken to a hospital.

Mock Elections Held at 2 Schools

President Truman got all of the applause but Governor Dewey got the votes at yesterday's mock presidential election held by students of the Alice Deal Junior High School.

The President fared better, however, at the Wheatley Elementary School where he took 176 popular votes to 134 for the New York Governor.

Dewey, who took the lead in early returns at Alice Deal and held it all the way, piled up 93 electoral votes to 17 for Truman. The popular vote was 560 for Dewey, 397 for Truman, 31 for Thurmond, 10 for Wallace and 1 for Thomas.

At Wheatley, Thurmond took 6 votes and Wallace 1.

Use Printed Ballots

The Alice Deal students voted on printed ballots in their section rooms with the candidate with the highest number of votes winning the electoral votes for the section.

Members of the electoral college reported the results during two assemblies held just before school was let out for the day.

As the Dewey vote mounted so did the excitement in the auditorium. Truman supporters groaned and booed as section after section went for Dewey. When Truman finally broke through with a few votes, the demonstrative Trumanites screamed, whistled and beat their hands.

Two assemblies had to be held to accommodate all of the students.

Get Idea and 'Feel'

Miss A. Backus, principal of the school, held the balloting "because the children needed to understand and feel a presidential election." It also gave them an idea of the workings of the electoral college.

Nearly the entire school day was devoted to the election.

Children attended assemblies before balloting to hear Ferdinand Kuhn, foreign affairs analyst for The Washington Post, explain the two-party system of government.

Maj. Gen. R. C. Lindsay, former assistant chief of staff for the Far East Air Forces, presided over the afternoon assemblies.

Aramco Quits Oil Option in Kuweit Area

By the United Press

A spokesman for the Arabian American Oil Co. disclosed yesterday that the firm has decided to give up its option on oil concessions in the Saudi Arabian-Kuweit, so-called "neutral zone" on the Persian Gulf.

Under a previous agreement with King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, Aramco held exploration and development rights to the 50-mile square area administered jointly and equally by Saudi Arabia and the sheikdom of Kuweit. American Independent Oil Co., a group of American concerns, holds rights to Kuweit's share of the zone.

The Aramco spokesman said the company had decided it could not go ahead with proper development of the neutral zone concessions at this time, and hence had decided to relinquish its option.

Aramco is producing 450,000 barrels of oil daily in Saudi Arabia and pays a royalty of about 22 cents a barrel to Saudi Arabia.

The spokesman said the firm now will devote its principal attention to further explorations in the Ain Dar and Abqaiq fields, inside Saudi Arabia, and to offshore drilling operations.

State Department officials said they had not been informed of Aramco's decision, but they welcomed it as being in line with United States policy to assist more American companies to develop oil resources in the Middle East.

Middle Eastern oil reserves are estimated at more than 26,000,000,000 barrels, of which American concerns own or have concessions on an estimated 10,500,000,000 barrels. Most of the American holdings are in Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Kuweit and on Bahrein Island in the Persian Gulf.

It is understood that one and possibly more American oil interests were checking on the possibility of negotiating for exploration and development rights given up by Aramco in Kuweit.

Aramco is owned jointly by the Standard Oil Company of California and the Texas Co. The Kuweit concession was granted to American Independent early last July by the Sheik of Kuweit. Under that pact, the American concern would pay about 35 cents a barrel to the sheik for oil found and produced in his half of the zone.

2 New NLRB Members Hit Majority Stand

Abe Murdock and J. Copeland Gray, two new members of the National Labor Relations Board, charged yesterday that their three holdover colleagues are administering one Taft-Hartley law requirement in "chaos and confusion."

The majority replied that they "doubt" their methods "have ever contributed to produce either chaos or confusion."

Chairman Paul M. Herzog and members John M. Houston and James J. Reynolds, jr., voted to override Murdock and Gray on the issue and reverse a previous unanimous decision.

N. Y. Firm Involved

The case involved the San Francisco stockroom of Advance Pattern Co., a New York City firm. The Printing Specialties and Paper Converters Union (AFL) asked the board to hold a bargaining election to determine whether the employes wanted the union to represent them.

The board unanimously dismissed the union petition last August 27 at the employer's request because the union had not asked recognition nor been refused prior to filing the election petition. The employer argued that the Taft-Hartley law requires that a union ask recognition and be refused before filing a petition.

At that time all board members agreed and the case was dismissed.

The majority, in reversing that decision, said the effect of the August 27 action "was to impose a jurisdictional requirement, rigid compliance with which was necessary before the board could proceed with the case on its merits." The board said this effect is "unreasonable."

Minority Stand

But Murdock and Gray asked, "how is it absurd or wholly impracticable merely to require a labor organization first to ask and be refused recognition by an employer before running to the board with a petition?"

"Is the making of a telephone call or the posting of a letter too arduous a step to be required of a labor organization?" they queried. They said 20 to 30 other such cases are pending.

"These cases," they said, "disclose a welter of variety, chaos and confusion in the observance and administration of this requirement. In our view, the best way to meet this condition of sloppy observance of our rules and statutory requirements which has been permitted to develop is not to sanction it, but to serve notice on all petitioners, as the board's original decision did, that the requirements must be observed."

Or else, they added, the board should rescind its rules.

Board Votes 3 to 2

"We are fully prepared," the majority said, "in view of the vigor with which our dissenting colleagues have expressed their concern, to correct administratively whatever laxness has developed in the use of customary procedures."

The board voted 3 to 2 to hold an election as requested by the union. It said the Taft-Hartley Act does not require a union first to seek recognition and be refused before coming to the board.

12 Surplus War Plants Put In Reserve Pool for Future

Twelve surplus war plants that cost the Government $146,168,000 have been put into a reserve pool for use in the event of another war.

In reporting this yesterday, the Federal Works Agency said the plants are the first of 100 or more that eventually will go into the national industrial reserve set up by Congress last July.

Within a short time, the agency said, it expects to take over from the War Assets Administration three more plants costing $75,324,000.

All will be reconditioned and then put "in mothballs." Normally these plants, having served their wartime purpose, would have been sold or leased as surplus.

Federal Works also is to take over, repair, and keep in standby condition about 50,000 units of machine tools, manufacturing equipment and other property in the plants.

The plants already placed in the national reserve, and the amount it costs to build and equip them are:

Aluminum Company of America, Riverbank, Calif., $5,153,000; Amco Magnesium Corp., Wingdale, N. Y., $3,935,000; Badger Ordnance Works, Baraboo, Wis., $31,610,000; Bethlehem-Lebanon Forge Company, Lebanon, Pa., $767,000; Diamond Magnesium, Painesville, O., $8,247,000; Dow Chemical Company, Freeport, Tex., $6,732,000; Dow Magnesium Corp., Velasco, Tex., $20,887,000.

Gary Armor Plate Plant, Gary, Ind., $11,669,000; Magnesium Reduction Company, Luckey, O., $2,318,000; New England Line Company, Canaan, Conn., $4,100,000; Permanente Metals Corp., Manteca, Calif., $3,495,000; Oklahoma Ordnance Works, Pryor, Okla., $15,987,000.

The three plants to be transferred shortly are Kentucky Ordnance Works, Paducah, Ky., $20,458,000; Keystone Ordnance Works, Meadville, Pa., $23,598,000; Plum Brook Ordnance Works, Sandusky, O., $31,268,000.

CIO Probers Favor Ousting Of Greater New York Council

By the United Press

A union investigating committee will recommend later this month that the CIO revoke the charter of the leftwing Greater New York CIO Council, it was disclosed yesterday.

The council has been accused of "disruptive and irresponsible actions" by six CIO unions in the New York area.

The investigating committee, made up of presidents of three right-wing CIO unions, has been looking into the charges. It held stormy hearings here October 14 and 15.

Union sources said that Committee Chairman L. S. Buckmaster, president of the CIO Rubber Workers Union, would present the recommendations to the CIO executive board this month. The executive board will make the final decision on whether to disown the union's large New York affiliate.

Union officials said it was the closest the CIO has come so far to declaring open war on left-wing union officers. CIO President Philip Murray has been campaigning to rid his organization of Communist and Communist-line leaders for some time.

light, fluffy loaves customers seem to prefer. Nature, on its own, 'works up" the wheat protein over a period of weeks to the desired bread-texture flour. But natural aging ties up too much storage space and involves the danger of spoilage. "Agene" was the answer to breadmaker needs.

As far back as 1939, however, some scientists began to suspect white bread contained something poisonous—at least to dogs. Experiments at Madison, Wis., proved that hysterical fits could be induced in dogs simply by feeding them breadstuffs heavily.

A sweetheart for a winter start!

Want to get off to a good start? Then let your nearest Conoco Mileage Merchant steer you right . . .

He'll tell you that when it comes to fast, smooth winter starts, a lot depends on having the right kind of oil in your engine. He'll tell you, too, the right oil is winter-grade Conoco Nth Motor Oil.

First, because Conoco Nth winter-grade Motor Oil is specially refined for cold-weather performance. It's lighter . . . freer-flowing. Saves wear on your battery because it gives you faster starts.

And second, Nth oil extra-protects against "dry" friction starts . . . saves wear on engine parts . . . because it contains a special added ingredient that actually OIL-PLATES metal surfaces.

Outmoded System

People who went to the polls yesterday have reason to be proud of the mastery they exercise over national policy and the personnel of government. But the defects in the system by which they make their will prevail are once more painfully evident. Yesterday, for example, Alabama kept President Truman's name entirely off the ballot. The Wallace-Taylor ticket did not get on the ballot in Illinois, Oklahoma or Nebraska. The candidacy of Governor Thurmond brought the South into the presidential contest for the first time in many years, but that is more in the nature of an accident than evidence of soundness in our electoral system.

The disturbing fact is that our present electoral system elicits an expression of the will of only part of the people. In 1944 only 55.5 per cent of the potential voters actually went to the polls. Of course, many lost their votes by being in the armed services or being away from home doing war work. But that does not tell the whole story. Millions failed to vote because they are in effect disfranchised, as are the people of the District of Columbia, or because they knew that their votes would count for nothing. Seven Southern States still require payment of poll taxes to discourage Negroes and poor whites from voting. About one fourth of the States specifically withhold the ballot from paupers. Some States make the registration of voters so difficult that many votes are lost.

More serious, in our opinion, is the stifling block system of casting electoral ballots. The candidate who wins in New York, for example, may have only a few hundred more votes than his opponent, but that is sufficient to give him all of New York's 47 electoral votes, and it is the electoral votes which determine who will be President. This block system of distributing the electoral votes usually keeps millions of people away from the polls in the South. In 1940, 83 per cent of the potential voters went to the polls in Utah and West Virginia. But only 10 per cent of the citizens over 21 voted in South Carolina. The contrast is only slightly less shocking in several other Southern States. Wholly aside from impediments to voting, this indifference in past presidential contests reflects the absence of any real contest. Choice of the Democratic candidate has been taken for granted by both sides, and since the minority gets no electoral votes there is scarcely any incentive for voters on either side to go to the polls.

Voting in the South yesterday will doubtless prove to be heavier than it has been for many years, because the Dixiecrat challenge upset the pattern of Democratic solidarity. But the defect in our electoral system remains. The new Administration could render a great national service by throwing its strength behind Senator Lodge's proposed amendment to the Constitution. In addition to distributing electoral votes among the candidates in proportion to the number of popular votes received, this proposal would eliminate the present possibility of a candidate being defeated in spite of having a majority of the popular votes and the danger of any presidential contest being thrown into the House of Representatives.

White Paper

It was the British who made popular the term "White Paper" in connection with the publication of state documents, and it is they, we suppose, who ought to bear the ultimate blame for the way in which the currency—or rather, the paper—is being debased these days. The newest affront comes from the Pacific American Shipowners Association and the Waterfront Employers Association of California, which have published a "White Paper" detailing their views in the West Coast maritime strike. Whatever its other qualifications, this document can hardly be described as diplomatic. In summarizing the case against Harry Bridges, it states quite baldly: "That is a lie and the union negotiators, of course, know it's a lie . . ." In the language of diplomacy this would be polished to read "misconception of fact" or "terminological inexactitude."

The ship operators, of course, have as much right to publish a "White Paper" as anyone else, though the idea, with this "White Paper" coming on top of the White Paper on Berlin, is in danger of being a bit overworked. Very probably the phrase never would have been adopted unless it carried a connotation of purity of motive, and it is this aspect that is disturbing. Is it to be concluded that a Blue Book, such as this country published with respect to Argentina, is intended to describe a nation's mood? Can a Red Paper now be expected from Russia? Would a Green Paper indicate jealousy or a Yellow Paper cowardice? Altogether the prospect is frightening. We have a solution, though. We propose to list all future spectral violations in our little black book.

Unconditional Defeat

Historians for a long time to come will weigh, and wonder about, the effects of the "unconditional surrender" formula upon which President Roosevelt insisted in respect of Germany despite persistent opposition from his own military leaders as well as from his British and Soviet allies. The merits and demerits of the formula are set forth in perspective in Wallace Carroll's recently published Persuade or Perish. Mr. Carroll, who, as OWI deputy director of American psychological warfare operations for the European continent, pressed vigorously for a clarification and amplification of the formula, reaches the conclusion that it did not prolong the war against Germany and may contribute significantly to prolongation of the peace.

There is no doubt, as Mr. Carroll himself makes clear by extensive quotations from Dr. Goebbels' wartime broadcasts, that the German propagandist used unconditional surrender, along with the bombing of civilian centers and the Morgenthau Plan, as stimulants to German resistance, striving to depict the Allies as intent upon utter destruction of all Germany. It was on this account that General Eisenhower, Secretary Hull and even Marshal Stalin, among others, urged that the demand be defined. This newspaper declared at the time, assuming the policy to mean merely "no bargaining with the enemy," that fundamental to it was an understanding by the Allied governments as to the terms to be imposed when the surrender came. "And it is here," we observed, "that a vacuum of policy appears to exist. If we do not come to an understanding with our allies as to the kind of situation we intend to promote in Germany when the Germans have laid down their arms, we shall lose the opportunity to capitalize our victory." The fear seems to have been prophetic, and has made us dub the formula as it was left a "folly."

The furthest Mr. Roosevelt would go toward public definition of "unconditional surrender," however, was a speech in which he said:

> We and our allies are entirely agreed that we shall not bargain with the Nazi conspirators or leave them a shred of control, open or secret, of the instruments of government. We shall not leave them a single element of military power or of potential military power . . . The German people are not going to be enslaved. Why? Because the United Nations do not traffic in human slavery. But it will be necessary for them to earn their way back into the fellowship of peace-loving and law-abiding nations. And in their climb up that steep road, we shall certainly see to it that they are not encumbered by having to carry guns. We hope they will be relieved of that burden forever.

In Germany's Underground, Allen W. Dulles observes that "the Goebbelses and Bormanns were able to use 'unconditional surrender' to prolong a totally hopeless war for many months." The British historian, H. R. Trevor-Roper, flatly disagrees. "It is sometimes said," he wrote in The Last Days of Hitler, "that the Allied insistence on 'unconditional surrender' frightened the Germans into continued obedience; but if this implies that they would otherwise have revolted, I do not think it is true." Mr. Carroll concurs in this latter judgment. An offer of terms to Germany, he believes, "would simply have played into Goebbels' hands" and might have prolonged German resistance by enabling Goebbels to persuade his people that the Allies despaired of complete military triumph and that they could be played one against another.

Other considerable arguments in support of "unconditional surrender" are presented in the Carroll book. It helped cement the coalition of America, Britain and the Soviet Union by reassuring the Russians, as Anthony Eden once put it, that "what we mean by unconditional surrender is that we are not prepared to make a negotiated peace with Germany." It reassured the resistance movements in the occupied countries, which had been profoundly shocked but a short while before by the deal with Darlan in North Africa, that the Allies would not do business with any of Hitler's heirs. And it forestalled future fuehrers from telling the German people, as Hitler told them about Woodrow Wilson's 14 points in World War I, that they were tricked into surrender. This last consideration appears to have been predominant in Mr. Roosevelt's reasoning.

It is too soon to tell, of course, how application of the "unconditional surrender" policy will affect the peace in the long run. In relation to Japan, where the policy was much qualified—and very wisely, in our judgment—defeat seems to be more definitely accepted than in Germany. But the problem in Germany has been vastly complicated by quadripartite occupation and a consequent conflict of policy between East and West. The lack of agreement among the victors respecting the utilization of victory indubitably bedevils their relationship today.

Smog

"The United States Weather Bureau," said the Associated Press in a dispatch of February 7, 1926, "has given a new word, smog, to the American language." Henry L. Mencken, always ready to look a gift word in the origin, was not so sure of the Weather Bureau's precedence. In his American Language, Supplement One, Mencken indicates the word was current in England for 20 years before it crossed the ocean and cites the New English Dictionary attribution of the word's invention to an English medical man named Des Voeux in 1905.

Whatever the etymology of the word, it has always seemed a happy blend of the words "smoke" and "fog" to describe the not-so-happy mixture of these two atmospheric encumbrances. What has happened in Donora, Pa., in the last few days—19 deaths at the latest count—is likely to add a new meaning, or, rather, reinforce an already lethal connotation. For Donora's poisonous smog is not the first on record. Belgium in 1930 suffered, under almost identical circumstances, even more heavily. A combination of still weather, fog, and chemically saturated smoke fumes from nearby industries brought death to some 70 Belgians. In both instances the victims were persons weakened by asthma and heart conditions. Asthmatic residents of Chicago, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, and London know what it is to suffer through an attack of ordinary smog.

The fact that those conditions which produce toxic concentrations of smog are exceedingly rare is some consolation. The odds are incalculably high against the necessary combination of conditions at any one place within any particular period of time. But given the fact that industrial fumes normally dissipated in the air may sometimes be held and concentrated in a blanket of fog, sooner or later there is bound to be a deadly recurrence somewhere.

The smog menace is hardly the most fearful the world has to face today. But it is one about which something can be done. Various devices for smoke abatement have been developed, and many industries have found that products formerly wasted in the air could be recovered with incidental profit. As in coal mine safety precautions, the question arises: How many lives must be lost before an industry will spend the necessary funds to protect the health of the community of which it is a part?

The Hopkins Papers

The publication of Mr. Robert Sherwood's book, Roosevelt and Hopkins, raises anew the question of Government secrecy concerning important official documents. Mr. Sherwood's biographical essay, covering about a thousand pages, is based upon his reading of some 40 packing cases full of privileged documents turned over to him by the estate of the late Harry Hopkins. These included not only Hopkins' own letters, memoranda and reports but also copies of the various official papers to which Hopkins had access.

In his introduction to this massive volume, Mr. Sherwood states that he > . . . voluntarily submitted the complete manuscript to the Department of Defense for clearance, solely on the ground of military security, and I must express my appreciation to Secretary Forrestal and his aide, Capt. Robert W. Berry, USN, for the cooperation I received. No requests for omission were made, but I was asked to paraphrase a considerable number of the cables, since publication of the literal text might compromise codes.

The italics are ours, and we use them because it is difficult for us to imagine what other pretext than military security there could be for withholding such documents from public inspection. If there is none, then the proper conclusion seems to be that Mr. Sherwood and the Hopkins estate have benefited by the official policy at the expense of less-favored writers. This is not the first time we have raised this point, the last time having been in connection with Mr. Byrnes. Mr. Byrnes was able to make use of the captured German documents concerning Nazi-Soviet relations in the period between 1939 and 1941, so that his book, Speaking Frankly, got the full benefit of the revelations in them until they were belatedly published in toto by the Government itself.

It has been argued, of course, that the premature publication of official documents, especially those having to do with diplomatic matters, might upset a Government policy based on the long-range interests of national defense. This assumes that if the policy were made known and so subjected to debate, it might be disapproved by the people. This is the argument developed by Prof. Thomas Bailey in The Man in the Street. His thesis is that the late President Roosevelt was justified in deceiving the people about his foreign policy, because he was in a better position than they to estimate the threat that would be offered to the United States if Hitler were victorious in Europe. It is also Mr. Sherwood's argument. He tells how, early in 1941, six months before Hitler's attack on Russia and nearly 11 months before Pearl Harbor, members of the British General Staff came to Washington in civilian dress for a secret conference with the General Staff of the United States Army concerning war plans. It was agreed that when and if America became involved in a war with Japan and Germany, the Germans were to be defeated first. Mr. Sherwood observes:

> It is an ironic fact that in all probability no great damage would have been done had the details of these plans fallen into the hands of the Germans and Japanese; whereas had they fallen into the hands of the Congress and the press, American preparation for war might have been well nigh wrecked and ruined . . .

It is possible, of course, that if the Congress and the public had been kept fully informed of what was taking place in the field of foreign policy the results might have been bad. This, however, does not explain why it is necessary to continue the secrecy after the policy has been changed or why the Government follows a policy of giving a few favored writers access to confidential documents. If there is no security reason for keeping the records of Casablanca, Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam secret, by all means let the Administration make the full documents available to the public.

LOST LAMBS

O shepherd of remembered sheep,
Turn back by long-untrodden ways
And lead those quiet flocks to graze
Upon the meadows of my sleep.

Bring back lost lambs of seasons fair,
The happy thoughts I used to know,
As if my boughs, instead of snow
The bloom of April still might bear.

State Reapportionment

In the Wallace Illinois ballot case recently decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, the court said:

"To assume that political power is a function exclusively of numbers is to disregard the practicalities of government. Thus, the Constitution protects the interests of the smaller against the greater by giving in the Senate entirely unequal representation to populations."

This statement was used in reference to State unbalance and not Federal unbalance, and therefore it is absolutely wrong considered from historical American truth. Nowhere does the United States Constitution mandate the Federal Government itself to be "republican" in form, but Section 4, Article IV, does mandate the States to be "republican."

Now the term "republican" to the founding fathers meant majority rule. The Congress under the Articles of Confederation was a much more disproportionately constructed body than the Congress under the Constitution, and yet when this Congress of the Confederation spoke specifically as to proper State government, it provided for "a proportionate representation of the people in the Legislature."

In 1789, at the beginning of the United States under the present Constitution, there was little State legislative unbalance as compared to now. The present State legislative unbalance has come about by devolution in all cases save one, that of New Jersey, which in 1947 froze into State constitutional law its highly undemocratic and disproportionate State Senate structure.

The Connecticut Compromise of 1787, the compromise which provided for a United States Senate representing States equally and a United States House of Representatives proportionate to population, was a compromise which three fourths of the American people at that time were against. Most of the people wanted complete proportionate representation in the national legislative body. But this was the only compromise which could unite all the States. It was not meant to represent the pattern the States themselves were to follow.

State legislative reapportionment fights had taken place in most of the States during the Revolutionary period. In fact, proper State legislative representation is closely akin to an honest and wholesome constitutional "States' rights." It is too bad that the majority of the court has used this language. It will be used by the spokesmen of ruralists all over America to defend State legislative unbalance and will give a certain aura of legality, as it were, to their undemocratic activities.

Supply And Demand

The October 2 issue of Business Week contains the following significant item:

"International Shoe Co. this week reduced its work week on men's footwear to four days. Shortly before, American Hide & Leather said it was cutting operations to 80 per cent of capacity to avoid any further accumulation of inventories."

I haven't noticed any decline in the price of shoes lately. Maybe if the law of supply and demand is to work it has to be enforced.

Spanish Communists

Sometimes I find Mr. Drew Pearson's apparent naivete rather amusing. In a recent column he excoriated Spain's Franco for his treatment of a self-styled Socialist and his family who narrated a harrowing tale of tortures and imprisonment.

Surely Mr. Pearson must be aware of the fact that the comparatively innocuous label of "Socialist" is a mask assumed when occasion prompts by ruthless Communists in their underground work to overthrow the Spanish government and turn the country over to Russia. One can imagine what would happen to the vastly predominant Catholic population should this take place. Nothing that the Spanish government has ever done for its own protection in suppressing these murderous traitors can compare with the fiendish cruelties and assassinations inflicted by the Communists on inoffensive priests and nuns during the Spanish civil war.

We need Spain as a bastion in Europe in the event of war in which we would be heavily involved. Let us not inflame the public mind against Spain at this juncture. By doing so we are playing into the hands of the Communists and alienating a country whose help would be the means of hastening victory and saving American lives.

"Cooperative Protection"

Your October 22 editorial, "Cooperative Protection," is highly commendable, revealing The Washington Post's usual acumen with the exception of the last sentence, ". . . we suspect that lawmakers will give a sympathetic hearing . . . by reason of the fact that several members of Congress appear to be caught in the local squeeze."

Let us not be so naive as to think that the affected Congressmen will be forced to lie in the beds they have made for the general public. Ordinary citizens can, unless they know somebody, househunt for months or years only to find themselves against a blank wall, while others just in from Kankakee or Dubuque miraculously locate that vanished commodity, the unfurnished apartment under rent control. There are ways and means, if you know somebody, and Washington has a lot of people who never miss a chance to win friends and influence people in Congress.

A precedent, however, has been established for the control of "free enterprise" when it gets out of hand. The well-intentioned efforts of Senators Ives (R., N. Y.) and Baldwin (R., Conn.), to restore controls on residential hotels and roll back rentals to June 30, 1947, price levels, should not be forgotten. Whether it's excess profiteering or a totalitarian threat to free enterprise would seem to hinge on the question, which side of the railroad tracks d'ya come from? The Ives-Baldwin measure was tacked onto the rent control bill with no protest from the congressional defenders of "free enterprise."

Religion Of Democracy

The remarks of Archbishop O'Boyle at the Catholic University homecoming celebration furnish an interesting contrast to General Eisenhower's recent utterances on the purposes of education. In your editorial columns of October 3, you undertook to defend the latter's remark ("A democracy cannot exist without a religious base; I believe in democracy") against Father Ellis' concern that the new president of Columbia was equating democracy with religion.

A cult is now being made of democracy, but it will not reveal itself as a religion until it has established itself. Its churches are the public schools and the universities from which the secularism that Archbishop O'Boyle assails has excluded the teaching of orthodox religion and theology.

When religion is excluded from the schools, and the schools then set about instilling the values of democracy as the principal purpose of education, the result is not a new sect like a lot of the old ones. We are witnessing, nevertheless, the substitution of secular political values as the inspiration in life for the old supernatural or spiritual ones.

That this transition ultimately leads to both a creed and a cult is at first not apparent because the leaders of the new secularized religion make a great thing of their contempt for religious "superstition" and the alleged incompatibility of religion and science, etc. But every age must have its religion, every people its "beliefs" and this tendency in education is producing a "belief" in democracy which is more and more commonly being given the expression which General Eisenhower used and Father Ellis criticized.

For the theology of the new religion there is, in the book, The City of Man, a Declaration of World Democracy, a manifesto signed by such well known and represenative liberals (some of them prominent educators) as Hans Kohn, Thomas Mann, William Allan Neilson, Frank Aydelotte, Lewis Mumford, W. Y. Elliott, Oscar Jaszi, Reinhold Niebuhr and Gaetano Salvemini. Consider, for example, the follow quotation:

"Democracy, therefore, must be defined: no longer the conflicting concourse of uncontrolled individual impulses, but a harmony insubordinated to a plan; no longer a subversive atomism, but a purposive organism . . . It is the plenitude of heart-service to a highest religion embodying the essence of all higher religions. Democracy is nothing more and nothing less than humanism in theocracy, national theocracy in universal humanism."

I am not suggesting that the new secular religion of the City of Man is accepted or indorsed by the leaders of the progressive movement in education. But this kind of nonsense is certainly encouraged by the naturalist tendencies of progressive education which substitute the values of democracy for the old values supplied by traditional Christianity.

It is the kind of nonsense also that is encouraged by the high sounding advocacy of a partnership between religion and democracy which yet opposes "the injection of religious education into the schools," as does The Washington Post. For if we do not have the religious education of our fathers in our schools, we shall by default have the religion of democracy of the progressive philosophy of education and ultimately of the City of Man.

Welcoming A 'New Broom'

By Malvina Lindsay

Pledge To A President

IT WOULD be novel and heartening to find some citizen who voted against the winner in yesterday's election writing him the following letter:

Dear President-Elect: I was against you in this campaign, and I'll probably keep on fighting many of your policies. Nevertheless I intend to treat you not only with the respect and consideration due the President of the United States, but with the sporting justice that should be shown a man in a tough spot who deserves a fair chance to fight.

Being human I am greatly tempted at this moment to smile spitefully and say mockingly, "Let's just see now what he'll do!" But I believe my better sense if not my better nature will win out. For I know that if you don't do well, it's going to be plenty tough on me and everyone else in this country.

One thing I promise I will not do—carp about you, your family or your policies to foreign visitors. I've heard too many of them exclaim, "How cruelly you Americans treat your Presidents!"

Nor am I going to lie in wait as if I were a hungry cat watching a mouse to see you stub your toe. I'm going to try to remember that, even smart as I am, I'd make a few mistakes if I were in the White House.

I EXPECT as a free American to criticize you and your actions. But I'll do my level best not to be petty and personal about it. Much as I ordinarily relish gossip, I'm going to show some consideration for a family that has to live in the goldfish bowl that is the White House and not lick my chops over mean little rumors and cheap anecdotes that float around the country.

Since I pretend to be a civilized being, I will naturally not hit below the belt with criticism of the physical or personal characteristics of you or members of your family. Even should my own children be prodigies in mentality and deportment, I will not tell how yours should be reared. Nor will I broadcast in conversation my pattern of action—or inaction—for your wife.

No matter how much you displease or annoy me or step on my toes personally, I will do my best not to snarl my face and poison my spirit by becoming a President-hater. I'll merely wait to get in my voting licks in 1952.

I will try to base my criticism of you on facts and my personal interpretation of them. I will not go around parroting cliches about you as that you are "not big enough for the job" or that you are "a human adding machine." Nor will I loudly declare whenever I am displeased with anything you do that it "smacks of Moscow" or is "Wall Street inspired." It should go without saying that even if you put a turret on the White House I will not call you a Communist.

I KNOW these resolutions will be hard to keep. Like all Americans past and present I relish declaiming what I think about public leaders. I know that even the most revered of Presidents, Washington and Lincoln, were victims of vulgar personal attacks and vicious name calling. But I have sense enough—I hope—to realize that at the present time when the existence of our Nation and even our civilization depends on American unity and the strength and success of our Government, we cannot dare to refuse to hold up the hands of our President, whoever he may be.

Furthermore from our greater scientific knowledge today of human behavior, we know that any person to be effective and creative must have faith in himself. If we tear down the self-confidence of our public officials we reap the harvest of their failures. My own self-interest if nothing else demands that I stand behind you.

I may at times break over from my noble resolve to behave the next four years as an American citizen rather than as an anti-Administration. But I will try at least never to forget that you are the President of the United States and as such a symbol of every American including myself.

Navy Reserves

On October 22, Mr. Drew Pearson, discussing the President's directive to revitalize the armed services reserve program, referred to a White House conference on the subject between Secretary Forrestal, General Bradley and the President and concluded with this statement: "The most important concession Truman made was to cite Forrestal's pet service, the Navy, for its excellent reserve program."

Praising the Navy for its reserve program requires no concession on the part of President Truman, or anyone else for that matter. A review of the Congressional Record makes this clear. On any given day during the second session of the Eightieth Congress, when legislation concerning personnel in the armed forces was under discussion, members frequently alluded to the excellence of the Navy's reserve program. So well has it been carried out that this summer it numbered more than a million men and women in the organized (pay status) and volunteer programs. A majority of the organized divisions and brigades are up to complement.

Patching Up The Democrats

THE FATE OF the Democratic Party in the aftermath of the campaign and the election has a great many people guessing. The many-sided split within the party goes so deep that it hardly seems possible that Humpty-Dumpty can be put together again.

Childs

Determined and ambitious individuals will try to prevent the old, uneasy coalition between the agrarian South and Northern labor from forming anew. Among them are the powerful men who have financed the Dixiecrat revolt in the South.

They are out to capture the Democratic Party and make it over to suit their own ends. If they have their way, it will become the vehicle of those who use the States' rights battle cry in an incessant campaign to curb the powers of the Federal Government. In this camp are the representatives of Northern interests that have gone to the South seeking freedom from the social legislation of such advanced States as Massachusetts and New York.

At the same time the revolt against the Truman civil-rights program has been widespread and intense. This passionate revolt has given reaction a powerful lever throughout the South.

How the same party can contain Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis, who forced the extreme civil-rights plank in the Democratic platform at Philadelphia, and Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, it is hard to see. They are irreconcilable opposites.

THE FUTURE of the Democratic Party will be determined, in part at least, by what happens within the Republican organization. The Dewey team has its own strictly private plan for reshaping the grand party in such a way that four years from now it hardly will recognize itself.

It would become the party of moderate progressivism, attracting and holding a broad band of support including the moderate segment of organized labor. Outraged remnants of the Tory old guard would then be free to join the States' Rights Party and a new kind of North-South coalition would be formed.

Success along this line would assure the new style Republican Party a long term in power. The opposition would be reduced to ineffectual splinters of reaction on the one hand and an extreme leftism on the other.

But this tidy vision of the future does not take into account the plans and ambitions of a group of men who may have considerable say about how the political parties are to be aligned. William Green of the A. F. of L. has already said that the convention of his unions in Cincinnati later this month will take up the question of labor in politics and the possibility of a new third party.

A great deal turns on the decision taken by Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers. Reuther, who was nearly assassinated some time ago, is the most politically conscious and knowledgeable of the leaders of labor. In his own union he licked the Communists and drove them out of office after a fierce battle.

Reports have persisted that Reauther means to have a principal part in forming a third party that would rest on the strength of organized labor. The UAW has virtually taken over the Democratic Party in Michigan.

THE POLITICAL role of labor will be determined partly by the showing that organized labor makes—or fails to make—in yesterday's election. The large industrial cities may show a heavier anti-Dewey vote than had been expected. That is what the political managers for the big trade unions have been counting on—a silent protest vote. The prospect of such a vote encouraged President Truman to take his swipe at the polls that showed Dewey far in the lead in almost all States with industrial centers.

Should labor unexpectedly deliver a pro-Truman vote that would cut down the Dewey margin, labor leaders would be encouraged to try to take over the Democratic Party in the North. Major elements of both CIO and A. F. of L. could be expected to work together in the Michigan pattern.

This would leave the Dixiecrat splinter in the South with the Dixiecrat bosses hoping to function in the balance-of-power position. Some who know the South well believe the Dixiecrat movement will be forgotten with this election. They think that inertia and indifference, if nothing else, will overwhelm the revolt. There is also the fact that the Republicans are pledged to a radical civil-rights program and if those pledges are carried out, opposition will center on the old enemy—the GOP.

Humpty-Dumpty has had several bad spills in the past and has been patched up again. Perhaps the break this time is not as bad as it seems.

Defer Students Of Medicine, Boards Told

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Selective Service Headquarters yesterday asked local draft boards to defer some 44,000 college students who are preparing for the medical professions.

A recommended deferment policy issued by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, national director, proposes deferring all professional students "satisfactorily pursuing full-time courses leading to graduation" as doctors, dentists, veterinaries and osteopaths.

The draft memorandum, prepared by an advisory committee of medical men, also recommends the deferment of sufficient numbers of pre-professional students to maintain the graduate schools at their present levels.

Colleges to Submit Lists

For practical purposes, college officials would largely determine which preprofessional students would be deferred.

They would be authorized to provisionally accept limited numbers of such college men for entrance to the graduate school one, two or three years hence. Lists of such students would be sent to national selective service headquarters by the medical, dental and veterinary schools and forwarded to local boards.

These lists would not be binding on the boards, but undoubtedly would be followed in most cases.

Under the formula worked out by the advisory committee and national headquarters, students who have satisfactorily completed one year of preprofessional course may be provisionally accepted for matriculation by the professional schools.

Quotas Established

It is estimated that about half of the latter are veterans, married or otherwise exempt or deferred. To enable the remainder to continue their studies, it is provided that professional schools provisionally enroll quotas from each preprofessional class. The quotas are:

For the freshman class of 1949, 55 per cent of the 1948 freshman professional class.

Draft to Take Flunkers

The percentages will be reviewed annually. Whenever a student fails to keep up with his studies, the college will cancel his certificate of acceptance, and his local draft board will be notified.

Col. Richard H. Eanes, chief medical officers of Selective Service national headquarters, explained the system at a press conference yesterday.

"What we are trying to do," he said, "is to maintain so far as possible the present level of 5000 to 6000 medical school graduates a year."

Dulles Ready To State GOP Foreign Aims

Paris, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—John Foster Dulles, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's foreign policy adviser, has tentatively decided to issue a statement outlining United States policy in the United Nations if the Republicans win the election, well-informed sources said tonight.

Dulles, a key member of the American U. N. delegation under bipartisan foreign policy, is expected to become Secretary of State if Mr. Dewey is elected.

Informants said that if he went through with his plan, his statement would be issued early Wednesday after the election result was known.

It had been forecast that Dulles will become the real leader of the American delegation in event of a Republican victory.

Julius Katz-Suchy, Polish U. N. delegate, attacked Dulles bitterly today, saying that he used the tactics of Adolf Hitler and Paul Joseph Goebbels in condemning communism. He replied to a blistering attack Dulles made last week on Communist tactics in France.

In what seemed an obvious reference to the American election, Katz-Suchy described Dulles as "a man of known political aspirations."

Both Marshall and Dulles decided not to wait up until the early hours of the morning to get the election result.

7 Given Life In Romanian Revolt Plot

Bucharest, Romania, Nov. 2 (U.P.). Seven members of a spy ring which allegedly plotted to overthrow the government with American and British aid were sentenced today to life imprisonment, the heaviest penalty under Romanian law.

Five lesser defendants were given sentences of from 15 to 25 years.

The defendants reportedly admitted they had collected secret information for American and British legation officials to aid the plot.

Those sentenced to life included Max Ausnet, Romanian industrialist now in the United States, who was tried in abstentia; loan Bojoiu, former cabinet minister; Alexander Popp, former manager of Romania's biggest steel mills; University Prof. Gheorghe Manu, former Admiral Horia Macelariu, Nicolai Petrascu, former secretary of the National Guardists, and Eugen Teodoreschu, who reportedly admitted serving as a paid agent of United States Army intelligence.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Flying Dual Control

THE FIRST postelection question is how the Government can get through the next 10 weeks. Nowadays, unhappily, time's winged chariot has been equipped with jet propulsion. Events will not wait patiently until Thomas E. Dewey officially replaces Harry S. Truman. Particularly in the fields of foreign and defense policy, somebody somewhere in Washington must have authority to give answers that will still be valid after January 20.

Oddly enough, the members of the outgoing Administration seem to be more concerned with this urgent problem than the entourage of the victorious candidate. For example, Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett, whose day-to-day burden of work is actually heavier than Secretary Marshall's, has made no secret of his firm belief that both his and Secretary Marshall's successors will need a period of "flying dual control," as he calls it.

IN THE CASE of Marshall and Lovett, the problem first arose not because of the election, but because both have long planned to leave the State Department on January 20 in any case. It did not matter whether their heirs were to be named by Truman or Dewey; the need to indoctrinate them was the same. In fact there is some reason to believe that Lovett has already discussed the matter with President Truman, without reference to the election, but simply on the basis of his own desire to return to private life.

By "flying dual control" Lovett is understood to mean something extremely simple. If his plan is adopted, his successor will be brought into the State Department in some temporary capacity—probably as a special assistant—and will work as Lovett's equal partner until the change-over formally occurs. Lovett himself worked in this manner with former Undersecretary Dean Acheson. Some such device is needed to assure continuity of policy, since American Government departments do not possess officials comparable to the permanent Undersecretaries of British or French ministries. And quite aside from the need for continuity, the new men cannot hope to achieve simple wisdom unless they enjoy an interim period of briefing in all the past complexities and future implications of the great decisions they must make.

It is significant that the other Administration leader known to share Lovett's view is Secretary of Defense James Forrestal. The opinion of these two men, who are about the ablest officials of the present Administration, ought to impress everyone. Undoubtedly, their opinion will be presented to the President. But it must be added that his bitterness over the campaign, the soreness of some of the men around him, and other natural human factors place his response in some doubt. He may conceivably jib at letting Dewey's people into the Government before he has to do so.

ON THE WHOLE, however, it is a better bet that Truman will make efforts to ease the transition than that Dewey will welcome such efforts when they are made. The confidence of Dewey and his entourage has been such that irreverent persons on the Dewey campaign train mischievously asked "how long he meant to tolerate President Truman's interference in the Government." But while assured of triumph, Dewey and his people have not seemed eager to take up the burdens that triumph will bring. In Paris, his chief foreign affairs adviser, John Foster Dulles, has been almost ostentatiously coy about making commitments at a time when commitments have been badly needed on several subjects. And at Dewey headquarters here, one finds obvious evidence of suspicion that some sort of dornick will be concealed in any offer of cooperation from the outgoing Administration.

This kind of nonsense, fortunately or unfortunately, will rapidly receive its own corrective from events. In fact, what is happening in the defense establishment has already shown how sharp this corrective is bound to be.

With great labor and infinite tact, at the Key West and Newport meetings of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Secretary of Defense James Forrestal managed to glue together a compromise system of interservice cooperation. The system involved abandonment by the Navy of its extreme claims to perform all the functions of the other services, and especially of the Air Force.

Then the solvent of the election began to work, and the system came unglued at once. The admirals, thinking that Ferdinand Eberstadt of the Hoover Commission might be Forrestal's successor, put all their old arguments into their testimony before him. Not long ago, Admiral Daniel V. Gallery, head of the Navy's guided missiles project, even argued in a public speech for the same sort of Navy empire building he had once been rebuked for advocating in a secret memorandum. The defense budget must be drawn before January 20, and the heart of the bitter dispute over it is the relative investment in Navy and Air Force. It is hard enough to make the admirals (and indeed the air generals) obey orders in any case. They will never take orders from officials who have become, for all practical purposes, mere flesh and blood ghosts. Plainly, somebody representing Dewey has got to confirm the orders.

Much the same thing is true in many other fields. The problem of American rearmament of western Europe and the need for effective action in China cry out for immediate decision. Moreover, no intelligible budget can be prepared until such matters are settled. Fortunately, although action in the next few days is not to be expected, Lovett and Forrestal have already pointed the way.

Reds' German Police Force Called Army

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 2 (U.P.). Russia's new police force in eastern Germany is really a Red army, consisting of German war veterans, equipped with tanks, artillery and other heavy weapons, it was charged today.

Maj. Gen. Walter Schreiber, former surgeon general of the German army, who fled to the western sector of Berlin last week, made the charge here.

Schreiber said the chief of staff of the new force is Lieut. Gen. Vincent Mueller, formerly associated with the chief of staff of Adolf Hitler's Wehrmacht. A commander in chief is still to be picked, Schreiber said.

Allied welfare officials announced that they intended to speed up the aerial evacuation of Berlin children to western zones from 700 to 840 a week. The children are those whose parents have asked that they be taken west where they can be better fed.

Movies, Hospitals Nationalized By Romania

Bucharest, Romania, Nov. 2 (U.P.). Decrees nationalizing the motion picture industry and hospitals were approved by the cabinet today.

Owners will be compensated with with government bonds.

One decree nationalized 200 movie theaters, and all movie studios, laboratories and distribution firms.

The other authorized seizure of about 100 hospitals, clinics and sanatoriums, mostly belonging to religious communities.

The decrees exempt property which belongs partly or wholly to foreign powers under the peace treaties.

U. S. Goodwill Ships Reach Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Two United States warships, the cruiser Huntington and the destroyer Douglas H. Fox arrived today from the Cape of Good Hope for a week's goodwill visit.

From here the two ships will go to Montevideo, Uruguay; Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, and Trinidad, British West Indies, before returning to their home bases.

Rear Admiral James Foskett is in command on the Huntington, flagship of the Twelfth Cruiser Division.

Russia Seen 4 Years From Making Bomb

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—William L. Laurence, the New York Times science writer, who was employed by the Manhattan District and given the atomic bomb secrets, writes today in the Saturday Evening Post that it will almost certainly be four years yet before Russia can begin producing atom bombs.

Laurence's estimates are based on published reports from Secretar of War Stimson and the Smyth official summary of bomb-making.

He finds that America's five big plants, making bomb metals, produced only enough for the first three in an average of six months work each. He says our production can be assumed to have speeded up. For this reason we now can have a maximum of 200 to 300 bombs—and could be making one every five days.

The job is so big, he says, that Russia can be expected to require a longer time to make her bombs. The Russian counterparts of the industries that made American bombs are still crude, he says.

22 Persons Hurt as Violence Erupts at French Coal Mines

Paris, Nov. 2 (AP).—Pickets fought their first battle in defense of the coal pits of northern France against police today, and 22 persons were injured in the exchange of gunfire, grenades and stones.

A government official said the striking coal miners tried to burn police alive by throwing gasoline on them and then heaving grenades and torches to fire their clothing.

The battle was fought at Lievin, 20 miles southwest of Lille.

Officials said the miners first overturned a railroad car for a barricade. They dug trenches, poured oil into them and set it alight to halt police.

Then they opened fire with rifles and small grenades, and tossed flaming torches, said Georges Guillemin, spokesman of the Interior Ministry.

Police replied with tear gas and submachine guns fired into the ground, the officials said. Seven police were injured, none seriously.

Miners Leave Scene

After fighting for eight hours, the miners finally marched away flying a red flag and singing "The Internationale."

The police occupied the mine, along with 48 other pits and six coke ovens during the day in the north. Numerous other mines were taken over elsewhere without incident.

Eyewitnesses said many light tanks were used, and government forces included three soldiers—mostly Moroccan infantry—for every policeman.

Despite a back-to-work movement, only a small portion of miners were on the job on the twenty-ninth day of the strike.

Bordeaux and Marseille, two of the country's biggest ports, were almost completely tied up by dockworkers and sailors on strike.

Odria Outlaws Peruvian Communists

Lima, Peru, Nov. 2 (AP).—The new government of Gen. Manuel Odria has issued a decree banning the Peruvian Communist Party.

The same degree reaffirmed a ban on the leftist Apra Party ordered October 4 by the government of the now deposed president, Jose Luis Bustamante.

The new decree was issued, the Odria regime said today, because the previous order did not include the Communist Party. The government said its action was based on agreements made at the Bogota conference last spring.

The Bogota agreements said each American state should take measures to prevent itself from falling prey to "international communism and any other totalitarian regimes." Brazil and Chile previously had outlawed their Communist parties.

Censorship imposed in Peru October 3 was lifted yesterday.

Musso's Death Confirmed

Batavia, Java, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—The Dutch army said today that intelligence reports had confirmed that Musso, Indonesian Communist leader, had been killed October 31 by Indonesian regular army units.

Moral Sense Declining, Prelate Warns Britain

York, England, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—The Archbishop of York, Dr. Cyril F. Garbett, warned the English people today that they are losing their moral sense.

Such offenses as adultery, crime and dishonesty are no longer regarded as serious, he declared.

"Divorce courts show that adultery is so common that it is hardly recognized as blameworthy except by those who have definite religious convictions or by the husband and wife whose happiness and home has been destroyed."

Turkey Restricts Jews

Ankara, Turkey, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—The Turkish government has barred any further movement of Jews from this country to Palestine, it was learned today.

ICC Denies Immediate 8% Freight Rate Rise; Sets Hearing on 13% Boost November 30

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday rejected the railroads' petition for an immediate "emergency" 8 per cent freight rate increase.

The commission announced that it will open hearings November 30 on the general 13 per cent advance in rates asked by the railroads.

At that time, the ICC said, it will also take evidence on the rail industry motion for an 8 per cent increase to be collected while the commission considers the request for a 13 per cent advance on a long-term basis.

The railroads asked the ICC on October 12 for permission to boost rates quickly as an emergency measure in view of new wage increases for rail workers.

The carriers said the situation warranted action without hearing. But they said that if a hearing was necessary, it should be held before the end of October.

The commission's decision to let the matter stand for review on November 30 followed requests from shippers and other interests for a full hearing before any rate increase is granted.

Among those urging a full hearing were the Department of Agriculture and the State Association of Public Utility Commissions.

Other pleas for freight rate hikes came meanwhile from the Coastwise Steamship Lines operating between Atlantic and Gulf ports, the Inland Waterways Corp., operating the Federal barge lines, and 23 freight forwarder organizations. They asked the ICC to let them boost rates in line with any increases that may be granted to the railroads.

The freight forwarders—who assemble small quantity freight for reshipment in car-load lots—requested advances in charges equal to whatever advances may be given the rail carriers.

Turkey Receives Marshall Plan $30,000,000 Loan

Turkey yesterday took a 30-million-dollar Marshall Plan loan from the Economic Cooperation Administration, bringing the total of recovery loans outstanding to $787,300,000.

The Turkish credit left only Belgium and Luxembourg as the Marshall Plan countries which still must sign repayable loan agreements to complete ECA's lending program up to the end of this year.

The loan is repayable in 35 years, with interest at 2½ per cent to start in 1952 and principal payments to begin in 1956.

The money will be used to finance industrial and agricultural projects.

Certificate Of Suicide Issued For J. D. Heinlein

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a certificate of suicide in the death of James D. Heinlein, 34-year-old Washington lawyer, who plunged from the roof of the 12-story Munsey Trust Co., E st. near 14th st. nw., Monday afternoon.

Heinlein landed in a brick-paved alley at the rear of the building. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Emergency Hospital. Police said they learned he had been despondent over domestic troubles. He had recently moved with his wife, Mrs. Mary Janice Heinlein, and two young children to 2105 Belvidere dr., Silver Spring, Md.

Funeral services will be held today at 4 p. m. at the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8434 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md. The body will be sent to Mattoon, Ill., for burial.

Business Outlook

Republican in White House Usually Rallies Wall Street

By J. A. Livingston

IF YOU are one of those strong-stomached souls who bets on form and past performance, then pounce on the nearest telephone, dial your broker, and order a handful of common stocks. Statistically, Thomas E. Dewey should produce a year-end rally in the stock market.

Between 1871 and 1947, we've had 19 presidential elections. Republicans won 11 times, and in eight of those years, stock prices advanced from October to December in celebration of victory. The result cannot be ascribed to autumnal exhilaration. In the eight years of Democratic victories, the stock market went up only twice, declined six times. As for the nonpresidential years, the results were a virtual standoff: 27 times up, 30 times down.

Livingston

Clearly, presidential elections affect Wall Street—bullishly when the Republicans win and bearishly when they lose.

This is partly psychological. Wall Streeters have usually been large contributors to GOP war chests. They have felt kindlier toward Republican tax and business policies. They have been more at home in a Republican White House than in a Democratic White House. Therefore they'd be more inclined to buy securities when their man or their party wins. Even if business conditions aren't exactly to their liking, they'd reason that they'd be able—through their man—to bring about more favorable conditions.

IN THE 11 Republican years, the market has gone up an average of 4.4 per cent. In the eight up years, the gain was 8.6 per cent. But in the three years in which Wall Street failed to follow form, the decline was 6.7 per cent. This last is heavily weighted by the 14 per cent October-December drop in 1920. Then Wall Street was worried about a post-armistice business setback and not about the kind of a President Warren G. Harding would make.

In the eight Democratic years, the average decline in stocks from October to December was 1.6%. Wall Street split on Roosevelt. The market "celebrated" his victory twice, "regretted" it twice. Indeed, he produced the only two Democratic rallies.

Although Wall Street has its heart in presidential elections, it does not bet with its heart—at least not entirely. In Republican years, big market advances have been a prelude to fairly big advances in industrial production. This was notably true in 1897 and 1901 after McKinley won, in 1905 after Theodore Roosevelt, in 1909 after Taft, and 1925 after Coolidge.

WALL STREET guessed wrong on Hoover and the big depression. The October-December rally in 1928 amounted to 14%, highest for any year since 1871. But production and stock prices the next year were off. The following table shows how (a) the stock market reacted to the election and (b) what happened to the stock market and business in the year after the election:

Winner and Year.	Percentage change. Immediate Following year. Stk. Market	Indust'l *Reaction. Stocks.	Product.
Grant, '72	+ 2%	—13%	— 3%
Hayes, '76	— 2	—12	— 3

*October to December of election year.
†Decline due to end of war.

The record suggests that Wall Street forecasts are apt to be more correct in Republican years than in Democratic years. As I judge it, the postelection market was right in 8 out of the 11 Republican victories. Thus, in 1880, 1896, 1900, 1904, 1908 and 1924, the October-December advance heralded an advance in stocks and production the following year. In 1876 the decline augured a decline in stocks and production. And in 1920 the market drop was undoubtedly forecasting the postwar break in commodity prices.

IN DEMOCRATIC years, the market seems to have been wrong three times—in 1884, 1932, 1936; right three times—1892, 1912 and 1916. And twice the reaction was indeterminate—1940 and 1944; for stocks and production in the ensuing years moved in opposite directions.

The answer to it all may be too, too simple. The Republicans were fairly regular winners from 1872 through 1928. That was a period of rapid industrial expansion in the United States. The stock market was responding to the growth curve; so was production. And since Wall Street was usually bullish in Republican years it was usually proved right. Not until the thirties did we hear of "industrial stagnation" and "economic maturity." The question is: Will history repeat? Will the market rally for Dewey? And will history bear the rally out?

D. C. Nonchain Sales Rise 5% In Nine Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington independent retailers sales in September were 19 per cent higher than in August, but only 2 per cent higher than in September, 1947.

The Census Bureau, in its monthly report, added that nine-month sales of local nonchain stores were 5 per cent greater than in the same 1947 period.

September sales of the automotive group showed a drop, compared with the same 1947 month. The decline was 8 per cent, but the nine-month figure remained 21 per cent improved over the same 1947 period.

Best increases for the month were recorded in food, women's apparel, hardware, lumber-building and filling stations. Sharpest declines were shown in jewelry, liquor, shoes and men's apparel.

As reported by the Census Bureau, following are percentage changes for Washington independent retailers' sales as compared with like 1947 periods:

	Sept.	Nine Months

DIVIDEND HIKED: Directors of State Loan & Finance Corp. of Washington yesterday declared a quarterly dividend of 25 cents a common share, payable December 15 to stock of record December 1. The company, which operates 24 loan offices, previously this year paid dividends as follows: 12½ cents a share in first quarter; 15 cents a share in second quarter, and 20 cents a share in third quarter.

GM DIVIDEND: The many holders of General Motors common stock in the Washington area are looking forward eagerly to next Monday's meeting of directors for dividend action. Last August the dividend was raised from 75 cents a share quarterly to $1. If the board declares $1 a share again for the final dividend this year, total payments for 1948 on the common would amount to $3.50 a share. In view of expected record earnings of about $9.50 a share this year, another increase in dividend is quite possible. Last year the company distributed in dividends about 50 per cent of its earnings of $6.24 a share.

MEETINGS: Congressional and governmental leaders will be among speakers from Washington at the fifty-sixth annual convention of the United States Savings and Loan League in New York City, starting November 8 . . . Washington delegation of accountants will attend the mid-Atlantic regional cost conference to be held in Atlantic City November 4 and 5 . . . More than 300 are expected to attend a convention of the Society of Residential Appraisers on November 5 in the Mayflower.

YULE SAVINGS: The Industrial Bank of Washington will distribute about $400,000 to 6500 Christmas Club depositors on November 19, President Jesse H. Mitchell reported yesterday. This is approximately the same amount as last year. Mitchell added that the Christmas Club has been limited for the past two years to 6500 members with applications far exceeding that number. The 1949 club will start on November 22.

INCOME TRENDS: The National City Bank of New York, in its monthly letter, finds that 400 leading corporations reporting in October had combined net income after taxes in the third quarter of 985 million dollars. In the previous quarter the same companies had 921 million dollars profits and in the third quarter of 1947 they had 709 million dollars. Percentagewise, the 400's earnings were up 6.9 per cent in the third quarter over the preceding quarter and up 39 per cent over a year ago. The bank also notes that for the first nine months of this year the 400 had combined net income of $2,780,000,000; a gain of 31 per cent over the $2,122,000,000 of the same period the year before.

Parley Called

FTC, Optical Distributors To Draft Rule

By The Associated Press

Wholesale distributors of optical goods will talk over trade practices in the industry at a conference in Toledo, Ohio, Nov. 18. The meeting will be sponsored by the Federal Trade Commission at the request of members of the industry.

The commission said the purpose of the conference "is to afford all members of the industry opportunity to cooperate with the commission in the establishment of comprehensive trade practice rules directed toward the prevention of unfair methods of competition and other unfair trade practices."

A draft of proposed rules will be prepared after the meeting. A public hearing will be held before the rules are approved by the commission.

Chrysler Nets $6.88 a Share In Nine Months

Chrysler Corp. and United States subsidiaries reported net earnings of $52,568,683 during the first nine months of 1948. This was equal to $6.88 a share and compared with net of $46,863,476 or $5.50 a share in the like period of 1947.

Sales of all Chrysler products for nine months amounted to $1,069,901,744 compared with $989,400,342 in same period of 1947.

President K. T. Keller said Chrysler passenger car and truck sales in the first nine months were 693,559 compared with 693,219 for the same period in 1947. A strike in the plant of one of Chrysler's principal suppliers, he said, cost an additional 80,000 cars during the third quarter of the year.

Keller said the change-over to new model vehicles to be brought out early in 1949 will cost around $75,000,000. He added:

"A creeping advance in the cost of materials and supplies continues. These factors indicate a trend to higher prices on the new models when they are introduced."

TWA in Black for Month

Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc. reported net income of $269,410 for September, and a loss of $1,333,757 for the third quarter of this year.

This figure represents a loss of $1,113,302 for domestic operations, and $220,454 on international operations, and compares to a total profit of $1,241,429 for the third quarter of 1947.

For the first nine months of this year, TWA's loss was $5,714,297.14.

Continental Oil Net Gains

Continental Oil Co. and subsidiaries reported net income of $12,935,334 equal to $2.68 a share for the third quarter of 1948. This compared with $8,718,724 or $1.84 a share in the similar period a year ago.

For the first nine months this year net income totaled $41,871,005 or $8.68 a share against $24,889,113 or $5.24 a share in the like 1947 period.

Letter we hated to write!...
ORDINARILY our Research Division enjoys its job . . . gets a kick out of sending helpful information free to more than 15,000 people who write in each year and ask all kinds of questions about investments.
Sometimes, though, they get a job they hate—like answering a recent memo from one of our managers.
The memo said a man had just come into his office with a list of eleven stocks . . . asked if we knew anything about them . . . mentioned casually that they'd all been purchased prior to 1921!
Our manager looked the securities over . . . saw they were all issued by little-known companies of many years ago . . . and mentally blessed Merrill Lynch for advocating "Investigate then Invest" so strongly. He said he was afraid the companies had "folded-up," that the stocks weren't worth a penny—but he'd send them on to Research and make sure.
And that was the letter we hated to write.* Because the stocks were worthless . . . should never have been bought at all.
The worst thing about that complete loss was that it was so unnecessary! Because there are lots of sound opportunities for investment . . . sensible securities to fit any investment program . . . our Research Division to give you the available facts on any industry, stock, or company that interests you before and after you buy!
Why not ask Research about your own investment problems . . . get a seasoned check on any securities you own now—or may be thinking of buying. There's no charge, no obligation. Just send them to—
Department D-72

Tarawa Campaign Is Called 'Mistake'

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Gen. Holland M. Howling (Mad) Smith of the Marine Corps today said the Tarawa campaign in the South Pacific in 1943 was a mistake and a "terrible waste of life and effort."

General Smith, now retired, whose memoirs are being published in the Saturday Evening Post, commanded the Fifth Amphibious Corps during the fight for the Gilbert Islands atoll in which 990 of his men were killed and 2311 wounded.

"The decision of the joint Chiefs of Staff to seize Tarawa was a mistake," he said, "and from their initial mistake grew the terrible drama of errors—errors of omission rather than commission, resulting in these needless casualtie."

General Smith said the pre-invasion bombardment of Tarawa by the Navy was insufficient.

General Smith also commented on Maj. Gen. Ralph Smith, no relation, who led one regiment of the Twenty-seventh Army Division in the capture of Makin, while Tarawa was being assaulted.

"Makin should have been cleaned up in one day," the author write, "but fighting dragged on three days. . . .

"When I returned to Pearl Harbor, I reported to Admiral Nimitz that had Ralph Smith been a Marine I would have relieved him of command on the spot. His conduct of the operations did not measure up to my expectations in the slightest degree."

Speaking of Lieut. Gen. Robert C. Richardson, jr., commander at the time of Army troops in the Pacific, the Marine general says: "His nickname was 'Nellie.' Richardson caused more than a lifting of eyebrows when he decorated members of his staff with the Legion of Merit for what he termed the 'massive planning' of the Makin operation. All the approved plan for Makin came out of my office."

China Reds Sweep Over Three Cities

Nanking, China, Nov. 2 (U.P.)—Chinese Communist troops racing southward from Mukden occupied three more important cities today and trapped two Nationalist divisions at the Gulf of Chihli port of Yingkow.

One Communist force swept to within 20 miles of Yingkow, where about 25,000 government troops awaited ships to evacuate them.

Government officials admitted shipping could not be supplied in time to save the Nationalists or their American-made trucks, tanks and artillery.

Other Communist Advances

Other Communist columns were reported advancing southward toward Shanhaikwan.

The Communist radio announced occupation of the steel city of Anshan and the towns of Liaoyang and Haichun.

Chiang Calls Cabinet

Premier Weng Wen-hao and Finance Minister Wang Yun-wu, who yesterday submitted resignations to President Chiang Kai-shek and were asked to remain on the job during the crisis, told the Legislative Yuan (Parliament) today that they still wanted to resign.

Chiang called an urgent cabinet meeting for Wednesday to discuss the situation.

United States consular sources at Peiping said about half of the 900 Americans in North China were expected to remain there.

South Korea Police Thwart New Red Plot

Seoul, Nov. 2 (AP).—A second Communist uprising in South Korea has been thwarted, an informed official said today.

The official said Communists in the Korean army stationed at Taegu, in southeast Korea, had planned to revolt and seize police stations tomorrow after the pattern of the recent Yosu uprising.

The plan was upset, the source said, when Korean military police attempted to make an arrest and firing broke out.

The source said that the Taegu garrison, reduced to 200 men by the previous revolt, apparently had been controlled by Communists, but that loyalist troops had taken over, and practically all of the leftists had surrendered.

One military policeman was reported killed.

Tojo to Hear Court Verdict On Thursday

Tokyo, Nov. 2 (U.P.)—Judgment will be pronounced Thursday on former Premier Hideki Tojo and 24 codefendents who led wartime Japan, after the longest trial in recent history.

The allied military tribunal for the Far East will start reading the verdicts at 9:30 a. m., (7:30 p. m., EST Wednesday) and is expected to take from 10 to 14 days to finish.

The court has been recessed for six months while the 11 judges examined some nine million words of evidence, and compiled more than 2500 pages of verdicts and sentences.

Although two of the original 28 defendants died and a third was declared insane, most of the remainder seemed to have thrived in Sugamo prison.

The defendants were charged on 55 counts of crimes against peace, murder, crimes against humanity and other war crimes from January 1, 1928, to September 2, 1945.

Israelis Hold Lebanese Hills, But Will Advance no Farther

Tel Aviv, Nov. 2 (NYHT).—The Israeli army indicated firmly today it had no intention of relinquishing the Lebanese hills which it captured this week. At the same time, the army pledged it did not plan to push farther into Lebanon.

"We simply recaptured the Lebanese hills that we had taken early in the truce and we intend to hold on to them," the army spokesman said.

The truce commission announced today that the Syrian government had declared its refusal henceforth to permit U. N. observers to visit its front lines.

The only military activity today centered in the north Arab triangle, where Israeli officials said Iraqui artillery again had pounded Ein Shemer settlement.

The lull in the fighting has led to widespread reports of renewed Arab-Jewish peace talks. There were even reports that U. N. observers in Jerusalem were acting as mediators in expediting talks between Trans-Jordan and Israel. However, an Israeli foreign ministry representative denied tonight that any talks were taking place.

Bunche Palestine Plan Is Backed by Ukraine

Paris, Nov. 2 (U.P.)—The Soviet Ukraine introduced in the United Nations today a resolution calling on Jews and Arabs to settle their differences in Palestine by direct negotiation.

The Ukraine move, if adopted, would bypass the plan of the late Count Folke Bernadotte.

The resolution followed suggestions made by Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, U. N. mediator in Palestine.

Britain failed today in an attempt to force a meeting of the Security Council Wednesday to vote on a resolution which would threaten the Jews with penalties if they persisted in their refusal to give up conquered Negev territory. It will come up Thursday.

Caps Meet Warriors In Opener Tonight

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

AMERICA MADE ITS CHOICE at the polls yesterday, and golf was restored as the major sport of the White House, according to the trend of the early balloting. Tom Dewey, a low 80s man, apparently is bringing the game back to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue after a 26-year absence of golfing Presidents.

POVICH

There were other issues that influenced the voting, no doubt, but one apparent effect of the balloting was to vote horseshoe pitching out as the chief sport at the Executive Mansion. When and if Mr. Truman's tenancy expires in January he will be literally pulling up stakes, the ones driven into the White House lawn a couple of years ago when he revealed himself a devotee of the barnyard game.

Not since Warren Harding died in office in 1922, has there been a golfing President and perhaps Dewey is beginning a new cycle. The two Presidents who preceded Harding, Woodrow Wilson and William Howard Taft, were not quite the same golfing fiends as Harding, but they were no strangers to the game and the newspaper morgues are full of their photos in golf attire.

DEWEY HAS HIS good days on the golf course, and days when he's a duffer, too. Harding took the game more seriously, even to the point of donning knickers with tasseled hose. Chevy Chase was his favorite course, but at Ned McLean's private links at Friendship Mr. Harding had the most fun in the foursomes with Mr. McLean, White House Secretary George B. Christian and Freddie McLeod, the Columbia pro. They'd bet, plenty.

Poker was another favorite White House game in the Harding Administration and not until Mr. Truman came along was there a second poker-playing President. From the golf foursomes at Friendship, Harding and his party would adjourn to McLean's Little Green House on K Street, where it started off with a $5 limit.

President Wilson could "five" his opponents to distraction with his short but steady down-the-middle game on the golf links, and he studied his putts and scrutinized the bent of the greens with no less care than he composed a State of the Nation address to Congress. But baseball was his second love. He used to go to Griffith Stadium unannounced and watch the game from his open car parked near the right field foul line. Clark Griffith used to station a substitute catcher on the running board to intercept any errant foul balls in that direction.

PRESIDENT TAFT was not one of the good White House golfers, but he made one golf course famous. Up at Bar Harbor, Me., hard by Lafayette National Park, tourists are still being shown the old seventh hole of the Kabo Valley course where in 1911 Taft took 17 niblick strokes to get out of a deep and diabolical sand-trap with an overhanging lip in front of the green.

Taft, with Harding and Wilson, were the baseball-minded Presidents. It was Taft who set the fashion of attending opening games in Griffith Stadium, and made his first appearance at a baseball inaugural in 1910. His brother was a heavy stockholder in the Phillies when they were winning championships. Harding owned the Marion, Ohio, team in one of the minor leagues and prided himself on his ability to keep a professional box score.

The lustiest sportsman among the Presidents, though, was Teddy Roosevelt, who went in for big game hunting and set up a boxing ring in the White House. If there was a more virile Chief Executive it must have been Abe Lincoln, the old wrestler. However, it was T. R. who once threatened to outlaw college football by White House decree, or some such ukase, unless the teams eliminated the old flying wedge that was claiming too many lives of players.

FISHING CAME into its own in the White House with the elevation of Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover to the Presidency, with Hoover the more proficient caster. He beat it down to the Rappahannock in Virginia at every excuse, packing the little wicker basket that is the badge of the true fisherman. It was Coolidge, though, who introduced the most-photographed White House gadget—the iron horse on which he took his morning gallops in a stationary chatter.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, the old water polo star from Groton, gave the White House swimming pool more of a workout than any other Chief Executive and rolled up a total of more opening-game appearances than any other President. He made the World Series, too.

F. D. was the champion applause-getter too. He wasn't the baseball fan that Wilson, Taft and Harding were, but when he came into the park and gave the crowd that two-fisted, hands-over-head fighter's handshake greeting, the peepul loved it and he could act more like a fan than anybody else the White House ever sent out.

Amazing Fulks Leads Philadelphia

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Professional basketball muscles into the football season tonight with the Washington Caps opening their championship campaign against the Philadelphia Warriors at Uline's Arena.

Tapoff time is 8:45 and a crowd of about 4500 is expected to see the first of 29 home games.

Launching their third season in Basketball Association of America play, the Caps and Warriors are two of the hottest clubs in the 12-team circuit.

Four All-Stars

Between them, the two squads have four of the five players selected on the all-league club last season. The Warriors own three in Joe Fulks, pro basketball's greatest scorer; Ed Sadowski, the huge center from Seton Hall; and Howie Dallmar, brilliant ball-handler and play-maker.

The Caps' contribution is Captain Bob Feerick, recognized by many as the best all-around player in pro basketball's fastest league.

Although the Caps trimmed them, 83-79, in an exhibition game in Atlantic City Friday, the Warriors have been marked as the team to beat for the league's Eastern championship.

Musi, Senesky on Team

Teaming with the high-scoring Fulks, Sadowski and Dallmar will be Angelo Musi, bantam forward and George Senesky, rugged guard.

With the exception of the 260-pound, 6-foot 6-inch Sadowski, obtained from the Boston Celtics in a swap for Chick Halbert, the Warriors will field the same team which won the Eastern flag last season.

Fulks set an all-time pro scoring record in 1946-47 with over 1300 points in 60 games. He was restricted to 949 points in 48 games last year, missing 11 games with a leg injury. Sadowski, the new Warrior pivot man, tallied 910 for the cellar-dwelling Bostonians.

Hermsen New Cap

Eliminated from the playoffs last year, the Caps have made two important changes in their starting five. Freddie Scolari, the chubby little guard with the one-handed push shot, is back to team with Feerick at guard and Bones McKinney, the clowning forward will be at his usual spot.

Gone, however, is Georgetown's Johnny Mahnken, replaced by Kleggie Hermsen, 6-foot 9-inch center whom the Caps obtained from Baltimore for Mahnken. Johnny Norlander, another member of the original Caps, is back, but not as a starter. Sonny Hertzberg, the New York set shot artist, replaces Norlander in the opening unit.

Relief will come from Norlander and Dick O'Keefe, another holdover, and Leo Katkaveck, Matt Zunic and Dick Schulz, all newcomers.

Schulz came from Baltimore in exchange for Irv Torgoff; Katkaveck was the star member of North Carolina State's Southern Conference championship club and Zunic is a former George Washington standout.

In a special preliminary, opening the newly organized six-team Uline Industrial League at 7:30 o'clock, Federal Bureau of Investigation opposes McKee Pontiac.

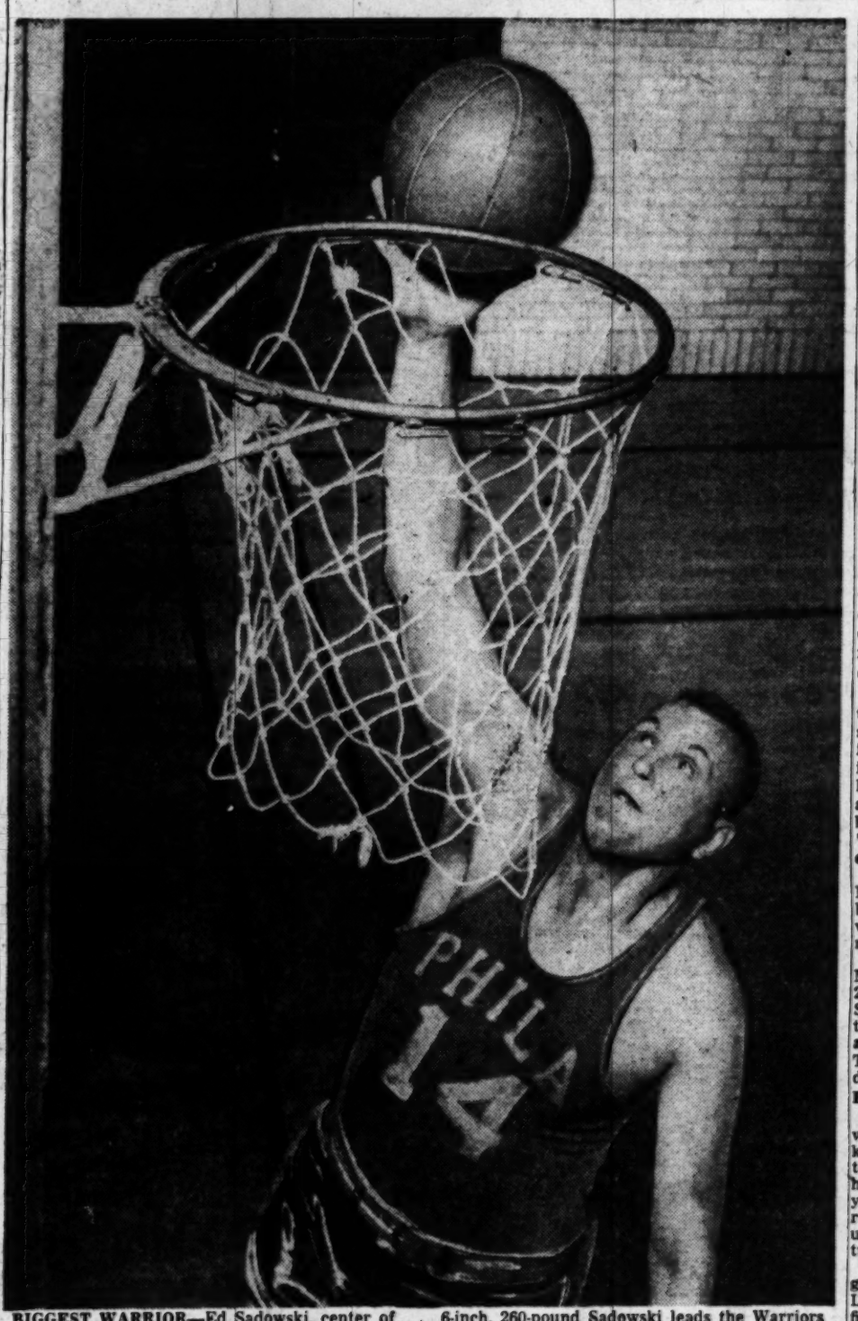
Tulsa Pulls Out of Delta Bowl

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 2 (AP).—Burdened by five defeats, a tie and no victories, the University of Tulsa today let go of its contract to play football in Memphis' Delta bowl on New Year's Day.

In withdrawing from an agreement made before the season opened, the school left Delta Bowl officials free to sign as host team an eleven with more winning ways.

Announcing the decision, Tulsa President Dr. C. I. Pontius said it reflected no lack of confidence in the squad or the coaching staff headed by J. O. (Buddy) Brothers.

But, he added, "the record of our team has not been impressive."



BIGGEST WARRIOR—Ed Sadowski, center of the Philadelphia Warriors, is one of the biggest men in the Basketball Association of America, whose season opens here tonight. The 6-foot 6-inch, 260-pound Sadowski leads the Warriors against Washington Capitols at Uline Arena. Above Sadowski reaches up for a lay-in shot. The game starts at 8:30

In Britain They Pick the Horses By Riddles, Singing Commercials

London, Nov. 2 (AP).—Horse handicapping is plain screwy in Britain.

Practically all experts for newspapers have aliases, a handy shield if there is a run of losing tips.

Newspapers also have cute ways of giving tips. The Evening Standard has a "cryptip" in which they hint at a winner and you confirm by turning the paper sideways and peeking at the white space in the fold.

The Daily Express has a selection feature named "Riddle-Me-Ree." It is the British equivalent of the singing commercial. Riddle-Me gives a two line rhyme and you guess what, to wit:

"My first as exclamation might signify delight, "my next perhaps opinion or that which lies in sight. "My whole may win Sandown's 4 o'clock race."

That day Riddle-Me was right. The answer—Good View won.

Giants Offer Cooper to Cubs For Pitcher

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Leo Durocher came bustling into town today with the avowed urpose of lining up possible player trades for his New York Giants.

The voluble Giant skipper said he planned to hold several conferences with his boss, Horace Stoneham, and added he might have something to announce within a day or two.

"It is no secret that we are on the lookout for pitchers," he said. "I have talked with several club officials along those lines. Thus far, we have run up against a stone wall."

Durocher declined to reveal the players he sought, but admitted he offered Walker Cooper, his high-salaried catcher, to the Chicago Cubs in exchange for a pitcher.

"Mr. Stoneham and I were in Chicago recently, and we made Jimmy Gallagher, Cub general manager, a fine offer that included Cooper. He turned us down, however. No, I won't tell you those we asked for, nor those we offered in addition to Cooper.

"What I will tell you, however, is that at no time did we discuss Johnny Mize. He has never been discussed in any deal."

Although Durocher did not say, it was reliably reported that the pitched he wanted was Johnny Schmitz, the Cubs' southpaw hurler who won 18 games last season.

Thanks to Stephenson

Blaik Says Army Better Than Davis, Blanchard Team of '45

West Point, Nov. 2 (AP).—There is a growing feeling around here that Gil Stephenson, a thin-shanked fullback from Columbus, Ga., and the 1949 Army team are about to make the Cadets forget Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis.

Coach Earl Blaik himself says his present team is much better than last year's, and even better than the '45 outfit, on which Davis and Blanchard played.

Up to now, the Army mentor is not classing it with his all-conquering array of '46, when "Mr. Inside" and "Mr. Outside" reached their heights.

But Stephenson could change Blaik's mind about that, too.

Stephenson, a yearling with only six varsity games behind him, really looks like something special. He pops through an opposing line like a rabbit out of the underbrush, and he is harder to get down than a greased shoat.

He has carried 103 times—exclusively through the middle—for 662 yards, or an average of 6.4 yards. Against Virginia Tech last week he averaged over 8 yards, though two fine runs of 23 and 13 yards were called back.

Stanford will find it as difficult to understand where Stephenson gets his driving power as it will be to flag him down. He stands an even 6 feet and wighs only 181, yet as he slams and wrenches his way through the secondary he gives the impression he is rocket propelled.

In addition to the savagery of its running and blocking, Army's offensive team also sports a dangerous passing attack. Arnold Galiffa, the team's tall quarterback from Donora, Pa., is at last living up to his advance notices as a thrower.

Last year he was something of a bust, principally because he didn't know his own strength. He either knocked his receivers down up close or passed over their heads. Now he is connecting with some beauties.

But Stephenson still is the heart and body of the team. They claim up here that Stephenson's meteoric display has come as a mild surprise—that they knew he was pretty good, but not that good.

Terrapin Harriers Beat Virginia Tech

Blacksburg, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—The University of Maryland's undefeated cross country team won a close meet with Virginia Tech here today, 21-39.

Bob Palmer, Maryland ace, led the field by 200 yards with the time of 20 minutes and 38 seconds. Jim Umbarger of Maryland was second in 21 minutes and 37 seconds.

Battered Hoyas Wary of NYU

Key Players May Be Out For Friday

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

A battered Georgetown football squad yesterday started serious preparations for its game at Griffith Stadium Friday night with New York University.

Consoling thought for the Hoyas was that they don't have to face powerful Villanova for another week. They certainly wouldn't be ready for the Wildcats Friday.

The Georgetown footballers had more than their feelings hurt in that 10-10 tie with Denver. Definitely lost for NYU is End Al Sarashevitz. Tackle Tom Dolan, Guard Jim Ricca, Tackle Jim O'Keefe and Quarterback Connie O'Doherty aren't expected to see more than limited action.

Conn Still Limping

Brilliant Billy Conn, who missed the entire second half against the surprising Pioneers, still is limping from the effects of a knee injury and Jack Hagerty won't use him any more than he has to. In addition, sundry others are hobbling around with a few miles of Trainer Eddie Anderson's tape encasing them.

Chances are the handicapped Hoyas will have to go all out to beat a Violet team that ordinarily wouldn't figure to give them too much trouble.

Coaches Mike Palm and George Murtagh scouted N. Y. U. in its 21-20 conquest of Lehigh last Saturday and concur in the belief that any team that can overcome a 20-0 deficit is mighty dangerous. That's just what Hook Mylin's boys did against Lehigh.

Payne Raced 85 Yards

Glaring inadequacy against Denver was Georgetown's coverage on kickoffs and punts. It's interesting to note that N. Y. U.'s Billy Payne, hard-running Negro star, went 85 yards for a touchdown on a kickoff return against Lehigh and he set up the winning touchdown by returning a punt 30 yards.

Here's something else, Denver got its touchdown after blocking Lou Surman's punt. It was the first time the Hoyas had a kick blocked this season. N. Y. U's. Dante Gionta, captain and tackle, specializes in this sort of thing.

Gionta, named on the Associated Press All-East squad last year, blocked four punts in 1937 and two of them were converted into Violet touchdowns. And this season Dante reportedly continues to stir up an inferno when opponents fall back to kick.

GEORGETOWN JOTTINGS—Jim Ricca will be a highly disappointed 240-pound boy if he can't play against NYU. At Brooklyn's Boys High he played with Allen Hopewell, Mike Fazio, Phil Cox and Irv Mondschein. And he's anxious to show these Violets that he's progressing . . . Said Ricca: "This is the one I've waited for all year." Big Jim hasn't had two sound legs since his inspiring game against Boston College . . . The Hoyas hope that NYU Coach Hook Mylin will again be a sound prophet . . . At the New York Football Writers' luncheon Monday, Mylin said Georgetown would slaughter his team. The week before, he predicted that the 21-20 Lehigh game would be "fairly even" . . . Georgetown now has a 7-4-2 record in the NYU series that started 20 years ago . . . It gained its bulge by taking the last five games . . . You have to go back to 1936 to find NYU gaining as much as a 7-7 tie . . . The previous year NYU won, 7-6.

Baugh Near Top

Sandifer Leads in 2 Departments

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Shy Dan Sandifer, who gets downright forward with a football under his arm, yesterday gave the Washington Redskins their main boasting point as National Football League individual statistics were released.

Rookie Dan was holding down first place in the pass interception department, second in kickoff returns and eight in punt returns as a result of his play during the Redskins' 59-1 rout of Boston here.

Dan Steals Passes

He stole four passes, two for touchdowns, bringing his total interceptions to nine for the season, good for 5 yards. On kicko returns he rates just under the Packers' Oscar Smith, having carried the ball 10 times for 47 yards and the only kickoff return for a touchdown among the league leaders. Seven times he's run back punts, averaging 12.9 yards a time.

Despite its second place in the eastern division with half the season gone, Washington's individual stars were numbered.

Naturally, Slingin' Sam Baugh ranked high among passers—an over-all fourth on the strength of his brilliant play Sunday. He was well ahead in yards gained (exactly 1200), and second by a fraction to the Eagles' Tommy Thompson on percentage with 60.3. So far he's pitched eight touchdown passes, one under the marks of Thompson and New York's Charley Conerly, and his completion for an 86-yard gain against the Giants still rates as the season's longest.

Baugh Adds Record

Sammy added a new record over the weekend to his grid aerial collection.

He pitched 24 passes, completing 17 for 446 yards and four touchdowns against the Boston Yanks. It was the most ever gained by one passer through the air in a single game and boosted Baugh's lifetime record to 1275 completions in 2214 tries for 16,397 yards.

Mont Ranks Too

Tommy Mont, Baugh's understudy, was eleventh in the passing department with 10 completions in 22 tosses and an average of 45.5. With five catches Sunday, Dick Todd earned eighth place among the receivers, having caught 19 passes this season, picked up 321 yards and two touchdowns. Dick Poillon was sixth among scorers with 33 points on 18 extra points, 1 touchdown and 3 field goals; and fifth in the punting division with a 45.3-yard average on 26 kicked.

Steve Van Buren, Philadelphia's speedy halfback and the NFL's ground-gaining record holder, moved from fourth to second place among the leading ball carriers with the '48 pro campaign half over.

The Eagle star rushed 109 yards against Pittsburgh Sunday to boost his total to 373 yards on 112 attempts. Green Bay's Tony Canadeo, leader from the season's start, has 445 yards in 80 tries while Charley Trippi, the Chicago Cardinal flash, is third with 370 yards gained in 59 attempts.

Redskin headquarters frankly expect Sunday's crowd for their game in Boston to be "pretty small" . . . Even lower than the 19,731 which saw last year's game in Beantown . . . That was a 27-24 loss for the 'Skins, remember, after they had racked up the Yanks, 40-13, at home . .

Fittingly enough, Steve (00) Bagarus, who signed for a comeback this week with the 'Skins, will make his first '48 start in Boston . . . He also opened his pro career in Boston in 1945 scoring his first touchdown by catching a short Baugh pass and sliding on his nose through a mud puddle into the end zone . . . Bagarus appeared on three radio programs and one television show in his first 24 hours back in Washington . . . Towering Hal Crisler insists his name is pronounced with a short "i".

Louis Says He'd Rather Meet Baksi Than Ez Charles

Roanoke, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—The Roanoke World-News today quoted Heavyweight Champ Joe Louis as saying he would rather defend his title against Joe Baksi than Ezzard Charles.

The paper quoted Louis as saying, "The fans won't like to see a little man matched against a big one."

Ken Stribling Fights Monday

Ken Stribling, the Washington middleweight, returns to Turner's Arena, next Monday night, against newcomer Joe Blackwood, of Boston, in the feature ten-rounder.

Blackwood is a stablemate of the heavyweight contender, Lee Savold, trains frequently with Savold, and is highly regarded in New England rings, where he has campaigned mostly the past two years.

Blackwood, 21, has fought two draws with Ralph "Zipper" Zanelli; knocked out Jimmy Sheppard and George Marton, and holds victories over Al Costa, Gene Farland, Coley Welsh, Van McNutt, Henry Jordon and the Falls River, Mass., star, Al Priest.

Stribling is making his third local start since last spring. He put up a good fight against Jake LaMotta at the Ball Park and in his other bout lost to Randy Brown, who recently fought a draw with Steve Belloise.

Barclay Suffers Wrenched Knee, Hit by Blocker

The only casualty at the University of Maryland's football practice yesterday was Line Coach George Barclay, who suffered a wrenched knee when he was clipped by a freshman blocker.

Otherwise the Terps came through a scrimmage in preparation for Saturday's South Carolina game in good fashion.

Heath's Not Eligible in '49

Reno, Nev., Nov. 2 (AP).—Stan Heath, ace Nevada passing quarterback, is through at the University of Nevada after this season because of eligibility rules, Coach Joe Sheeketski said today.

Heath plans to enter professional football anyway, and the announcement made no change in the picture.

Sheeketski explained although Nevada is not a member of the Pacific Coast Conference, it still follows the conference eligibility rules, along with most other major Western independents.

Heath, who throughout this season has led the Nation in yards gained by forward passing, used up one year of collegiate eligibility at the University of Wisconsin. He has played here two years and lost the fourth year by his transfer to Nevada, Shetkeeski said.

The tall Wolfpack passing wizard said today he has heard that the National Pro Football League will not hire players until the class with which they started college has graduated.

In Heath's case, that would mean 1950 before he could join a team in the National League. But that wouldn't necessarily exclude him from other pro contracts.

"I'll turn pro when my college competition at Nevada is finished," Heath told interviewers today. He said he has been aware all the time that his college eligibility ends this season.

Virginia Adds Tulane in '49

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Tulane University has been added to the University of Virginia football schedule for 1949 and 1950.

Captain Norton G. Pritchett, athletic director, said the Cavaliers' football schedules for the next two seasons have not been completed, but that games with Tulane on a home-and-home basis have been arranged. Tulane will come here November 19, 1949, and the Cavaliers will go to New Orleans for the return engagement, Nov. 18, 1950.

Clark Wins Rifle Medal

David A. Clark, 17, 1202 N. Dinwiddie st., Arlington, has won the expert rifleman's medal, the National Rifle Association announced yesterday.

Lions Invade Philly Tonight

Coach Frank Beisler's Washington Lions return to action tonight when they invade the Philadelphia Arena for an American Hockey League match with Coach Wally Kilrea's Rockets.

On Friday night the local pros return to Uline ice against the Eastern Division leading Providence Reds at 8:30 o'clock.

5 Wins, No Losses

Plebe Team May Bring Navy Out of Football Cellar in '49

SO YOU'VE been pitying Navy's poor winless football team?

According to Jeff Harmon and Andy Victor, assistant coaches at Bullis Prep and George Washington University, you can stop feeling sorry. They'll tell you that prosperity is just around the corner for the Middie gridders.

The dawn after the darkest, they'll tell you, will be the great Navy Plebe team which, this season, has bowled over five straight victims with 253 points to 26 for the opposition.

Harmon, who has twice scouted the Plebes for the game with Bullis three weeks hence, calls it one of the greatest Navy first-year teams in history.

"The worst part of it for us is that Quarterback Mike Sorrentino, Tackle Paul Tetrault and Guard Bob McGowan, key players, were trained by Bullis last year," he says.

Victor coached the George Washington fair - to - middlin' freshman team which was annihilated by the Plebes, 38-6, three weeks ago.

He agrees with Navy Varsity Coach George Sauer's semi-private contention that four or five of the Plebes could play with the first team right now. Sauer can't use them, however, because the Plebes correspond to freshmen at other colleges.

The Plebes use the same T attack, of course, that is employed by the varsity. Besides the win over G. W., it has netted them triumphs over Delaware Frosh, 7-6, Duke Frosh, 52-0, Temple Frosh, 42-14, and Bainbridge Naval Training Station, 44-0.

While the varsity has been scrounging for material, Plebe Coach Ben Martin, 1944 Navy star, has been using a three-team system. His team is two-deep in excellent quarterbacks.

Sorrentino is the master ball-handler, and a short, bullet-pass specialist. He passed for five tohchdowns against Duke. Two-hundred pound Bob Zastow is the other signal caller, and his touchdown passes have traveled 80 yards. Their favorite target is Pat McDonald, 19-year-old end, very good on defense, too.

HERB REPT.

Celts Lose Shirts In Huge Fire

Boston, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Boston Celtics, who had hopes of being the best dressed team in the Basketball Association of America, will be forced to wear last season's uniforms when they open their season at Philadelphia on Thursday.

They lost four sets of brand new uniforms, 20 basketballs and all first aid equipment and medical supplies in the $75,000 fire in their home gym. The Celtics today announced the release of Ed Stutz.

Cards Rate Among Great Scoring Clubs

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP).—Jimmy Conzelman's explosive Chicago Cardinals are making a pretty persuasive case for themselves as one of the greatest offensive football teams of all time.

This is what the Cardinals have done in their first six National Football League games:

1. Gained a grand total of 2506 yards—an average of better than 400 yards per game.

2. Piled up 1387 on the ground, an average of more than 200 per game.

3. Passed for 1108 yards, an average of almost 200 per game.

4. Scored 194 points, more than 30 in each contest played.

5. Tallied 26 touchdowns, an average of nearly five trips into the enemy end zone per game.

Each of these marks is the best in the league, according to statistics released today, with the exception of passing yardage. Here the Cardinals trail the Los Angeles Rams (1618) and Washington Redskins (1407).

The Redskins top the circuit in percentage of pass completions, havig connected on 57 per cent of their tosses. The Eagles rank second here with a mark of 55.3.

The Chicago Bears—currently tied with the Cardinals for the NFL Western Division lead—are deadlocked with the Cardinals in total touchdowns at 26 each. Third place belongs to the Philadelphia Eagles—Eastern Division leader—with 23.

In punting, the Eagles, led by Joe Muha, also top the loop with an average of 46.2 yards. The Skins are second at 45.2.

On the defensive side, the Bears and Eagles are the whole show. The Bears have permitted the fewest yards both by passing and running. On the ground Bear foes have been limited to 485 yards and in the air to 779. The Eagles are second in ground defense with 670 and Green Bay's Packers second in air defense with 820.

The Eagles have permitted the fewest points—63—and the Bears second with 71.

French Lead Horse Show

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).— Mexico's Olympic champions took a back seat at the opening of the National Horse Show today as French army horses and riders scored heavily in the first event of the international military jumping competition.

A crowd of some 3500 which attended the opening performance of the sixtieth annual show in Madison Square Garden saw Lieut. Guy LeFrant of France win the event with two faultless rides over the nine-jump course on Ourpha, an aged bay mare.

A five-way tie developed for second place when the performance of Col. Humberto Mariles, winner of the Prix de Nations individual title at the 1948 Olympics and leader of the Mexican team which took the team championship, was equalled by four others in a jump-off.

Flamingo, a beautiful 4-year-old pinto owned and ridden by Morton W. (Cappy) Smith of Middleburg, Va., started his bid for the open jumper title by taking the first of 10 events counting toward the championship.

Second place went to Velvet Lassie, a bay owned by Mrs. Hubert Thomas of Carmel, Ind.

Golden Boy, a 5-year-old chestnut gelding from the Seven Star Stable at Southern Pines, N. C., and ridden by the establishment's trainer, Mickey Walsh, captured the first of seven events leading to the working hunter title.

Runnerup was Midkiff's Melody, owned by Mr. and Mrs. William Joshua Barney, jr., of Westport, Conn., while Petrescu, owned by Martin Vogel, jr., of Warrenton, Va., was third and Party Miss, owned by George W. Fitzpatrick of Baltimore was fourth.

GW Should End Losing Streak Saturday

Light Citadel Lacks Strong Air Attack

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

George Washington should end its three-game losing streak this Saturday at Charleston, S. C.

Its foe, The Citadel, has won only two out of five against mediocre opposition. Its only fores are a good defense and very good punting.

Citadel is light, has been hampered by injuries, has no passing attack. Its best runner is Lucian Pinckney, a 165-pound halfback from Mount Pleasant, S. C., whose 44-yard touchdown run against Erskine last Saturday sparked a 19-0 Citadel victory.

Pinckney operates out of the unconventional Tennessee type wing, which was patented years ago by Coach Boy Neyland of the Vols.

Quinn Decker, coach of Citadel, played under Neyland in 1929-32, and carried the system to the Charleston, S. C., school.

For G. W., which has faced the T-formation seven straight times this season, the new attack should be a novelty. It places a heavy burden on the quarterback, who stands slightly to the right and rear of the center, and takes the pass like a T quarterback. However, after handing the ball off, the quarterback acts like a single wing quarterback and blocks for his ball carrier.

Citadel has three fair quarterbacks in Charlie Fabian, Max Tedder and Charlie Goodman. None is a good passer, though, and hands off to Fullback Walter Brugh for the pass plays.

The Bulldogs' line averages 187 pounds, with tackles Jim Whelan, 206, and Ken Drawdy, 200, the big boys. Billed as their best forward is Bill Henderson, 195-pound guard, who has been all-State for two straight years. He was all-South service player in 1945 while performing at Charleston Coast Guard Base.

A Washington boy who might get a chance against G. W. is Al Bohlen, No. 2 fullback, who played at Montgomery Blair High.

Indoor Midget Car Racing Bows in At Uline Thursday

Director Tom Lane of Majestic Raceways announced last night that five more entries from top Offenhauser and Ford V-8 drivers were received yesterday for the opening of weekly indoor midget racing at Uline Arena tomorrow night.

Latest doodlebug pilots to enroll for the grand inaugural were Larry Bloomer, a former national champion; Hawley Kight, one of the leading money-winners among the Nation's Fordsters, and Andy Furci, Ralph Sheeler and Norman Gonzales.

Rex Records, the Stamford, Conn., ace, and Tony Bonadies from Brooklyn, N. Y., will be here for opening night if they can obtain cars. The cars of both men blew up last Sunday while competing at Thompson, Conn. Nearly 40 little cars will participate in the time trials which will be run at Uline tomorrow from 2 to 6 p. m. The 20 fastest of these machines will qualify for the seven-event program

Harbert, 2 Newcomers Lead North-South Golf With 68s

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 2 (AP).—Chick Harbert, long driving pro from Northville, Mich.; Julius Boros, a good amateur from Bridgeport, Conn., and Glenn Teal, unaffiliated Charlotte, N. C., pro, shot their way into a three-cornered tie for the lead in the first round of the North and South Open tournament today.

Each had an opening round of 68, 4 under par.

Harbert and Boros each had rounds of 34-34 while Teal shot 35-33. One stroke behind them was Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, while Sam Snead, the White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., slugger, had an even 70.

One stroke behind the trio came Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., who had a 33, 36—69. Right back of him was Sam Snead of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., with a 36, 34—70.

In the 71 group were Jack Burke of White Plains, N. J., Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Jim Turnesa of Elmsford, N. Y.; H. T. Nettlebladt of Avon, Conn., and Joe Zarhardt of Greensboro, N. C.

Lew Worsham, the Oakmont, Pa., pro, who lives in Washington, D. C., was far down the list with 37-38—75.

Other Middle Atlantic representatives buried in the rest of the field were: Walter Romans, Baltimore, 76; Harold L. Oatman, Norfolk, 78; Harry Griesmer, Bethesda, 79; Charles B. Price, Washington, D. C., 79; Al Houghton, Landover, Md., 79; Jimmy Duke, Baltimore, 82, and Bob Hamilton, Landover, Md., withdrew.

Otto Greiner, Baltimore, 73; Charlie Bassler, Catonsville, Md., 75; Andy Gibson, Baltimore, 76; Leo Walper, Washington, D. C., 80, and Doug Berry, Norfolk, 84.

James Defends Substitutions

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 2 (AP).—A suggestion that substitutions in college football be limited was poohpoohed today by Cornell University's head coach, George K. (Lefty) James, who is credited with making 296 lineup changes in defeating Columbia last Saturday.

James Phelan, coach of the Los Angeles Dons of the All-America Football Conference, took issue with the unlimited substitutions rule yesterday at a New York football writers' luncheon.

The success of the Cornell team, James observed, "has been due largely to free substituting." Cornell, stopped by Army for its only loss of the season, uses both offensive and defensive units.

"I had an idea," James said, "that we would hear something of this sooner or later because certain coaches either didn't originate the idea or didn't get into the act early."

Phelan said his next-seat neighbor at the Cornell-Columbia game tabulated every substitution.

Phelan said the man came up with a total of 296 changes.

James said only 27 players saw action against Columbia.

He also observed that many squad members who wouldn't participate in a game under the old system of limited substitutions now play "considerably" in every contest.

Election Day Crowd of 15,500 Sees Istan Win at Pimlico

After Princeton

Virginia Rebuilding For N. C. State

Richmond, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—As usual, University of Virginia Coach Art Guepe wasn't complaining publicly today. But there wasn't any doubt that the blond boss of the Cavalier football team had the toughest rebuilding chore on his hands of any Old Dominion mentor.

Between now and Saturday, when the Cavaliers tangle with N. C. State, Guepe somehow had to find replacements for three backfield regulars who were put out of action indefinitely in last weekend's debacle at Princeton.

Leading the list of backs with busted bones was Quarterback Joe McCary, Cavalier captain, who fractured his right hand against the Tigers. Then there was Halfback Floyd Tayloe, who suffered a separated right shoulder.

Fortunately for Guepe, the Cavaliers are well stocked with hard-running backs. The loss of Jones and Tayloe probably means that Barney Gill and Ralph Shoaf, or Steve Osisek, will get starting calls at halfback. McCary, who directed the Virginia offensive, can't be so easily replaced. Dick Michels and Jim Leavitt are the leading candidates for the first-string position, now that McCary is out of action, perhaps for the rest of the season.

The Cavaliers will need all the talent they can muster Saturday against N. C. State, which boasts one of the finest defenses in the Nation.

Foul Claim Voted Down By Stewards

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 2.—The stewards voted today—against a claim of foul. Their action or lack of it taken before an Election Day crowd of 15,500 allowed the Brookfield Farms' Istan to remain the winner of the twenty-second running of the $7500-added Janney Handicap won in its first running by Display in 1927.

Istan finished a length in advance of J. H. Brink's Lookout Son. An objection was lodged by Apprentice Benny Civitello, on the second horse, against Henri Mora aboard the winner. Istan gave an imitation of a broken-field runner through the stretch. However, the big men did not believe his actions had anything to do with the result and lighted the "official."

Istan, a 3-year-old and the youngster of the party of eight, was the favorite at a $4.20 mutuel. He was clocked in an excellent 1:10 4/5, topped only by Joe Ray's 1:10 3/5 registered in the 1942 Janney and a track record until lowered by two-fifths of a second by the Pincher yesterday.

Two-Horse Affair

The race was a two-horse affair from start to finish. Istan and Lookout Son alternated in setting ad pressing the pace until nearing the stretch. Istan ran out at the final bend ad looked as if he was going to toss off the purse as Lookout Son saved ground and took the lead.

However, Mora shook up the son of Heliopolis and the gelding agai forged to the front. Istan then began drifting in toward Lookout Son. Civitello went to the whip and as Lookout Son responded Istan came over in front of him. Going into the wire, Istan again bore in and Lookout Son had to go with him.

Qualifying handsomely for the $25,000-added Pimlico Futurity to be run on Saturday, Greentree Stable's One-Hitter fought his way to a hard-earned victory in the fifth race when he reached paydirt about a length in front of Mrs. S. C. Clark, jr.'s Roman Way, an outsider.

Last at First Turn

One-Hitter was last in the nine-horse field on the first turn, but Apprentice William Passmore cleverly saved ground and moved his mount up to contending position in the backstretch while finding racing room along the inside rail. Coming between horses at the head of the stretch, One-Hitter took the command at the sixteenth pole and was pulling away at the finish.

The winner was coupled with Brick and the entry was backed down to $3.20 for $2. One-Hitter, a son of Shut Out, the Kentucky Derby winner of '42, and Bold Anna, rushed the mile and a sixteenth in 1:44 2-5. To be in contention in the Futurity this weekend, he will have to turn on additional speed as Capot, the favorite for that event and another Greentree racer, turned the same distance in 1:42 3-5 to set a new track record.

Passmore, who is under contract to Alfred G. Vanderbilt, was on his second winner of the meeting when he handled One-Hitter and the newcomer bids fair to become the leading apprentice of the 13-day session.

Makorbreak Wins 'Chase

Sara Bosley Merryman sent out the winner of the steeplechase in Makorbreak, 7-year-old son of Kantar who graduated from the maiden ranks through his eight-length victory over Alan M. Hirsh's Ratcatcher who was about a length and a half in front of Alvin Untermeyer's Caidstone.

The backers of C. Mahlon Kline's Pasture Rider had a tough break when this fast-closing 5-year-old ran off the course to disqualify himself when coming into the final hedge. Pasture Rider was just ready to go to the front of Makorbreak and probably would have won with little trouble had he taken a true course to the wire.

Jackie Bosley, brother of Sara Bosley Merryman, had the mount on Makorbreak and rode a cunning race when he went right to the front and then was riding Pasture Rider close when the latter went off the course. Makorbreak covered the 2 miles in 3:56 2/5 to return $9.60 for $2.

The daily double combination number 4, Blue Gem in the first race and number 1 Weight Angle in second returned $22.60 for the usual $2 investment.

Judge May Close King George School

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 2 (AP).—Circuit Judge Leon M. Bazille said last night that he will close the white King George County High School if the Federal District Court at Richmond orders the school opened to Negroes. He said the school would stay closed until equal and separate facilities for Negroes are provided.

The jurist addressed 400 county residents meeting at the high school to discuss the question of floating a $150,000 bond issue for a new Negro high school. The referendum on the bond issue will be held November 6.

"If you fail to vote in favor of the bond issue," Braille warned, the "consequences" might be severe.

School Superintendent T. Benton Gayle also spoke in favor of the bond issue. He noted that the county had "one of the lowest tax rates in Virginia." The rate is $1.60 a $100 of assessed valuation.

Federal Judge Sterling Hutcheson ordered King George County to equalize its educational facilities last summer. When the schools opened in September, a group of Negro students tried to enroll in the white school, charging the court order had not been complied with. They were refused admission.

Man Held for Ambush Slaying

Berlin, Md., Nov. 2 (AP).—A 20-year-old man living at nearby Sinepuxent Neck was charged today with the murder of Cleve Jones, prosperous Worcester County chicken farmer.

Sergt. C. C. Serman of the Maryland State Police swore out the murder warrant against Lawrence Dirickson, who was routed out of bed at his home not far from the scene of yesterday's shooting.

Jones was shot through the head from ambush on a lonely back road near his home at Newark, Md., 8 miles south of here, about 1 a. m. Monday.

Dirickson was taken to the State police barracks at Salisbury for fingerprinting and questioning. Officers would not say where he is being held, but he was not returned to Worcester County.

Chief Elmer Shockley said a bloody lug wrench and a .32 caliber pistol were found in a blue sedan parked in Dirckson's yard. The chief reported the wrench was found in a trunk of the car and the revolver under a floor mat Dirickson was found in bed.

Smog Death Clew Found In Autopsy

Donora, Pa., Nov. 2 (U.P.). — An autopsy revealed today that at least one of the 19 victims of a deadly smog here last weekend apparently died of suffocation perhaps caused by sulphur dioxide.

A bright sun brought relief today to this Monongahela River town. It was the first sunshine in 10 days. A heavy damp fog hung over the town in early morning, but it was swept away by a light wind.

Coroner L. C. Gray announced that an autopsy on one of the victims had been performed by Dr. George Ramsey of Washington General Hospital.

Both officials said that today's announcement was only preliminary.

Dr. Ramsey performed an autopsy on Michael Dorance, 70, a lifelong resident of Donora. Dorance had been suffering from asthma but had been in good health in recent weeks.

Dr. Ramsey made this report:

"Death was due to extreme edema of the lungs, secondary to hypertrophy of the heart. The asthmatic condition from which this patient had previously suffered was due to this disease of the heart. If sulphur dioxide was present in the heavy smog existing in the Donora section, it may have been in sufficient quantity to have produced the congestion, edema and bronchial spasms of the lungs which would be sufficient to precipitate death."

Excessive Speed Blamed in Fatal W. Va. Derailment

By the United Press

The Bureau of Mines last night blamed excessive speed for the derailment of a string of mine cars in a Coalwood, W. Va., coal mine October 4 that killed 3 miners and injured 12.

The derailed cars knocked out supports in the Olga No. 1 mine, causing rocks and timber to fall on 28 men in the four cars, the bureau said.

Dousing Urge Curbed

Endicott, N. Y., (U.P.)—Alois Selekovic, 27, said he had an urge to squirt a policeman with a hose. He was arrested by dripping Patrolman Charles Garland, and ordered to pay $25 or serve 25 days in jail.

Employes Cleared On Security Charges To Be Told in 60 Days

Three developments on the Federal worker loyalty program came to light yesterday. They are:

1. A plan to notify an accused employe that he has been cleared 60 days after his agency loyalty board has acted, provided the Civil Service Review Board isn't post-auditing the case.

This protective amendment was suggested by Assistant Interior Secretary C. Girard Davidson to Chairman Seth W. Richardson of the review board. Richardson has informed Davidson that he agrees with his proposal.

2. Davidson also suggested that persons contacted by the FBI in making its field-dress inquiries be notified when the accused employes are cleared. Richardson answered that he did not believe the plan was practicable but he asked the Interior official to give further thought to the idea.

3. Meantime, the Labor Department is permitting its accused employes to face their accusers if they are Federal workers. "The plan seems to be working out fine," a member of the labor loyalty board said. "We haven't had any trouble so far." This labor policy may be adopted by other agency boards.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS has given a twist to the old problem of recruiting technical people with a lot of success. This is the story:

CAA needed four technicians to operate and maintain a new type of high-frequency airway equipment. All of its employes were invited to compete for the jobs. About 150 applied and this number was sifted down to 20.

The 20 semifinalists were brought here. They were given written tests and group interviews by psychologists, administrators and technicians. Four CAF-9's were selected for the CAF-13 jobs. CAA then requested Civil Service to approve the multiple promotions.

Civil Service looked into CAA's examining methods and okayed the promotion with enthusiam in a matter of hours, a rare dicision. One of the CAF-9's was from a little desert town in Nevada. The odds were a million to one against his talents being discovered and his being given a four-jump promotion a few months ago.

CAA is proud of this unique recruiting method for these reasons: that a system has been found to uncover the hidden talents of its own workers, and that all of the people needed for this new and highly specialized work were found within CAA. The recruiting program was developed by Dean Brimhall of the CAA staff.

GWU: Milton Murray has resigned as publicity director of CIO's Marine and Shipbuilding Workers. A former president of the Newspaper Guild, he has helped to organize CIO's anti-Communist Government Workers Union which is making inroads on CIO's left-wing United Public Workers.

SEC: Securities and Exchange Commission has moved its Baltimore regional office back to this city. About a dozen employes are making the transfer which was approved personally by the President.

SENATE: Its Appropriations Committee has made a check on the number of Federal workers, who are on what is known in Government as "reimbursable details." In plain language, that means employes of one agency who are loaned to another, the borrowing agency paying their salaries.

The report shows there are 973 employes who are paid salaries totaling $2,350,000 on such detail. The committee made its study after it discovered a St. Elizabeths Hospital cook preparing meals for Federal Security Administrator Jack Ewing.

BUDGET BUREAU is one of the first agencies to reach its goal in the Community Chest campaign . . . COMMERCE: Larry Zuch of CAB, has been reelected president of Commerce's Welfare and Recreation Council. R. I. Tompkins, Leonard Zaciewski, and Mildred Steinmetz are other officers . . . NRL: At the Naval Research Laboratory are 200 active blood donors to the Red Cross which makes it tops among Federal agencies with a record of 883 donations. Sparkplugs in the drive are Richard C. Shreve and Earl E. Brock.

MR. BASEBALL, that's what they call Ira Smith of CAA's press staff. A former batboy and pro ballplayer, Smith is reputed to know more baseball stories than any other person.

Baseball facts and folklore have been Smith's hobby for years. The CAA employe spends his idle time at the Library of Congress where he has read most of the baseball stories printed since 1860. He carries a microfilm camera with him and he has photographed more than 5000 stories and has taken down upward of half a million words for his files.

Smith's fame as a baseball authority is now known outside of CAA. Just the other day he was offered a most attractive opportunity to cash in on his hobby.

Correction

In a story in Sunday's issue of The Washington Post, it was erroneously reported that Zachariah D. Blackistone lives at 5405 Glenwood rd., Bethesda. Blackistone, who has just celebrated his fiftieth year in the flower business, actually lives at 29 East Bradley lane, Chevy Chase. The Post regrets the error.

Eviction Ends Veteran's Long Fight

The Washington Post

MOVING DAY—A day delayed for 18 months by the one-man court fight of John M. Webster, veteran and attorney, against eviction of his family from their Government-owned Cameron Valley apartment at 142 Williams st., Alexandria. Faced at last with a court order to vacate the quarters, Webster gets on with the job of packing, despite illness of his wife and sons, David, 14 months, and Mark 28 months

Navy Officer's Wife, 38, Dies Of Poisoning

Told Doctors She Drank ½ Cup of DDT, Left Suicide Note

The 38-year-old wife of a Navy lieutenant died early yesterday at Gallinger Hospital, less than four hours after apparently swallowing a solution of roach powder containing DDT and water.

She was Mrs. Margaret Whittemore, wife of Lieut. Myron E. Whittemore, plant and personnel security officer at the Naval Research Laboratory. The couple lived at 52 Galveston pl. sw.

A note, indicating she was going to take her own life, was found on a living room desk, police said.

It included this sentence: "He held all the aces and he won." Police said the Whittemores had spent Monday evening playing cards with friends. The sentence, however, apparently referred to past domestic difficulties, which Lieutenant Whittemore acknowledged having with his wife, according to police. Mrs. Whittemore had been in poor health.

Mrs. Whittemore had gone to sleep in the living room after she and her husband had returned home Monday night, according to police.

Lieutenant Whittemore, who was sleeping in the bedroom, was awakened about 4:30 a. m. when she called to him, they said. He found her nauseated and called an ambulance.

She was taken to Gallinger Hospital where she remained conscious until an hour before her death at 8 a. m.

Police said Mrs. Whittemore told both her husband and hospital doctors that she had swallowed a half cup of DDT. Later investigation indicated, however, that she had probably swallowed roach powder, containing DDT, after mixing it with a half cup of water, according to police. A can of the insecticide was found in the Whittemore kitchen, detectives said.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said a complete chemical analysis will be made of the contents of her stomach and the residue in the cup to determine exactly what she swallowed. He withheld a death certificate pending the analysis.

Mrs. Whittemore was a native of Los Angeles, Calif. She came to Washington in 1942, while her husband was stationed at Solomons, Md. He has been on duty at the Naval Research Laboratory for about two years. They have no children.

16 Trunk Airlines Have $3,262,837 Net Income

The Civil Aeronautics Board said yesterday the 16 domestic trunk airlines had an indicated net income from operations of $3,262,837 during the second quarter of this year.

The compares with net operating income of $2,754,724 for the corresponding period in 1947.

Veteran Loses Fort Quarters Eviction Fight

An Alexandria veteran lost an 18-month fight against eviction yesterday when he and his family were moved out of their Government-owned Cameron Valley apartment.

John M. Webster, 34, veteran of China service, moved into his four-room apartment at 142 Williams st., Alexandria, in 1945, when he was stationed at Fort Belvoir. Cameron Valley was built during the war for Fort Belvoir personnel. When Webster left the service in May, 1947, the fort asked for his quarters.

He won the first round of an eviction suit in Alexandria Civil Court last winter. He contended that the fort did not need his apartment.

The Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority, which administers the homes, appealed the decision to the Corporation Court. The first trial resulted in a hung jury. Last August, however, another jury upheld the authority's right to evict after it was brought out that Webster was offered, but refused as inadequate, an apartment in another development.

Yesterday Webster had hopes of getting an apartment in Fairlington, but thought it probably would take several weeks. He said he had asked the housing officials to let him stay until he could move directly there, but they would not even discuss it.

So, while his wife, Jean, 28, and two children, Mark 2, and David, 14 months, sniffled with colds, Webster moved his furniture into storage and planned to move his family in with friends until he gets his new home. An attorney, he has conducted his own court fight.

Man, 71, Fatally Hurt By Railroad Coal Car

Louis F. Beck, 71, of 4618 5th st. nw., was fatally injured when struck by an incoming railroad coal car about 10:30 a. m. yesterday while working in the Marlow Coal Co. yard at 1221 1st st. ne. He was taken to casualty Hospital where he was pronounced dead at 3:30 p. m.

Mr. Beck is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret A. Beck, and seven children: Mrs. Catherine Short, John R., Lawrence F. and Thomas H. Beck, all of Washington; James N. Beck, Bethesda, Md.; Mrs. Mary Rosselle, Warren, Ohio, and Charles J. Beck, Cleveland, Ohio.

Holdup Victim Shot in Grab At 'Toy' Pistol

Sees Wounded Youth Seized as Assailant In Same Hospital

A holdup victim and his assailant early yesterday met face to face at Emergency Hospital, where both had gone for treatment of bullet wounds.

The victim was Raymond C. Carter, 60, of 2222 Q st. nw., who was shot in the left hand when three teen-age youths attempted to rob him while he was walking home in the 2100 block of Massachusetts ave. nw. about 1 a. m.

Carter, who is a retired automobile mechanic and detective story fan, said he thought the boys had a toy pistol. When one of them threatened him with it he said he grabbed for it. The "toy" went off and the boys fled.

Carter continued on to his home, where his daughter, Mrs. F. R. Valeo, called police. They took him to Emergency Hospital.

While he was being treated in the emergency room, two of the youths entered and inquired about the third, who appeared a few minutes later for treatment of an injury to his hand, aparently caused by the same bullet that had wounded Carter.

Carter identified the third boy and all three were taken into custody by policemen, who had gone to the hospital with Carter.

Two of the boys, one 17 and the other 16, were charged with attempted robbery. The third, 18, will be charged with the same offense, police said. The 17-year-old boy has already admitted several housebreaking and purse snatchings, they said.

McLean Furs Ordered Sold, Value $18,000

The late Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean's collection of furs—appraised at $18,010—is to be sold at auction in New York, Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court ordered yesterday.

Included are a $4000 Russian sable coat, a $3500 silver blue mink jacket, a $3000 chinchilla cape, and a paradise fox jacket appraised at $20. Mrs. McLean died on April 26, 1947.

The sale was ordered on petition of Robert Reynolds, father of 6-year-old Mamie Spears Reynolds, Mrs. McLean's granddaughter. Sharing in proceeds of the sale will be Mrs. McLean's sons, John R. and Edward B. McLean.

2 Indicted For Taking Horse Bets

Newsstand Man, Doctor Charged With Operating Gaming Table

A New York physician and a newsstand operator here were indicted yesterday by the District grand jury as operators of a horserace betting business here.

Indicted were Dr. Max Schwarz, 54, who was arrested with Louis W. Dove, 40, at 2151 California st., on October 6 where police said they found papers indicating that the two men were owed $90,000 in gambling debts. Seized in the raid was betting apparatus and $530 in cash.

The two men were charged with setting up and keeping a gaming table for horse-race betting between February and October.

This was one of 23 indictments returned in District Court.

In another case, 17-year-old Alvin M. Romeo, 315 G st. ne., was charged with having carnal relations with a 15-year-old girl, stealing her eyeglasses, stealing $200 from her father's house and stealing another $100 from the house next door.

George Holt, jr., 21, of 6717 MacArthur blvd. nw., was charged with bludgeoning out the eye of the Rev. James M. Ellis, 247 Delaware ave. sw. Holt was at one time Mr. Ellis' ward and hit the minister with a breech of a rifle, police said.

Chest Success Is Put Up to Businessmen

Edward J. Keyes, Community Chest Federation director, said yesterday that success or failure of the Chest campaign depends on the cooperation of business executives.

He said he was disturbed by reports which reached him of requests by some business firms that their employes be solicited at home and not at work.

The two business units in the Chest have a combined quota of $2,169,621 or close to half the Chest's total goal to $4,566,790.

Smaller Firms Objecting

Keyes said that solicitation is much more easily accomplished through business offices than by house-to-house canvass. In addition, group loyalty within firms adds up to higher individual gifts, he said.

Executives of the 2400 larger firms in Business Unit I have generally cooperated in allowing internal solicitation, Keyes said. But an increasing number of smaller firms in Business Unit II have objected that the solicitation takes up too much time, and that workers are solicited at home anyway.

Prince Georges 24% of Quota

At a meeting Monday night of Prince Georges County Chest workers, county volunteers reported total gifts to their unit of $14,526 from 1321 donors. This is 24.1 per cent of the county's $60,323 quota.

Chest workers in the whole Greater Washington area will hold a general report luncheon today at 12:15 p. m. to check on progress in their drive for $4,566,790, now just over the 50 per cent mark.

Alexandria Chest workers will hold a separate report luncheon at 12:15 p. m. in the Old Club Tearoom, 555 S. Washington st., Alexandria.

Restaurant Man Robbed Of $61 During Doze

Dozing off for less than 2 minutes after counting his night's receipts, John S. Gouldman, night manager of Fones' Lunchroom, 1405 4th st. sw., was robbed of $61, he told police yesterday.

Gouldman said he was alone at a table in the lunchroom, but several patrons were having breakfast at other tables, when he dozed off momentarily and the money disappeared from in front of him.

Md. Nurse on Way to Join Doctor-Husband in Leper Work

Millar

She is Mrs. Jack Millar, of 3208 Otis st., Mount Rainier, wife of a young Navy doctor who in August assumed charge of the newly established leper colony on Tinian Island in the Marianas group in the Pacific.

Mrs. Millar, the former Jane Booty, met her husband at Sibley Hospital while he was associated there and she was a staff nurse. Married two years, they are both 26 years old.

Lieutenant (j.g.) Millar, from Palo Alto, Calif., volunteered for the job of starting the first leprosy control effort in the Pacific trust territory, including the Marshalls, Caroline and Marianas Islands.

He became interested in tropical diseases while a premedical student at Stanford University. He continued his interest here while attending George Washington University Medical School and interning at the Naval Medical Center in Bethesda.

Mrs. Millar never was particularly interested in tropical diseases but "naturally she wants to be with her husband and help in his work," her mother, Mrs. Amos P. Booty, sr., said yesterday.

MRS. JACK MILLAR,

Mrs. Millar sailed for Tinian aboard a Navy transport which left Pearl Harbor Thursday and is due to arrive in about a week. Born in Philadelphia, she is a graduate of Consolidated High School, Sykesville, Md., and Sibley Memorial Hospital nurses' school.

As far as her mother is concerned—"if that's what Jane wants, that's where she should be—with her husband."

New Cancer Discovery Test Now in Use at GWU Hospital

A new technique for discovering certain cases of cancer of the prostate gland through blood tests is being used on all male patients over 50 at George Washington University Hospital.

Bartelt

The disclosure was made yesterday by Dr. Roy Hertz, assistant professor of medicine, at ceremonies dedicating the hospital's cancer research laboratory.

Dr. Hertz, who is in charge of the project, explained that the blood testing technique has been used previously as a diagnostic test but never as a case-finding test. Initial studies, he reported, have indicated "enough to make us keep working."

How Tests Are Made

A small quantity of blood is drawn from the arm for the test and analyzed in the cancer laboratory.

Dr. Hertz explained that when cancer of the prostate spreads to the blood, it can be detected by the test. Studies, he said, also may reveal the presence of cancer in other organs.

The physician said it might be a good idea for every male over 50 to have a blood test with possible cancer detection in view. Incidence is highest in this age group, he said.

By means of the hospital testing, he explained, "we hope to define the usefulness of this system as a case-finding method."

A four-bed ward also will be opened for patients suffering from cancer, and doctors will attempt to determine "what has gone wrong" to permit their bodies to become host to the ailment.

Bartelt Honored

Earlier, Assistant Treasury Secretary Edward F. Bartelt, who was honored at the ceremony, made a plea for joint effort by the layman and the doctor in the fight against cancer. Only cooperative effort, he said, can make the battle "successful."

L. E. Ore, national representative of the American Cancer Society, who unveiled a bronze plaque commemorating donations made by Federal workers under Bartelt's leadership, called the laboratory a "great tribute to man's consideration for mankind."

Mrs. Bartelt and the couple's daughter, Betty, witnessed the ceremonies, in a cubbyhole adjoining the laboratory at the hospital, 901 23rd st. nw. The laboratory, opened several weeks ago, was established by an American Cancer Society grant.

Md. Univ. Band Wins 2d Prize In Hagerstown

The University of Maryland band placed second and the Columbia Elks Club of Washington band placed third yesterday in a tri-State competition held at Hagerstown, Md., as part of the town's traditional Halloween mummer's parade.

About 4200 merrymakers, dressed as clowns, princesses and pirates, plus gaily decorated floats, took part last night in the parade, watched by approximately 70,000 persons.

First prize in the band competition was won by the Wayne Band of Waynesboro, Pa.

In a competition among senior drum and bugle corps, the Hagerstown (Md.) American Legion Corps placed second, and the Frederick (Md.) American Legion Corps placed third. First prize went to the Hanover (Pa.) American Legion Corps.

Theater Man's Slayer Known, Police Believe

Police reported yesterday they believe they have established the identity of the bandit who shot and killed a Southwest theater manager Saturday and that an arrest can be expected at any time.

A bystander also was fatally shot during an exchange of gunfire between police and the bandit, and three other bystanders were wounded by stray bullets.

A .35-caliber automatic rifle, used by the bandit, and a dark brown coat were discovered in a Southwest lumber yard the next day. Police would not say whether they were able to get clear fingerprints from the rifle.

The shootings occurred in front of the Rosalie Theater, 218 F st. sw., as the manager, James E. Washington, 51, was leaving with a canvas bag containing about $400 in receipts. The bystander was Herbert Smith, 35, of 1224 7th st. nw.

The bag of money disappeared during the confusion. Police said they did not know whether the bandit got it, or if it was taken by a bystander.

Two Annapolis Exams Scheduled in District

The board of examiners of the District Board of Education will hold a competitive examination during the week of January 10, 1949, to fill two 1949 vacancies in the United States Naval Academy, the District Commissioners announced yesterday.

The test is open to all boys who are residents of the District and are between 17 and 22 years of age (except in the case of veterans). Application blanks may be obtained from Room 509, District Building, and must be filed by December 28. The successful candidates would enter the Academy on July 1, 1949.

Speaker will be A. VanderZee, vice president of the Chrysler Corp. The 100 millionth car will be made and marketed sometime in the next two weeks, an association spokesman said.

Maid Tells Of Spivak's Visits to Mrs. Beloff

Describes Kiss In Dining Room, Hug in Hall and Bedroom Scene

A housemaid testified in District Court yesterday to three instances of affection shown by Leon Spivak for Mrs. Simon Beloff.

The maid said that on different occasions she had seen Spivak sit on Mrs. Beloff's bed, kiss the matron in her dinning room, and get hugged by her in the hall.

It was the fourth day of the trial in which Simon Beloff, 67, wealthy real estate man, accuses his 34-year-old brunette wife of having adulterous relations with 50-year-old Spivak, also a real estate man. Beloff wants a divorce and custody of his 4-year-old daughter, Sylvia.

The maid, Mrs. Margaret Byrd, also told Judge F. Dickinson Letts that Mrs. Beloff told her Spivak gave her a bottle of "Chi Chi" perfume and a gold wedding band.

Advised Against Visits

"I told Mrs. Beloff that she shouldn't have Mr. Spivak come to her home," said Mrs. Byrd, who worked for the Beloffs in 1946 and 1947.

The maid testified that it was 11:30 a. m. when she suddenly came upon Mrs. Beloff leaving her bedroom. Inside the room and seated in his shirtsleeves on the made bed was Spivak, said Mrs. Byrd.

She described Mrs. Beloff as clothed in a red velvet dressing gown and blue bedroom slippers. Mrs. Beloff's hair was in pigtails, the maid stated.

The other witnesses yesterday were Precinct Detective John P. Meshkoff, Metropolitan police, and Beloff himself.

The Beloffs were married for about five years before they split up in 1947. Then, according to testmony, the husband rented for his young wife and child a house at 1351 Spring rd. nw., while he resided at 1611 Decatur st. nw.

Meshkoff said that Beloff repeatedly complained to police that his wife was keeping a disorderly house where young women were introduced to men. Beloff became a "pest" with his complaints, Meshkoff said, and the detective was assigned to investigate the complaints, which proved unfounded.

However, Meshkoff said that he saw Spivak enter the house at 10:30 one night and on another night was seen to leave at 1:45 a. m.

Beloff previously told the court he had sprinkled lime on his 1611 Decatur st. nw. home to trap Spivak. Beloff said that he later found lime footprints in his wife's bedroom. Beloff said it was a "large" print.

Spivak Shoe Is Size 8

Spivak removed his shoe and showed the court it was size 8.

Beloff said, "I saw Spivak walk across that lime and I saw lime footprints in my wife's bedroom and I saw the treads of the rubber shoes that Spivak was wearing."

"Do you have a violent temper?" Beloff was asked after he had called Spivak a "cheap skate," and "chiseler."

"No," Beloff replied. "Only when it is necessary. I am known as a calm, fine gentleman."

In her testimony the maid also said that for a two-month period, Spivak would telephone almost daily. He would ask for Beloff, she said, and hang up if he was in. Otherwise, he would speak to Mrs. Beloff.

On another occasion, Mrs. Beloff said, according to Mrs. Byrd, that if she ever divorced her husband she would marry Spivak and have a nice home in the country.

Auto That Struck Detective Hunted

The Accident Investigation Unit yesterday re-alerted all policemen to be on the lookout for a hit-and-run 1939 Buick coupe, which struck and severely injured Precinct Det. John T. Bailey, of the robbery squad, on Mount Vernon blvd. early Sunday.

The car is grayish tan and the left fender may have been repaired or retouched. There should be a tin shield with a red ball reflector over the right front headlight.

Bailey was struck when he got out of his car near Roaches Run to wave down the automobile which was approaching Washington on the wrong side of the boulevard. He was admitted to Alexandria Hospital with a compound fracture of the right leg.

Traffic Institute Opens

The three-week Institute of Industrial Transportation and Traffic Management opened yesterday at American University's School of Social Sciences and Public Affairs, 1901 F st. nw., with a discussion of industrial traffic management by L. M. Homberger, professor of transportation at the school.

Eighteen junior executives, including one from Burbank, Calif., and two from Dallas, Tex., were present. E. A. Jack, general traffic manager of the Aluminum Co. of America, will speak at a dinner for the institute at 7 p.m. today in the home of Paul F. Dauglass, American University president.

1700 Police on Duty

The day sections that went off duty at 4 p. m. returned to work from 6 to midnight and the midnights sections reported at 10 p. m., two hours early. The 4 p. m.-to-midnight sections were held for extra duty after midnight where necessary.

Rent Boosts Sought

The Salvation Army yesterday asked the District Rent Control Administration to hike weekly rents on 130 units at the Evangeline, 1330 L st. nw.

Present and requested rents are: Single rooms, ranging from $5 to $10 per person, request $6 to $11; double rooms, now $4 to $8, request $5 to $9; triple rooms, $4.50 to $6, request $5.50 to $7.

A request for increases on 111 units at 2310 Ashmead pl. nw. was also filed yesterday. Present rents on single rooms and double rooms are $24 a month per person, with private bath $29. Requested rents are $29 to $34.

Surplus for Schools

The materials include trucks, tractors, refrigerators, tools and hydrophones (underwater listening devices).

Admiral's Son

R. G. Adams, 23, Succumbs To Injuries

Robert G. Adams, 23-year-old son of Rear Admiral John C. Adams, USNMC, medical chief of the Fifth Naval District, died yesterday at the Mary Washington Hospital in Fredericksburg, Va., following a motorcycle accident Sunday night.

Young Adams, together with a girl companion, listed by Virginia State Police at Culpeper, Va., as Miss Mary Anne Redman, 19, of 4903 Wisconsin ave. nw., were riding on the motorcycle when it went out of control and crashed on U. S. Route 1, about 9 miles north of Fredericksburg. Hospital officials reported the girl suffered abrasions and is expected to be released from the hospital today.

Admiral Adams, who is stationed at Norfolk, Va., said his son entered American University this past spring and, until this summer was living at 2634 Garfield st. nw. After leaving college Admiral Adams said, his son roomed at a home on 14th st. nw. while workin for the Postal Telegraph Co. here.

Youn Adams served in the Navy during the war. Admiral Adams and his wife resided at the Westchester Apartments here in 1946 and 1947, when he was chief of the Division of Aviation Medicine and later assistant chief of the Navy's Bureau of Medicine and Surgery.

D. C. to Save Stamps

Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers' Association and traditional crusader for Government economy, yesterday won a concession from the District.

The Commissioners ordered that all departments "utilize the lowest applicable postal rates when the resulting mail service will not unduly interfere with normal operations." Lusk had suggested the move twice previously.

Washington Letter Sale

It is part of the estate of Mrs. Hillary P. Jones, who died in 1947. The estate is represented by Attorney Arthur A. Lambert.

The missive concerns the declination of the Supreme Court Justice to go to France as President Washington had requested and also seeks the names of persons whom Justice Marshall might recommend as fit both in character and skill for the position of Surveyor General.

Night Boat Tried to Shift Its Course

The night ship District of Columbia attempted to swing off course upon hearing a warning bell, but the "full ahead" speed order was not changed until after the ship collided with an oil tanker off Old Point Confort, Va., in a heavy fog Sunday.

This was brought out yesterday at a Coast Guard investigation into the crash which killed a woman and injured three other persons, including two from the District area.

Captain Edward H. Eaton, 46, of 3602 Nichols ave. se., and men on watch at the time of the collision indicated in their testimony:

That the steamer left the Old Point Comfort landing at 7:02 a. m. Sunday to enter a fog bank so thick visibility was reduced to 600 feet or less.

That with her throttle at "full ahead," she set her customary direct course for buoy No. 1 marking the entrance to the Elizabeth River channel. It was admitted that this course took her through the established quarantine anchorage behind Old Point.

That upon hearing the warning bell of the Georgia, from one to three points (10 to 35 degrees) on her right, the steamer changed course, one half point to the left. In other words, she turned six degrees away from the sound.

That upon reaching the tanker, a strenuous effort was made to swing around it, but that the "full ahead" speed order was not changed until the ship was at or upon Hampton bar following the impact.

The chief engineer testified, however, that the ship had not yet gained full steam at the time of crash.

3 Va. Counties Name Soil Supervisors

Residents of three Northern Virginia counties yesterday automatically elected three supervisors of the Northern Virginia Soil Conservation District.

Unopposed to represent the counties of Fairfax, Prince William and Loudoun on the commission were Stuart T. DeBell, Fairfax; Lester W. Huff, Prince William, and Edward C. Norman, Loudoun.

Election of the three men was assured as soon as the first votes were cast.

USAF Band to Give First Concert Today

The United States Air Force Band will give its first fall concert at 8:30 p. m. today in the Departmental Auditorium, Constitution ave., between 12th and 14th sts. nw., with Maj. George S. Howard as conductor.

Robert L. Landers, newly appointed director of the USAF Band Glee Club, will make his first Washington appearance at the concert. Landers is a former assistant conductor of the San Carlos Opera Company.

Gov. Lane to Receive Gift of Prize Apples

Outside Looking In . . .

The Washington Post

A CRYING SHAME—If 11-month-old David Stewart Mason had remained as quiet in District Court as he became after his embarrassed father took him outside, he would have had a better view as his mother, Mrs. Richard S. Mason, took the oath of United States citizenship

Judge Morris Distracted by 'Blah Blah'

David Stewart Mason is probably the only person to yell "blah-blah" in Judge James W. Morris' District Court without going to jail for it.

But tow-headed David, 11-month-old, did yesterday—and got away with it.

David came to court yesterday morning with his father, Richard Mason, 27, of 2100 19th st. nw., and his mother Sheila, 26. Mrs. Mason was renouncing her British citizenship to take the oath as an American with 30 others.

For awhile, David sat quietly with his father in the audience. Then, the speeches began, and that was too much for him.

Judge E. Barrett Prettyman of the United States Court of Appeals warned the new citizens to "watch always and never let any man or group of men get too much power."

Commented David, "Gow gow, gloup."

And as the jurist raised his hand to stress a point, David raised his hand, too. By this time, more people in the court were watching David and his blushing father than the judge, who continued, "We cannot let any nation in the world get too much power."

"Gow gow gloup."

Judge Morris then took over and told the citizens of their duties and responsibilities. Just as seriously, David shouted:

"Blah-blah ah blah."

The embarrassed father took David into the corridor and, chattering all the time, David watched through a glass panel as his mother took her oath of allegiance.

The other citizens are:

Rudolph E. Fischer, Swiss, of Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla.; Mrs. Anna A. Gilles, French, 1335 22d st. nw.; Mrs. Fegalia Panagos, Greek, 5317 4th st. nw.; John P. Fitsos, Greek, 604 Sheridan st. nw.; Mrs. Hariklia Baganikis, Greek, 119 B st. se.; Mrs. Jeanne Sherrard, British, 3469 24th st. se.; Mrs. May S. Oechsner, British, 3812 Fulton st. nw.; Mrs. Phyllis E. Armstrong, British, 2916 Southern ave. se.; Miss Frances A. Los, Polish, 2918 28th st. nw.; Pietro Pizza, Italian, 61 H st. nw.; Mrs. Virginia C. Alvarez, Cuban, 1918 18th st. nw.; Jean P. Ollivier, French, 1750 P st. nw.; Mrs. Julia Plavin, British, 5924 9th st. nw.; Mrs. Ida Guex, Swiss, 1842 Ontario pl. nw.; Mrs. Sam Doctrow, Russian, 229 Pennsylvania ave. se.; Miss Lizzi Bleicher, Austrian, 5301 5th st. nw.; Jan W. De Groot, Dutch, 615 7th st. sw., Klaus Dohrn, Austrian, 1616 19th st. nw.; Mrs. Wera Urbach, German, Chastleton Hotel; Nick Gasparis, Greek, 816 Potomac ave. se.; Bud Ming Chieu, Chinese, 2025 1st st. nw.; John Abbott, Colombian, 1736 G st. nw.; Bernard Kilsheimer, German, 4338 36th st. nw.; Ferdinand Kilsheimer, German, 4442 Ellicott st. nw.; Mrs. Marie L. Gilliam, Belgian, 138 Williams st., Alexandria; Mrs. Marion Shearer, Palestinian, 6123 8th st. nw.; Mrs. Stefania B. Tonesk, Polish, 3461 24th st. se.; Mrs. Josephine L. Hunter, British, 3810 Southern ave. se.; Dragisha M. Stanisavljevich, Yugoslav, 419 Newcomb st. se., and Robert McQuirk, Canadian, USN Quarters, Arlington.

D. C. Orders Playground Opinion Study

The District Commissioners yesterday asked Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West to study the decision of the Interior Department in the dispute between the District and the department over control of 62 playgrounds here.

The action was taken during a two-hour closed session with the Recreation Board, which asked the Commissioners to support the board in its fight for control of the recreation areas.

West was directed to study an opinion by Interior Department Solicitor Mastin G. White, which declared that control of the areas rested with the department. The opinion is now before Attorney General Tom C. Clark for a ruling.

At present the grounds are operated by the Recreation Department on a segregated basis; if control is vested with the Interior Department's National Park Service, this policy will be ended, disputants have declared.

Meanwhile, the Council for Civil Rights in the Nation's Capital issued a statement declaring that West in a decision approved by the Commissioners January 28, 1947, had already advised that the areas were not under the "jurisdiction or control" of the District.

The ruling was made in a matter involving the Banneker and Takoma Park, D. C., swimming pools, Miss Ida Fox, executive secretary, declared. She said this legal position applied to the remainder of the recreation areas since they were all purchased under the same conditions.

The council also asked the Commissioners and Clark to hear their views on the controversy.

Virginia Health Official To Speak in Alexandria

Dr Albert McCown, director of communicable disease control for the Virginia State Health Department, will address the Alexandria Visiting Nurse Service Thursday at 8 p. m. in the Alexandria YWCA.

The talk, which will precede the group's regular business meeting, will be open to the public. A special invitation also has been extended members of the City Council, currently faced with public health problems pointed up in a recent critical survey of the local health department by a committee of State health experts.

Thief Gets $180, Checks From Safeway Store

A thief escaped with $180 cash and two checks from the Safeway store at 1326 Florida ave. ne. at 5:30 p. m. yesterday, Judson A. Fones, manager, reported to police.

Fones, who lives at 960 Randolph st. nw., said the man reached his hand into the cash register, then ran outside, where he and an accomplice, acting as lookout, leaped into a car that was driven off by a third man. All were described as Negroes by Fones.

Miss Meigs, Court Clerk 50 Years, Dies

Miss Elizabeth Martin Meigs, 85, who spent 50 years as a clerk in the District Court here, died Monday at the Home for Incurables, where she had lived for eight years.

Known as "Miss Lizzie" to hundreds of District Court judges, lawyers, and employes, she retired in 1941 as head of the Lunacy Division, where she had worked since the division was organized in 1895.

Miss Meigs was the first woman clerk to be employed in a Federal Court, her family said, and was told to sign her name "E. M. Meigs" in order not to amaze correspondents.

Born in Staten Island, she moved to the District with her family when 2 years old, and went to private schools here. In 1891 she took her first job as an assistant clerk in District Court here, staying on for 50 years till her retirement.

She leaves two sisters, Mrs. Henry Olds, of 1613 Highland dr., Silver Spring, and Miss Jane Boyd Meigs, of San Francisco. Five nieces also survive: Miss Elizabeth Naylor, 19 Williams lane, Chevy Chase; Mrs. James Lauderdale, 1424 Webster st. nw.; Mrs. Margaret Benedict, 1613 Highland dr.; Mrs. Philbrick McCoy of Van Nuys, Calif., and Mrs. Mary Fraser, Hildarose dr., Silver Spring.

Graveside services will be held at 11 a. m. today in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Reburial Rites Planned for 3 Area Men

Governor's Lady Arranges Flowers

Mrs. Earl Warren Turns California's Old Mansion Into Charming Homeplace

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Nov. 2.—Under 16-foot high ceilings of Sacramento's cupolaed, overwhelmingly Victorian Governor's Mansion, Mrs. Earl Warren looks trigly diminutive. Blue-eyed, with dimpled pink cheeks and simply arranged blonde hair, she was fresher than the proverbial daisy when I interviewed her Sunday afternoon.

The Governor's Lady was wearing a purple maroon faille suit, a pink and mauve mottled scarf, high-heeled suede pumps and sheer stockings.

"I don't know anyone who does less about themselves than I do," she said. "As for riding a campaign train, everyone said it was so exhausting but it wasn't actually. You have no responsibilities, some one else does the worrying and it's quite relaxing."

Warrens Entertain Infrequently

MRS. WARREN accompanies her husband on most official trips, attends a vast variety of functions in every cranny of California. Though Earl Warren is Governor of one of the country's richest States they entertain very little at home. Sacramento is small, competent caterers scarce. Besides willynilly at every meal seven Warrens must push close to family table.

Mrs. Warren's life has been so crammed she's never paused for pastimes. Friends insist, though, her hobby is planning graceful floral arrangements. Mrs. Warren, though she loves flowers, regards arranging them as "duty." Every mansion room has an outsize Victorian mantelpiece, most of them a conglomeration of colored marble, alabaster and such stones. The sole decoration possible for these ornate slabs is flowers.

Fixing these vases sometimes takes hours or more a day and no one except Mrs. Warren undertakes the task because she explained "they wouldn't get the colors right." Her favorites are gladiolas but Sunday the mantles were bright with chrysanthemums and orange zinnias to chime with the Warren children's night-before-Halloween party.

Though Mrs. Warren's main interests are her husband and big family, she is not depressingly domestic. She has a sense of humor, doesn't take herself too seriously and is extremely friendly.

Mansion Is Pride

THE mansion is Mrs. Warren's pride and joy. When they moved in six years ago the 80-year-old Victorian pile was in discouraging disrepair. The paint was dingy, upholstery tattered, part of the cupola roof had blown away, and the leaky top floor shut off. There wasn't a lamp upstairs, single light bulbs hung on wires suspended from ceiling plaques made for chandeliers. There were no modern closets, the kitchen was a cavern of sickly peagreen paint without an item of up-to-date equipment. Oddly enough, there wasn't a picture in the house.

It took four months of tough going to make it habitable. The most hideous furnishings were relegated to top-floor oblivion, the remainder covered in cheerful tones, the stairs covered with new carpeting and an assortment of warm, colored Oriental rugs purchased. To fill in blank walls Mrs. Warren bought print reproductions of well-known paintings.

In the gold-curtained dining room two enormous cakes, a tray of tall glasses were set on the lace-covered tables. The largest cake, squarely and actually 4 by 3 feet, was a gift from San Franciscans; the other, a miraculous effort of orange icing, a wreath of flowers, the capital and State of California outlined in citron plus the motto "Luck, Earl," was a present from Angelena Phillips, a local caterer.

The Children's Rooms

UPSTAIRS the children's bedrooms are characteristic of their varying personalities. On the wall of Earl, jr.'s room is the framed pedigree and photograph of "Rocky," his beloved Springer Spaniel, which was killed last winter. There weren't enough bedrooms to go around, so Bobby, the youngest, nests in a made-over porch. Chief feature of his room is a newly arrived mounted deer head—the first he himself shot.

The bureau and table tops are catch-alls for souvenirs picked up on the Warrens' official trips, the more amusing being keys to several cities—big, gilded jobs, one from Reading, Pa., proclaiming the "Pretzel City" and having a gilt pretzel as the unlock section.

Bobby, like "Honeybear," the next stepup in the Warren family ladder, is an accomplished horseman, has a vast assortment of ribbons and cups to prove his prowess. Honeybear, whose real name is Nina, acquired her nickname simply because, said her mamma, "She's always been a honeybear." Her winning ribbons are hung in rows between snapshots of herself and her pals crouched over their steeds' necks and careening over most deadly looking obstacles.

Dorothy, who is 17, is out of the horsey stage and well into the movie fan area. Her walls are covered in neat, symmetrical patterns with autographed photographs of stars—their long hair-dos and lush decolletages striking an almost tropical note.

Virginia, the eldest Warren (though her mother has an elder married son by her first husband) is majoring in English at the University of California. Her room is very ladylike, with painted furniture, green taffeta curtains and a positively mammoth bathroom.

Cupola Attracts Young Folks

THE most amusing part of the house is the two-story cupola. It is absolutely empty and there is no special view, but Mrs. Warren says her younger guests enjoy climbing up and down to it.

The Governor has his own study on the top floor. Though he does most of his work, makes all his appointments in the Capitol Office Building, he occasionally retires to his eyrie to think out a speech.

The Warren staff—four in all—have giant rooms, once part of an upstairs ballroom and consequently fitted with the fanciest parquet floors imaginable. Most curious of all is a small reception room which Mrs. Warren has left almost intact. The cumbersome furniture was made supposedly by California convicts, and is upholstered in purple velvet. The curtains match, and Mrs. Warren has added a vivid Oriental rug, filled the room with flowers.

Bugaboo of her life is the sticky dust which floats in from passing trucks run on Diesel oil. The mansion's janitor fights it relentlessly and unsuccessfully five days a week.

Keeping Baby Close to Mother

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

For the last couple of generations, most babies have been born in hospitals and kept in a nursery. Often they are brought to the mother only at nursing time.

More and more modern doctors, though, are seeing that there are real emotional advantages for mother, baby and the rest of the family in keeping the new member of the family close to his mother.

A first-time mother often feels completely at a loss when it is time for her to take her baby home. She has had no chance to get acquainted and doesn't see how she can possibly bathe the baby or do the other things that must be done for him.

But if she has had a part in the daily care of the new-born youngster as he stays in the crib beside her and has heard the various cries and sounds he makes she feels more at home with him. Many other factors, too, make it seem desirable that we have more "rooming in" in the future.

Happy Wife, Mother of Lovely Child, Feels Apprehensive About Landlord's Flirtatious Overtures; She Hesitates to Tell Husband

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Dick and I have been happily married for six years and we have a lovely child 2 years old. Dick is a wonderful husband and father and therefore my interest is wholly centered on my home and family life.

The problem has to do with our landlord's attitude toward me. We live in an apartment directly above his, where we have been for two years. He is the owner-manager of the building, and for the last two months he has been forcing unwanted attentions on me at every opportunity.

I haven't been able to discourage his presumption by indirect evasive tactics, and as he hasn't been overbearing about it, I hesitate to correct him bluntly. Several times I've been on the verge of speaking to Dick about it, when we were out together, but then my courage failed me.

We cannot find another apartment that would meet our needs nearly so well as this one does, hence I shrink from trouble with management. However, I do want to put a final end to the landlord's flirtatious skirmishing. Can you tell me how? Your prompt advice will be much appreciated. E. J.

Wife's Basic Fears Sparked the Problem

DEAR E. J.: It seems to me you are taking your landlord's presumption much too seriously, and by closeting the situation in your mind, are thereby engendering absurd excessive emotional tension that hangs in the air at your every encounter with him.

Doubtless this reaction of yours has its roots in fear of being haplessly banished from your apartment if you incur his disapprobation. I suppose you feel apologetically on sufferance in his building, due to the fact of having a child who perhaps makes noise on the floor above him—oh, most objectionable nuisance from the average landlord viewpoint. As to that, one often wonders, how do landlords figure they got here?—sprung fullbodied adults from the brow of Jove, or something? Were they never children?

In any event, if you were vested with healthy measure of inner security, and had moreover a repertory of social affiliations with the world outside your home, which gave you perspective to see that the landlord isn't the High Mogul of the universe, I'm sure you wouldn't have snared his "personalized" notice in the first place. You would have been cordially disinterested in his private estimate of his tenants upstairs.

Servile Manner Courts Insolence

But if you'll search the record I think you'll recall that your tendency has been to act compulsively to butter him up, as if in atonement for parenthood, with the result that finally, instinctively, he reacted to the servile ingratiating pitch of your self-conscious awareness of him—and began "presuming."

The way to put a final end to the landlord's skirmishing is to rise above it in consciousness; or rather withdraw your thoughts from it, or from recollections of incidents that have built up reciprocal furtive tension. This can't be done by an "act of the will," so-called; but only by ventilating, hence relaxing, your obsessional anxiety about the supposed threat to your welfare.

In brief, you should air the situation, as you see it, by discussing your apprehensions frankly and freely with a reliable loyal confidante of mature age and good common sense. This exercise in

Exercise to Hew Out a Fashionable Waistline

By Ida Jean Kain

THE slim waistline is Fashion's darling. And even though it may cramp your style, minimizing the waist is all to the good. With a willowy middle measurement, you not only look but feel younger—years younger.

It's not just the waist but the entire midriff that takes a trimming. Both the criss-cross muscles banding the waist and the long lateral muscles need toning. The laterals are the flexibility muscles which allow us to twist and turn agilely. They run from under arms to hipbones and diagonally up from the abdominals. When these muscles get flabby, fat settles in rolls, for this is one of those dead areas, muscularly speaking.

Exercise on the bias restores tone ot these lateral muscles—sliming the midriff, and hits the waistline muscles too. Warm up with easy, suppling movement. Stretch tall, pulling slim through the middle, then bend smoothly from side to side. Never make work of exercise—each movement should be natural and flowing . . . no jerking or straining.

Movement: As you swing the right arm up, move the right leg back, touch toes to floor, p-u-l-l through the midriff, and pull up strongly with the front muscles. Do not arch small of back. Repeat with left arm and left leg. Ease through 8 counts, alternating sides, always centering the pull through the middle muscles. Now shift the line of pull by raising right arm and stepping back with left leg . . . then left arm and right leg. It's so easy it can hardly be called calisthenics—but any stretch is streamlining.

Position: Sitting on floor, legs spread wide apart, fingertips on shoulders, elbows held in straight line.

Movement: Slowly t-w-i-s-t at the waist, dead center, and keep twisting gently until elbows are pointed in almost the opposite direction. Back to center and around to the other side. Four to six counts are enough for a starter. Practice makes a perfect waistline and straightens shoulders.

If you're in the habit of settling down in a lump, snap out of it. The only way to pull your figure out of the dumps for good is to pull the waist up out of the hips and the ribs up from the waist. That's style all the while.

Good—and Thrifty . . .

Leftover chicken makes Waldorf salad into a main dish for lunch. Just add the cubed chicken to the celery, apples, walnuts and mayonnaise and serve in lettuce cups or on short sprays of watercress.

Use an inexpensive grade of canned salmon for fish loaf; flavor with finely grated onion and sweet pickle relish and serve with a parsley cream sauce.

Use eggs that are top-grade if you are cooking them in the shell or poaching them; but for puddings and cakes and cookies—where other flavors predominate—it is economical to use one of the lower and less expensive grades.

The flavor of an inexpensive cut of meat for a stew will be greatly improved if it is browned first in a little fat.

Split pea soup is delicious garnished with thin slices of frankfurter that have been sauteed in a little fat.

Grind luncheon meat and sweet pickles together for a sandwich spread; moisten with mayonnaise or creamy salad dressing. In making the sandwiches use one slice of whole wheat bread with one slice of white.

About Re-Upholstering Furniture

Can you tell me where to find explicit, step-by-tep directions for reupholstering furniture? L. O.

A little book called "Revive Your Old Furniture" by Louise Sloane (American Studio Books, New York and London) has a chapter entitled "How to Upholster." In the foreword, the author says that since she is not a professional furniture restorer, the directions given are written for other lay persons like herself who wish to do this sort of work. Included in the chapter on upholstering are lists of materials needed to do the job and dozens of before-and-after pictures giving ideas for taking care of specific upholstery repair problems. The book can be purchased at most book stores.

Is there any way of making starch at home so that it will be usable in a few days? Cooked starch hardens too fast for use later and cold starch seems to dry right out of the clothes. M. D.

Add an equal amount of cold water to the entirely-cooked and still-hot boiled starch, stirring it well after the addition. Then let it cool with a tight-fitting cover on the pan to prevent formation of a crust. When it is thoroughly cool, pour into a glass container which can be tightly closed This starch will stay fresh for a few days, but like any starch, it will mold and sour unless it is sealed into sterile jars. If you wish to keep it several days, it would be wise to place it in the refrigerator or where it will be cool without freezing.

Where is it possible for a woman in her early thirties to go for social activities in the City of Washington? It seems that most of the people I have come in contact with are of a younger age group. B. R.

The Young Women's Christian Association offers a wide range of activities which, although not strictly social, offer opportunity for getting acquainted. For instance, they have coeducational classes in modern and square dancing, and "slimnastics" (a gym course designed to slim the figure). Also, they have a music hour on Sunday afternoons which is open to the public. They have offered to send you literature explaining their activities if you will call them by phone and give them your name and address.

Also, I am sure that you will be able to find interesting social activities through the church of your choice. The best way to get actively associated with a group in the church is to signify that interest to the minister, or better still, offer your services. I've yet to find a church which didn't have need for help with their young people, or a singing voice in their choir, or a willing hand to help serve their dinners. So tell the minister the sort of thing you would like most to do. You are sure to form lasting friendships as you do the work with others, like yourself.

Could you tell me how to remove a mustard stain from a light blue cotton (probably broadcloth) blouse? The stain was about 2 weeks old when first washed, and repeated washings have failed to remove it. After washing the material turns pink and when dry, again becomes mustard colored. S. R. S.

Since the stain has been washed it is not too certain that it can be removed. However, you might try this: Work glycerine or liquid shampoo into it, rub lightly between the hands and then wash the stained area in soap and water. If after a good try this doesn't completely remove it, try sponging with alcohol. If neither removes it, using household bleach is the remaining solution, but be sure to test the effect of the bleach on the color in an inconspicuous spot before applying it to the stain.

GRACEFUL and ingenious is the coffee table in the living room of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Vietheer in Arlington. Mr. Vietheer made it with a piece of plate glass (cut by a local glazier into the desired shape) and four plaster supports of the type used in store windows. He bought the supports in a window fixture shop and painted them French gray to match the living room walls. The weight of the half-inch glass was adequate to hold it in place on the supports without further fastening

I have the following chess pie recipe and would like to know what I may substitute for the one cup damson preserves?

1 cup sugar
1 large tablespoon melted butter
1 cup sweet milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 large tablespoon corn meal

The meal is stirred in last and, of course, provides thickening but it does not affect the taste of the pies at all. Plum or any tart preserves may be used for the old fashioned "carmel" pies which are quite different from the ones of today which do not have the preserves in them. The substitute I have in mind is of a sweetening nature other than preserves, which today are expensive and not too desirable. E. L. C.

If you wish a fruity substitute to give a tart pie, you could use stewed dried apricots made quite sweet. Also, some chess pie recipes call for an amount of raisins and nuts equal to the preserves in your recipe, but of course this would give a pie quite different in flavor from that in which the tart preserves or fruit were used.

I have put something hot on my dining table, causing white spots. I think you gave a remedy for this once, and I will appreciate it if you will repeat this in your column. J. J. J.

If the spot is not too deep, it may be removed by rubbing with a paste made of rottenstone or powdered pumice and linseed oil. Take care not to get the paste into the area surrounding the spot and rub with the grain. When the white spot has been removed in this way, wipe away the paste with a cloth dampened with the oil and then polish the entire top with a good wax or furniture polish.

Will you tell me the name and how to obtain a trade journal on gloves? F. O.

A trade journal for the glove making industry is called "Gloves" and is published at Gloversville, N. Y. As you no doubt know, the trade journal does not go into the directions for making gloves, but discusses merchandising, leathers, etc.. To get it, I would suggest you write to the publisher.

Over 14 years ago, my maternal grandmother died, leaving over half-finished a hand-crocheted "popcorn" stitch bedspread. I need approximately 19 balls of cotton to finish it and haven't been able to find it in any of the stores. It is Clark's O.N.T. Knitting and Crochet Cotton, Color 61. Each ball is wrapped with a black paper band and the phrase just given is printed in golden letters on it, as well as the following words: "400 yards — Boilfast — Trademark." The edge of the black band is gold also. Several stores carry Clark's O.N.T. 61, but it's never the right shade or texture either. Perhaps one of your readers would have some "tucked away" she'd be willing to part with. M. E. S.

How about it, readers? Another idea would be to write the Clark company. Its address would be obtainable from its crochet book in the needlecraft department of stores carrying the thread.

I have a Chinese checker board and on the back of it is a game called "Ante-up Rummy." I have lost the directions. Could you tell them to me? C. H.

I'm sorry, but I do not have the directions for this game. Perhaps you can find a similar board in the toy department of some store and get the rules from that. Or perhaps some other reader will be kind enough to send them in for you.

I have some sheets and baby undershirts with a number of cod liver oil stains that seem impossible to remove. I have tried boiling and using a household bleach all to no avail. Any suggestions you can give me on how to remove these stains will be appreciated. O. E. C.

What you say about these spots applies to all old cod liver oil stains, I'm sorry to say. When such stains are fresh and almost colorless, they are easy to remove with dry cleaning fluid or glycerin, followed by a soap-and-water washing. But old stains, especially if the material has been washed and ironed, get a light brown and trying to remove them is practically hopeless, even with bleaches.

I wonder if any of your readers could tell me where I might obtain goat's milk? V. W. M.

Has anyone a suggestion for V. W. M., who lives in Kensington?

Can you tell me where I can get the rules of the Chinese game, Mah Jong? M. L.

Rules for Mah Jong, or "Twenty Point," can be found in Foster's "Complete Hoyle," (J. P. Lippincott), 1946 edition, which is obtainable at the main Public Library here.

How can one refinish a mahogany table which has a wreath of inlaid flowers in pastel shades around the top? H. N. R.

It is almost certain that if you attempt to remove the finish on the table with a paint and varnish remover you will also remove the color from the inlaid flowers. Since the table cannot be successfully refinished without first removing all of the old finish, it would seem you have one of two choices: (1) Do the job yourself, refinishing the inlay without color in the same way the rest of the table is refinished. (2) Take the table to a professional refinisher who may possibly be able to do the job so that the refinished table has the colored inlay as it now is.

Can black lacquer chairs be washed? M. S.

Yes, they can be.

How can I obtain a shine or sparkle to a black sequin jacket? The sequins have become cloudy or dull in appearance. Brushing and wiping with clean cloth does not seem to help. V. L. A.

I'm sorry, there seems to be no effective home method for brightening sequins.

Are there any shops or stores where I might receive orders for home made fudge, or fancy gift aprons? J. C. D.

A shop which can be reached by calling Tuckerman 0220 may be able to sell your aprons. As for the fudge, I would suggest you investigate the health laws in the area in which you wish to sell the candy before attempting to put it on the market.

Maurice Evans Asks Pressure For Solving Theater Stalemate

By Genevieve Reynolds

Maurice Evans, famous Shakespearean actor and producer, yesterday called upon the feminine members of the fourth estate to bring pressure on "the legislators to solve the problem of the National Theater." He made his plea when appearing as guest of honor and speaker at the Women's National Press Club's luncheon held in the Press Club Auditorium.

Loss of Washington is "another nail in the dying theater," he said. "The theater cause, in general, needs all help it can get from any quarter."

Referring to the fact that the National Theater refused to adhere to the Actors Equity demand to ban segregation or close up as a legitimate house, Evans explained, "We are just as sorry as you are over the stalemate. Some members of Actors Equity recognize that the situation here is a local problem and doubt whether New Yorkers had any business to interfere."

Candidates Need Coaching

When queried as to which of the presidential candidates—Dewey, Truman, Wallace or Thurmond—is better theater material, Evans replied, "All candidates would have done better to take a little course in dramatics."

Taking a few quips at drama critics, Evans remarked, "The legitimate stage suffers from the critics' penchant to be erudite and effusive in their reviews."

Backstage Glimpses

Giving a few humorous glimpses of an actor's life back of the footlights, Evans laughingly told how a Washington woman disconcerted him when she appeared with her knitting needles at the National Theater. "Can you imagine the demoralizing effect of an actor attempting Hamlet's great soliloquy, 'to be or not to be' to the tune of 'knit two, purl two'."

Among the honored guests, in addition to Mr. Evans, was the Marquess of Milford Haven, best man at the wedding of Princess Elizabeth.

Seated at the head table were Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. Lister Hill, wife of the Alabama Senator, and Mrs. James Helm, White House social secretary.

Miss Dorothy Williams, club president, presided and introduced the distinguished guests.

Chevy Chase Club to Hear Of Upholstering

The American home committee of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase will meet Friday, November 5, in the clubhouse at 2 p. m. S. Tebbs Chichester, jr., will describe and illustrate the topic "Why and How to Reupholster Furniture" and give some new ideas used in slipcovering.

The drama section met Monday. The first of a series of discussions on "Play Production" was introduced by Mrs. Ross Gunn. On the program was Miss Sally West, pianist, and a one-act play comedy "Letters." The cast included Peggy Pledger, Rita Lowe and Sue Oliver. The tea hostesses were Mrs. Jesse R. Gilbert, Mrs. C. A. Reed and Mrs. H. C. Iler. Presiding at the meeting was Mrs. James Lee Oliver, chairman of the section.

mental hygiene should bring peace of mind and detachment of feeling toward the subject, hence enable you to repel the man's overtures with casual poised effectiveness. And if you haven't access to a psychiatrist, call on Dick to be your listener-therapist. As a wonderful husband and father, he'd probably fill the role quite adequately.

Club Speaker Discusses Indonesia

Although nationalism and communism are two different philosophies, communism sometimes takes the guise of nationalism to further its own ends, Dr. N. A. C. Slotemaker de Bruine, Counselor of the Netherlands Embassy, said yesterday. He spoke before members of the Washington Club on "Nationalism and Communism in Indonesia."

Nationalism is good when its efforts are centered on a country developing its own economic and national powers, he said, but bad when misused as in the case of Germany.

The Communists sometimes take on an extreme nationalistic program, but discard the role when the time for uprising comes, he said.

In Indonesia a group of Communists adopted the nationalistic mask for a time, shedding it in the uprising in the Indies in 1926, he said. "Although the uprising was shortlived, it had an international significance," Dr. Slotemaker told the clubwomen.

Some of the uprising participants were jailed, but some escaped, a number of them to Moscow, he told club members.

One of these exiles, he continued, returned to the Republic of Indonesia in August, 1948.

In the Republic of Indonesia, under the name of Musso, on September 18, he launched an unsuccessful uprising against the republic. Musso, the Indonesian, Moscow-trained Communist leader, was reported to have been killed in a skirmish with Indonesian Republican forces November 1, Dr. Slotemaker de Bruine said. This report has not been confirmed.

Naturalization Court Visited By Twentieth Century Group

Approximately 70 members of the Twentieth Century Club spent two thirds of yesterday visiting the Naturalization Court of the U. S. District Court, and the Americanization School in the Webster School building. The look-see tour, sponsored by the organization's civics-education committee, was led by Mrs. Fred D. Willison. Purpose of the tour was to obtain first-hand information on how foreign-born persons become Americanized.

The club's civics-education committee is contemplating adopting a project to aid the Naturalization Court and Americanization School. But before taking action, the group decided to get source information, according to Mrs. Willison.

At present the club makes periodic contributions to the Americanization School.

Members of the committee, in addition to Mrs. Willison who joined the tour were, Mrs. G. Harris Collingwood, vice chairman; Mrs. L. H. Macomber, secretary; Mrs. Seiforde M. Stellwagen, Mrs. William A. Roberts, Mrs. Arthur B. Houghton and Mrs. James Lewald.

Tides Inn to Have Sailboat Races

A series of sailboat races will be held at the Tides Inn, Irvington, Va., on November 13 and 14. Two classes of small boats, the Penguin Class and the Thistle Class will race on the waters of the Corrotoman River, the Rappahannock River and the Chesapeake. Prizes will be given by E. A. Stephens, owner of Tides Inn.

Guests at the Inn will go aboard the committee boat, Sun Tan IV, and observe the races on the finish line.

'Race Street' Out of Money

By Richard L. Coe

"RACE STREET." RKO Radio release produced by Nat Holt. Screen play by Martin Rackin suggested by the story by Maurice Davis. J. Roy Hunt, director of Photography. Songs: "Love That Boy," by Don Raye and Gene De Paul; "I'm in a Jam With Baby," by Ray Hendorf and Moe Jerome; lyrics by Ted Koehler. Directed by Edwin L. Martin. At Keith's Theater.

THE CAST

Hal Towers, a lame boy from the wrong side of the tracks whom Dan always has befriended and whose death at the hands of Dickson's gang keeps Dan from his resolve to get out of the game . . . Henry Morgan.

Barney Runson, a police officer, who still thinks Dan is a great guy even though he knows he's a worthless thug and who tries dissuade Dan from avenging Hal's murder . . . William Bendix.

Elaine Gannin, Dan's sister for whose throbbing tones Dan builds the Turf Club, whereat it's possible to sing from the ceiling but don't ask how . . . Gale Robbins.

Monty, Easy, Al, Nick, Herbie and Dixie . . . Freedy Steele, Russell Hicks, Richard Powers, William Forest, Jim Nolan and George Turner.

Mike, Elaine's fiance . . . Cully Richards.

THE SETTING: The reserved section and boxes of a San Francisco race track, gambling hot spots, night clubs and apartments only real dough and no imagination could furnish.

THE VERDICT:

IF YOUR EARS aren't still bent back from listening to election returns, the radio tonight offers something special. . . . This is the WTOP-CBS full hour broadcast at 10 on "The Hollywood Story," a documentary which will trace the making of a single picture, "The Best Years of Our Lives." . . . This documentary unit of the Columbia chain, under supervision of Werner Michel, has gone thoroughly into all the problems faced by the Sam Goldwyn Oscar-winner: story, financing, distribution, censorship, the use of Audience Research Institute and the Supreme Court decision questioning the right of film companies to own their own theaters. . . . Writer Peter Lyon has done the script and the entire hour gives promise of telling you much about the fascinating, involved matter of making just one movie.

"HENRY V" comes back to the Hippodrome Saturday, which will give the curious a good chance to note the differences of approach between the Olivier "Hamlet," now at the Playhouse and the Little, and the first venture which started Sir Laurence Olivier into his fascinating film essays on what we all hope will be a long list of Shakespearean titles. . . . Don't count on Hank Cinque staying longer than Thanksgiving Day at the Hipp, though, for on that date the theater will present a revival of Carole Lombard and William Powell in "My Man Godfrey." . . . The memorable comedy of depression days also will be shown at the Bethesda.

THE SOUTHEAST Dramatics Association will be having auditions tonight, Thursday and Friday for "The Bad Man," Porter Browne's three-act comedy, at 8 o'clock each evening . . . Tryouts will be held at Friendship House, 619 D st. se., tonight and Friday, and at the Anacostia Methodist Church, 14th and U sts. se., tomorrow night.

"JOHNNY BELINDA," which might as well be called "The Jane Wyman Picture," resumed yesterday at the Metropolitan after a two-week stay at the Warner . . . Today the Dupont offers its first film under the Lopert et al management (with no changes in policy) . . . The picture is Carl Dreyer's "Day of Wrath," a story of witchcraft in seventeenth century Denmark.

"UNHAND ME, WOMAN!"—John Payne seems to resent Shelley Winters' affections in "Larceny," which arrives tomorrow on the Capitol screen

China's Red Chief Says He Controls Fourth of Nation

Bucharest, Romania, Nov. 2 (AP).—The chairman of the Chinese Communist Party says his armies now occupy about one fourth of China and eventually will control all of it.

Mao Tze-Tung wrote in the current issue of the Communist International Information Bureau (Cominform) bulletin that his forces now occupy 907,000 square miles of territory, or about 24.5 per cent of the total area of China.

The Communist leader said 168,000,000 persons, or about 35 per cent of China's total population, now are under Communist rule. He added that his armies have destroyed or captured 2,640,000 men of the Kuomintang (government) forces.

Mao asserted that 586 towns, or about 29 per cent of the total number of Chinese communities, had been occupied by the Communists.

He added that the Chinese Communist Party, which had 1,210,000 members in 1945, now has three million members.

Spanish-American Relations Discussed

Madrid, Spain, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Foreign Minister Alberto Martin Artajo and United States Charge D'Affairs Paul Culbertson have had an important conference on Spanish-American relations during a chamois hunt in the Gredos Mountains, well informed sources said tonight.

They talked over the possibility of restoring full diplomatic relations and of the possibility of Spain's economic rehabilitation, it was understood.

Negative Victory Gained by Spain In U. N. Committee

Paris, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Supporters of Spanish participation in United Nations activities won a negative victory in the General Assembly's Legal Committee today.

The committee approved by a vote of 21 to 14 with 13 abstentions an Argentine proposal not to bar Spain specifically from the international convention on Economic Statistics.

It was the first time any U. N. body has taken a vote favorable to Spain.

Among those voting for the Argentine proposal were Australia, Belgium, Canada, Greece and the United Kingdom. Among those voting against were Russia, her satellite states, France, Mexico and Venezuela.

The United States, New Zealand, Norway, the Netherlands and the Philippines were among those abstaining.

U. N. Defeats Russian Move to Curb Travel

Paris, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Social Committee of the United Nations General Assembly defeated today by a big majority a Russian move to limit free movement of individuals both inside countries and between different countries.

The Russian proposal was in the form of an amendment to the draft declaration on human rights. Chilean Delegate Hernan Santa Cruz called it an attempt to "turn the human rights declaration into a simple piece of paper." Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, United States delegate, said the proposed amendment was "too limiting."

Five Believed Killed In Transport Crash

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 2 (AP).—Five persons are believed to have been killed and five others seriously injured in the crash of an American transport plane tonight.

A spokesman for the United States Air Force said the transport, a C-47 Dakota en route from Northolt, near London, was coming in for a landing in darkness and rain when it crashed near the Wiesbaden air base.

Hunting in Police Car Brings Chief's Demotion

Owatonna, Minn., Nov. 2 (AP).—Chief of Police Reuben Schubert was demoted, and Patrolman Thomas Conelly was suspended today because they used a police car to hunt pheasants.

Both admitted to Mayor Kind that they used the machine to hunt pheasants outside the city limits the opening day of the season, October 23. They did not say whether they got any birds.

Austrians Reported Killed by Russians

Vienna, Austria, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Soviet guards posted on the border line between the British and Russian zones shot and killed one Austrian worker and injured another critically two days ago, Austrian police reported today.

THE SHOREHAM Blue Room made a smart move in holding over Tung Pin Soo (alias Chop Chop), the "Charlie Chan of the night clubs." Chop Chop is one of the fastest magicians we've ever seen. The other night he joined us at our table with a deck of cards. He riffled through a few tricks not much out of the ordinary and then made like a real life mystic. On one particular trick that still has us spinning he showed us a card that was supposed to be the one we chose. The card in his hand and the one in our head just didn't agree and we thought we had him. His future was ruined. He asked us to turn the card over again and sure enough the right one was there. Now whether or not the card had changed spots without help or not we don't know. Leopards aren't supposed to and we can't see why cards should, but s'help us it happened. If you're looking for a bit of magic and want to see a real showman Chop Chop's your meat.

Olsen and Joy bring a bit of movie stuff to show with their sailor and French girl routine. In fact somewhere back in the past we know that we've seen Olsen in a movie. The dance routine was very much on the celluloid musical side.

Eric Thorsen, who's sung with the St. Louis Opera Company, proves versatile in his repertoire. Everything from light opera to the old Yale Blue song. The voice is rich and we much prefer him when he sings the classics.

The music moderns in the city can prepare to blow their esthetic tops this week-end, what with Stan Kenton setting up shop for Sunday evening in the National Guard Armory. He'll be here with his whole outfit, including June Christy, to put on a combination concert and dance. Although we've never quite understood the ins and outs of this modern stuff the thing seems to be catching on with the ex-jazz hounds. They come from miles around when a genoooine modern orchestra arrives.

Helen Aimee has added a new twist to her singing at the Balalaika. She's taken to doing a catchy little dance step around the microphone while she sings the more spirited numbers. The girl has definite possibilities for bigger and better things.

Landowner Kills 2 Over Sale to Negro

St. Joseph, Mich., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—A 50-year-old son of a prominent local family shot and killed a man and his wife tonight because they sold property adjoining his to Negroes, police said.

Police said Henry Burkhard confessed that he fired three shots from a Germa .25-caliber automatic into R. C. Stevens and one into his wife in the living room of their home.

Deputy Sheriff Andrew Novikoff said Burkhard walked into the Stevens home late today and demanded to know why Stevens had sold property next to his to Negroes.

"I'll show you what I'm going to do about it," he quoted Burkhard as saying.

Burkhard fired three shots from the automatic at Stevens, killing him instantly. When Mrs. Stevens screamed, he turned and shot her in the heart.

Burkhard walked to the county jail and surrendered. He was held for investigation of murder.

4 Billions a Year Needed for Roads, U. S. Official Says

Four billion dollars a year for the next 15 years are needed for adequate streets and highways in the United States, H. S. Fairbanks, deputy commissioner of the United States Public Roads Administration, said yesterday.

Fairbanks spoke at the monthly luncheon of the American Automobile Association's District of Columbia Advisory board in the Hotel Mayflower. He said the four billions annually were needed "because we are passing into an era of higher construction costs."

Fairbanks said, "under the appropriations planned for the District there are funds for 183 miles of streets and highways. It is interesting to note that planning and construction work in the District is proceeding at a speedier rate than in the rest of the Nation.

U. S. Colony in Moscow Loses Absentee Ballots

Moscow, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—The 100 members of the American colony were just spectators in the presidential election today. They lost their votes because of delay in arranging for absentee ballots.

The most prominent member of the colony, Ambassador Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, i impatiently awaiting the end of the year so that whatever happens he can resign and return to the army.

High School Girl Missing Here

An 18-year-old Central High School senior yesterday was reported missing by her mother, who told police the girl left home Saturday at 8 p. m. to attend a Halloween party.

Listed as Arlene Deyerle, daughter of Mrs. Faye Deyerle of 1361 Irving st. nw., she was described as wearing brown slacks, a boy's white shirt, green jacket and brown shoes. Arlene is 5 feet 2 inches tall, weighs about 95 pounds and has auburn hair and blue eyes, Mrs. Deyerle told police.

Romanian Rite Bishops Reported Under Arrest

Vatican City, Nov. 2 (AP).—An unofficial Vatican source quoted the Vatican secretariat today as saying all Romanian rite bishops have been placed under arrest by authorities in Romania.

The informant said government police Friday arrested Msgr. Giulio Hossu, bishop of Cluj-Gherla; Msgr. Giovanni Suciu, apostolic administrator of Fagaras-Alba Julia; and Msgr. Basilio Aftenie, auxiliary bishop of Fagaras-Alba Julia. He said Msgr. Valerio Traiano Frentiu, bishop of Oradea-Mare, is under house arrest.

The effect of this, the informant said, was to wipe out the whole episcopate of the Romanian rite, which is approved by and subject to the Vatican. The rite flourishes principally in Transylvania, where, because of years of isolation, the Latin rites gradually were transferred to the Romanian language.

Romania recently reduced the number of Latin rite Roman Catholic bishoprics in Romania from 12 to 4.

British to Begin Von Rundstedt's Trial Next March

London, Nov. 2 (AP).—Lord Jowitt told the House of Lords today that Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt, awaiting trial on war crimes charges, once ordered Allied commandos turned over to the Nazi Gestapo.

Lord Jowitt, Lord Chancellor and Labor government leader in the upper chamber, said the British intend to start his trial in March.

Jowitt carried a photographic copy of a Von Rundstedt order issued July 21, 1942, a month before the costly Dieppe raid, which said:

"Commando troops, if captured outside real battles, have to be turned over without delay to the nearest office of the Gestapo. It does not matter whether they are in uniform or not. These measures are to serve the purpose of bringing to a quick and definite end such operations."

Real China Policy Urged by Lapham, Head of Mission

San Francisco, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Roger Lapham, chief of the American Economic Mission to China, today urged that the United States adopt a "real, affirmative policy" in China to help Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government.

Lapham said "our middle-of-the road policy over there isn't getting us anywhere." He said American policy toward China must be re-examined.

"I advocate a real affirmative policy," Lapham said. "Stick our neck out. Help those who really want to resist the Iron Curtain."

If the United States should "take the full responsibility for that aid . . . control it . . . see how it's spent both economically and militarily."

Lapham is en route to China.

Calls Election World Event

London, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—London's leading newspapers said today that the man who is elected President of the United States will hold the immediate fate of the world in his hands. They gave thanks that on foreign policy the Republican and Democratic parties are united.

"The new Chief Executive will have to shoulder responsibilities reaching far beyond his own country and the Western Hemisphere," the Daily Telegraph said.

"On his conduct of affairs will depend not merely the well-being of the United States but the hopes of establishing stability in terms of free institutions wherever they exist."

Never before, the Daily Telegraph said, has an American election commanded so much foreign attention.

"The great compulsive force in American politics at present springs from the state of the world," the Times said.

The Liberal Party organ News Chronicle said that a victory for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey was certain even though "many Americans distrust and even dislike him" as a machine politician.

RED COULDN'T HELP YOU, EH?
NO! HE ONLY MET THE FELLA ONCE —THE SAME DAY THAT DANNY MET HIM!
WHY ALL THIS BEATIN' AROUND THE BUSH? WHY DON'T YOU JUST GO UP TO THE HOSPITAL AND ASK WEEPY? OR TO THE FLAT WHERE HE LIVES—AND ASK HIS FOLKS?
BECAUSE I DON'T WANT TO RISK HAVING THE COUSIN FIND OUT THAT WE'RE LOOKIN' FOR HIM! WE MIGHT NEVER FIND HIM THEN!
I'M AFRAID YOU'LL HAVE TO TAKE THAT RISK, MICKEY—YOU'VE GOT NOTHING TO WORK ON AND YOU CAN'T AFFORD TO WASTE TIME! HIS BOAT MAY BE SAILING ANY DAY —IF IT HASN'T ALREADY!
I KNOW, SERGEANT —BUT I'LL WAIT UNTIL TOMORROW! THERE'S A CHANCE THAT DANNY MIGHT PICK UP SOMETHING!
NO, DANNY—I DIDN'T EVEN KNOW THAT WEEPY HAD A COUSIN!

Printed Card Replaces Oral Rebuke

Irving Levine of 8505 Greenwood ave., Takoma Park, Md., was walking down the right-hand side of a road the other evening when an auto pulled up alongside him, and the driver handed him a calling card.

There was a message on the card, which said:

"There are approximately 5000 people killed annually while walking on the right-hand side of the road. Why take such a chance? Walk to the left and face traffic."

At the bottom of the card was: "W. D. Taylor, 909 Greenwood ave., Takoma Park, Md."

Says District Liner Levine:* "How very much more effective—and less offensive—that was, than the usual method of yelling, 'Get outta the road, you dope'."

QUICKIE QUIZ DEPT.

Here's a spelling test suggested by Jim Wilfong, jr., of 1541 Montana ave. ne.:

When do you spell it "accessory" and when "accessary"?

STREET SCENE

When Jean Guthrie of 3222 Warder st. nw. got off her streetcar she suddenly discovered that she'd lost her wallet.

Hailing the next car, she sketched out the situation to Operator L. G. Grigsby of 155 Rhode Island ave. ne.

"All my money is in that wallet—and my identification, and important papers. And I'm sure it's still on the car ahead. Can you catch it?"

"I dunno," replied Grigsby. "I can try—but I've got to mind the traffic lights, and the people who want to get on and off."

"Do your best," implored Jean—and off they went. For a dozen blocks, it was quite a "chase," with Grigsby saving all the seconds he could, and drawing steadily closer to the car ahead.

Then the quarry missed a traffic light, and Grigsby closed in. Jean hopped off, ran forward, boarded the car she'd been on originally, and made a bee-line to her former seat.

The wallet was still on the floor beside the seat—intact.

JAY AITCH REVISITED

Our efforts to get Jay Aitch back to his rhyming have finally borne fruit. The morning mail brings:

I call my honey "golfer" and
She takes it all in fun.
For every time she wears new hose
She gets a hole in one.

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY, MAC?

Mrs. Dunwoody B. Wier (Woodward & Lothrop saleswoman No. 3783) has an unusual problem.

Some time ago, a man came into Woody's gift shop and said he'd like to buy a "housewarming gift" for a local couple.

The customer explained that he was leaving town, so the gift was selected quickly. The man took out an engraved card bearing the name Charles Hall McDowell, laid down the cash to pay for the gift, and departed.

But in his hurry, he forgot to tell Mrs. Wier to whom to send the gift.

A search of local McDowells has been fruitless. So Woody's diligent saleswoman is now tackling the problem from the other direction.

If the local couple can recognize themselves from this description, will they please contact either Mrs. Wier or their friend, Mr. McDowell?

WARM HEART, COLD FEET

A schoolteacher down in Virginia tells me that she recently asked her young pupils to write short essays on "How to Be a Good American."

One fourth-grader had a ready answer. His paper stated simply:

"To be a good American, when you sleep with somebody, do not take all of the covers."

Jack Wagner, 2603 Franklin st. ne.: I'm informed that I inadvertently omitted your name "last Friday" in giving credit for some funds raised for Children's Hospital. Have checked back for several Fridays and fail to find the item referred to—but I sure am sorry that my wool-gathering resulted in such an error. The least we can do is thank people properly for the help they've been giving the kids at the hospital. 'Scuse me, Jack.

PIED TYPE DEPT

But think it's far too tough.
For, even in the "final,"
It's plenty hard enough.

But when I bought the "bulldog"
The night I was downtown,
I found the puzzle tougher
When printed upon paper.

NEW YORK.—Merle Oberon, who returns to America this week to do a movie for RKO, bought many things during her stay in Europe. Her most expensive purchase was a rare necklace. If she were to bring it back with her, the customs duty on it would be considerable. Miss Oberon decided therefore to leave the necklace in Europe, in a safe deposit vault. She'll wear it only when she travels in Europe and other points outside the customs limits of the United States.

Orson Welles' daughter, Christopher, and Jose Ferrer's daughter, Letitia, are pupils at the Todd School in Illinois. Christopher Welles has just written a play for Letitia Ferrer, to be performed at the school. It's called "The Haughty Queen With the Bows on Her Toes."

Grover Whalen is having his portrait painted by John Carroll, instructor at the Art Students League. Carroll wanted to paint him in striped trousers and white carnation, but Whalen insisted on a dark business suit, explaining that he didn't want to be remembered only as The Great Greeter . . . Norman Thomas, fall guy at the Saints and Sinners, told the members: "I'd rather be right than President—but I am at all times ready to be both" . . . Thomas asked the guests assembled in the Waldorf's Grand Ballroom: "Are there any Thomas voters in this audience?" Four men leaped up. They were Thomas' sons and sons-in-law.

Bill Laurence of the Times, whose "How Soon Will Russia Have the A-Bomb?" which will appear in the Saturday Evening Post this week, wrote an article in 1940, called "The Atom Gives Up." It told of the discovery of Uranium 235 . . . When Laurence went to work for the Government at Oak Ridge he carried a copy of his old article in a briefcase. "You can't keep it. That is classified stuff," he was told . . . "Classified? Millions of people have seen it, I hope," said Laurence . . . "It's classified now," was the ruling. The published article was taken away from its author, each page was stamped "SECRET" and it was locked in a safe.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Line-up of the Dewey 'Team'

By Drew Pearson

The men around Dewey are an exciting, hard-working, close-knit clique who function with almost too much perfection and are loaded with calculated coordination. Here is the line-up:

Lockwood

No. 1 man—on the White House staff will be cherub-faced Paul Lockwood, the 6-foot, 4-inch personal secretary to the new Chief Executive, who saw a dream that started 14 years ago become a fact this week when his boy Tom took over.

Lockwood will become secretary to the President. He will bring to Washington a couple of dozen pipes that he puffs at all hours, a habit of working late, sleeping hardly at all, a love of good swing-music, and the greatest fund of amusing stories since Paul Porter left the White House entourage. Lockwood is a bachelor.

PRESS SECRETARY—Right behind Lockwood will be Jim Hagerty, 39-year-old former political writer of the New York Times. Hagerty didn't always love Dewey. As recently as 1942, he and Dewey said a lot of unprintable things about each other both publicly and privately, particularly when Dewey was up to his old trick of denying newspapermen's stories—a habit he hasn't completely forgotten.

PERSONAL SECRETARY—Another member of the White House staff will be tiny Lillian Rosse, Dewey's perennially tired-looking 99-pound blonde confidential secretary. A bombshell full of energy.

FINANCE EXPERT—Is ruddy-jawed Elliott Bell, able New York State superintendent of banks and former New York Times writer. Dewey and Bell met as law students at Columbia.

LEGAL ADVISER—Whip-smart young Charles D. Breitel has been counsel to Governor Dewey in Albany since 1943, is expected to have the same job with Dewey that Sam Rosenman had with Roosevelt and Clark Clifford with Truman. Breitel became assistant district attorney on Dewey's staff in the gangbusting days, became his law partner when he left the D. A.'s office in 1941, has an A-1 concept of civil liberties, a steel-trap mind, believes in throwing tough legal problems into the courts at once rather than letting administrative agencies usurp judicial powers.

BUDGET EXPERT—Is 39-year-old John E. Burton, New York State budget director, who, unlike Virginia's Senator Byrd, doesn't believe that Government expenses can be reduced merely by the traditional expedient of firing bureaucrats.

TAX EXPERT—Alger B. Chapman, head of Dewey's tax commission, is a former partner in the super-lush Washington law firm of Alvord & Alvord, which has represented the United States Chamber of Commerce and has tried to persuade Congress to ease taxes for the high-bracket boys. However, Chapman broke with the Alvord firm and is not likely to be influenced by them in writing future tax laws in Washington.

SUPERPUBLIC RELATIONS—Silken-voiced Harold Keller, who holds the title of commissioner of commerce at Albany, will probably handle high-level public relations for the new Administration. Keller is a member of the original Dewey team. When Dewey was a young racketbuster in New York, Keller, a New York criminal reporter and political writer, became press agent for the Dewey combine, helped mastermind the thousands of screaming black headlines that made Dewey a national figure.

PATRONAGE BOSS—Will be snowy-haired, cigar-chewing Ed Jaeckle, who, more than any member of the Dewey team, looks like a professional politician. Kindly, shrewd, with an amazing ability to remember names, Jaeckle resembles Roosevelt's Jim Farley.

WOMEN BRAIN-TRUSTERS—Dewey also has two able women in his top entourage. Chicago-born Mrs. Charles W. Weis, jr., Republican national committeewoman for New York, will wind up in the Dewey Cabinet in a new post—secretary of social security.

Also active on the Dewey team is Jane Todd, vice chairman of the New York State Republican committee, deputy commissioner of commerce.

BACKSTAGE ARRANGER—One of the smoothest members of the Dewey team now occupies an office far removed from the White House—Hamilton Gaddis, the town clerk of Hempstead, Long Island, and advance man for all Dewey campaigns. Suave and mustached, Gaddis looks like a dilettante, carries a portable speaker's stand with microphones attached. This special-sized stand has prevented the new President from being hidden behind more elaborate rostrums; was flown to every Dewey speech in advance. Gaddis also acts as No. 1 gumshoe boy for Dewey in checking patronage seekers.
